HALSBURY'S
Laws of England

FIFTH EDITION

Volume 49

This is volume 49 of the Fifth Edition of Halsbury's Laws of England, containing the second part of the title FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS.

Volume 49 (5th Edn), together with volume 48 (5th Edn) and volume 50 (5th Edn), replace the Fourth Edition volume 18(1) (Reissue), which may now be archived. Customers should retain the Fourth Edition volumes 49(1) (2005 Reissue), 49(2) (2004 Reissue) and 49(3) (2004 Reissue) until advised to archive them.

FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS is a new title which replaces material from the following superseded Fourth Edition titles: BANKING vol 3(1) (2005 Reissue); BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND OTHER NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS vol 4(1) (2002 Reissue); BILLS OF SALE vol 4(1) (2002 Reissue); BUILDING SOCIETIES vol 4(3) (Reissue); FRIENDLY SOCIETIES vol 19(1) (2007 Reissue); GUARANTEE AND INDEMNITY vol 20(1) (Reissue); INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT SOCIETIES vol 24 (Reissue); MONEY vol 32 (2005 Reissue). The volumes containing these superseded titles should be retained as they contain other titles not replaced by volumes 48 (5th Edn), 49 (5th Edn), and 50 (5th Edn).

For a full list of volumes comprised in a current set of Halsbury's Laws of England please see overleaf.

Fifth Edition volumes:

HOW TO USE HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND

Volumes

Each text volume of Halsbury's Laws of England contains the law on the titles contained in it as at a date stated at the front of the volume (the operative date).

Information contained in Halsbury's Laws of England may be accessed in several ways.

First, by using the tables of contents.

Each volume contains both a general Table of Contents, and a specific Table of Contents for each title contained in it. From these tables you will be directed to the relevant part of the work.

Readers should note that the current arrangement of titles can be found in the Current Service.

Secondly, by using tables of statutes, statutory instruments, cases or other materials.

If you know the name of the Act, statutory instrument or case with which your research is concerned, you should consult the Consolidated Tables of statutes, cases and so on (published as separate volumes) which will direct you to the relevant volume and paragraph. The Consolidated Tables will indicate if the volume referred to is a Fifth Edition volume.

(Each individual text volume also includes tables of those materials used as authority in that volume.)

Thirdly, by using the indexes.

If you are uncertain of the general subject area of your research, you should go to the Consolidated Index (published as separate volumes) for reference to the relevant volume(s) and paragraph(s). The Consolidated Index will indicate if the volume referred to is a Fifth Edition volume.

(Each individual text volume also includes an index to the material contained therein.)

Updating publications

The text volumes of Halsbury's Laws should be used in conjunction with the annual Cumulative Supplement and the monthly Noter-Up.

The annual Cumulative Supplement

The Supplement gives details of all changes between the operative date of the text volume and the operative date of the Supplement. It is arranged in the same volume, title and paragraph order as the text volumes. Developments affecting particular points of law are noted to the relevant paragraph(s) of the text volumes. As from the commencement of the Fifth Edition, the Supplement will clearly distinguish between Fourth and Fifth Edition titles.

For narrative treatment of material noted in the Cumulative Supplement, go to the Annual Abridgment volume for the relevant year.

The Noter-Up

The Noter-Up is contained in the Current Service Noter-Up booklet, issued monthly and noting changes since the publication of the annual Cumulative Supplement. Also arranged in the same volume, title and paragraph order as the text volumes, the Noter-Up follows the style of the Cumulative Supplement. As from the commencement of the Fifth Edition, the Noter-Up will clearly distinguish between Fourth and Fifth Edition titles.

For narrative treatment of material noted in the Noter-Up, go to the relevant Monthly Review.

NOTE 1. A general list of the abbreviations of law reports and other sources used in this work can be found at the beginning of vol 54(1) (Reissue) Consolidated Table of Cases.

NOTE 2. Where references are made to other publications, the volume number precedes and the page number follows the name of the publication; eg the reference '12 Forms & Precedents (5th Edn) 44' refers to volume 12 of the Encyclopaedia of Forms and Precedents, page 44.

NOTE 3. An English statute is cited by short title or, where there is no short title, by regnal year and chapter number together with the name by which it is commonly known or a description of its subject matter and date. In the case of a foreign statute, the mode of citation generally follows the style of citation in use in the country concerned with the addition, where necessary, of the name of the country in parentheses.

NOTE 4. A statutory instrument is cited by short title, if any, followed by the year and number, or, if unnumbered, the date.

2. FINANCIAL SERVICES REGULATION

(9) SPECIALIST AREAS

(i) Control of Business Transfers

590. Control of business transfers. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 provides that no insurance business transfer scheme[1] or banking business transfer scheme[2] is to have effect unless an order sanctioning the scheme[3] has been made in relation to it[4]. At the date at which this volume states the law, this provision had been brought into force in relation to insurance business transfer schemes only[5].

1 As to insurance business transfer schemes see PARA 591. See also the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Ch 18. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

2 As to banking business transfer schemes see PARA 592.

3 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 111(1): see PARA 594.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 104. Section 104 has been brought into force for the purpose of insurance business transfer schemes only: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Commencement No 7) Order 2001, SI 2001/3538, art 2(1), (2).

The Treasury may by regulations: (1) provide for prescribed provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VII (ss 104–117) to have effect in relation to prescribed cases with such modifications as may be prescribed; (2) make such amendments to any of those statutory provisions as it considers appropriate for the more effective operation of that or any other provision relating to the control of business transfers: s 117. 'Prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Treasury: s 417(1). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Motor Insurance) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2403, have been made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 117 which, among other things, amended Sch 12 para 6 (see PARA 595). As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

5 See note 4.

591. Insurance business transfer schemes. A scheme is an insurance business transfer scheme if it: (1) satisfies one of the conditions described below[1]; (2) results in the business transferred being carried on from an establishment[2] of the transferee in an EEA state[3]; and (3) is not an excluded scheme[4]. The conditions are that:

(a) the whole or part of the business carried on in one or more member states by a UK authorised person[5] who has permission to effect or carry out contracts of insurance[6] (the 'authorised person concerned') is to be transferred to another body (the 'transferee')[7];

(b) the whole or part of the business, so far as it consists of reinsurance[8], carried on in the United Kingdom through an establishment there by an EEA firm which is an insurance undertaking qualifying for authorisation[9] (the 'authorised person concerned') is to be transferred to another body (the 'transferee')[10];

(c) the whole or part of the business carried on in the United Kingdom by an authorised person who is neither a UK authorised person nor an EEA firm but who has permission to effect or carry out contracts of insurance (the 'authorised person concerned') is to be transferred to another body (the 'transferee')[11].

A scheme is an excluded scheme for these purposes if it falls within any of the following cases:

(i) Case 1 is where the authorised person concerned is a friendly society[12];

(ii) Case 2 is where: (A) the authorised person concerned is a UK authorised person; (B) the authorised person is not a reinsurance undertaking[13]; (C) the business to be transferred under the scheme is business which consists of the effecting or carrying out of contracts of reinsurance in one or more EEA states other than the United Kingdom; and (D) the scheme has been approved by a court in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom or by the host state regulator[14];

(iii) Case 3 is where: (A) the authorised person concerned is a UK authorised person; (B) the business to be transferred under the scheme is carried on in one or more countries or territories (none of which is an EEA state) and does not include policies of insurance against risks arising in an EEA state; and (C) the scheme has been approved by a court in a country or territory other than an EEA state or by the authority responsible for the supervision of that business in a country or territory in which it is carried on;

(iv) Case 4 is where (A) the business to be transferred under the scheme is the whole of the business of the authorised person concerned; (B) all the policyholders[15] are controllers[16] of the firm or of firms within the same group[17] as the firm which is the transferee; and (C) all of the policyholders who will be affected by the transfer have consented to it;

(v) Case 5 is where (A) the business of the authorised person concerned consists solely of the effecting or carrying out of contracts of reinsurance; (B) the business to be transferred is the whole or part of that business; (C) the scheme does not fall within Case 4; (D) all of the policyholders who will be affected by the transfer have consented to it; and (E) a certificate has been obtained[18] in relation to the proposed transfer[19].

1 Ie the conditions set out in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(2): see the text and notes 4–10.

The expression 'scheme' has a broad meaning and includes any arrangement the predominant purpose of which is to transfer an insurance business transfer: see Re the Standard Life Assurance Company [2007] SCLR 581.

2 'Establishment' means, in relation to a person, his head office or a branch of his: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(9).

3 As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(1). As to excluded schemes see the text and notes 12–19. See also the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Ch 18. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

5 'UK authorised person' means a body which is an authorised person and which: (1) is incorporated in the United Kingdom; or (2) is an unincorporated association formed under the law of any part of the United Kingdom: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(8). As to authorised persons see PARA 314. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

6 As to the meaning of 'contracts of insurance' see PARA 351 note 13.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(2)(a).

8 In the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, references to 'reinsurance' are to be read with s 22 and Sch 2 (see PARA 84 et seq): s 424(1)(b).

9 Ie an EEA firm falling within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 3 para 5(d) (see PARA 315 note 1) and qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 (see PARA 314 et seq).

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(2)(b) (amended by SI 2007/3253).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(2)(c).

12 'Friendly society' means an incorporated or registered friendly society: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 417(1).

13 Ie a reinsurance undertaking within the meaning of the Reinsurance Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/68 (OJ L323, 9.12.2005, p 1) on reinsurance and amending EEC Council Directives 73/239, 92/49 as well as EC Directives 98/78 and 2002/83) art 2.1(c).

14 As to the meaning of 'host state regulator' see PARA 323 note 10.

15 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, 'policyholder', in relation to a contract of insurance, has such meaning as the Treasury may by order specify: s 424(2). The Treasury has ordered that, for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 424(2), 'policyholder' means the person who for the time being is the legal holder of the policy, and includes any person to whom, under the policy, a sum is due, a periodic payment is payable or any other benefit is to be provided or to whom such a sum, payment or benefit is contingently due, payable or to be provided: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Meaning of 'Policy' and 'Policyholder') Order 2001, SI 2001/2362, art 3. As to the meaning of 'policy' see PARA 595 note 13. As to orders made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

16 In the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (except Pt XVIII Ch IA (ss 301A–301G): see PARA 725 et seq), 'controller', in relation to an undertaking ('A'), means a person who falls within any of the following cases, namely where the person: (1) holds 10% or more of the shares in A; (2) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of A by virtue of his shareholding in A; (3) holds 10% or more of the shares in a parent undertaking ('P') of A; (4) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of P by virtue of his shareholding in P; (5) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, 10% or more of the voting power in A; (6) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of A by virtue of his voting power in A; (7) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, 10% or more of the voting power in P; or (8) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of P by virtue of his voting power in P: s 422(1), (2) (s 422(1) amended by SI 2007/126). For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 422(2), the 'person' means: (a) the person; (b) any of the person's associates; or (c) the person and any of his associates: s 422(3). 'Associate', in relation to a person ('H') holding shares in an undertaking ('C') or entitled to exercise or control the exercise of voting power in relation to another undertaking ('D'), means: (i) the spouse or civil partner of H; (ii) a child or stepchild of H (if under 18); (iii) the trustee of any settlement under which H has a life interest in possession; (iv) an undertaking of which H is a director; (v) a person who is an employee or partner of H; (vi) if H is an undertaking: (A) a director of H; (B) a subsidiary undertaking of H; (C) a director or employee of such a subsidiary undertaking; and (vii) if H has with any other person an agreement or arrangement with respect to the acquisition, holding or disposal of shares or other interests in C or D or under which they undertake to act together in exercising their voting power in relation to C or D, that other person: s 422(4) (amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 Sch 27 para 165). As to the meanings of 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' see PARA 351 note 32. For the purposes of head (iii) above, 'settlement' includes any disposition or arrangement under which property is held on trust (or subject to a comparable obligation): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 422(5). 'Shares', in relation to an undertaking with a share capital, means allotted shares; in relation to an undertaking with capital but no share capital, means rights to share in the capital of the undertaking; in relation to an undertaking without capital, means interests conferring any right to share in the profits, or liability to contribute to the losses, of the undertaking; or giving rise to an obligation to contribute to the debts or expenses of the undertaking in the event of a winding up: s 422(6). 'Voting power', in relation to an undertaking which does not have general meetings at which matters are decided by the exercise of voting rights, means the right under the constitution of the undertaking to direct the overall policy of the undertaking or alter the terms of its constitution: s 422(7). The Treasury may by order amend s 422 by varying, or removing, any of the cases in which a person is treated as being a controller of a person or by adding a case: s 192(e). No order is to be made under s 192(e) unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 429(1)(a).

17 As to the meaning of 'group' see PARA 351 note 37.

18 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 2: see PARA 595.

19 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(3) (amended by SI 2007/3253). The parties to a scheme which falls within Case 2, 3, 4 or 5 may apply to the court for an order sanctioning the scheme as if it were an insurance business transfer scheme: s 105(4) (amended by SI 2007/3253).

If the scheme involves a compromise or arrangement falling within the Companies Act 2006 Pt 27 (ss 902–941) (mergers and divisions of public companies), the provisions of Pt 27 (and Pt 26 (ss 895–901)) (see COMPANIES) apply accordingly but this does not affect the operation of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VII (ss 104–117) in relation to the scheme: s 105(5) (substituted by SI 2008/948).

592. Banking business transfer schemes. A scheme is a banking business transfer scheme if it: (1) satisfies one of the conditions described below[1]; (2) is one under which the whole or part of the business to be transferred includes the accepting of deposits; and (3) is not an excluded scheme[2]. The conditions are that:

(a) the whole or part of the business carried on by a UK authorised person[3] who has permission to accept deposits (the 'authorised person concerned') is to be transferred to another body (the 'transferee')[4];

(b) the whole or part of the business carried on in the United Kingdom by an authorised person who is not a UK authorised person but who has permission to accept deposits (the 'authorised person concerned') is to be transferred to another body which will carry it on in the United Kingdom (the 'transferee')[5].

A scheme is an excluded scheme for these purposes if: (i) the authorised person concerned is a building society[6] or a credit union[7]; or (ii) the scheme is a compromise or arrangement to which the statutory provisions relating to mergers and divisions of public companies[8] applies[9].

1 Ie the conditions set out in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(2): see the text and notes 3–5.

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(1). As to excluded schemes see the text and notes 6–9.

3 As to the meaning of 'UK authorised person' see PARA 591 note 5; definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(5).

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(2)(a). For the purposes of s 106(2)(a) (see head (a) in the text), it is immaterial whether or not the business to be transferred is carried on in the United Kingdom: s 106(4). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(2)(b).

6 'Building society' has the meaning given in the Building Societies Act 1986 (see PARA 1856): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(6).

7 'Credit union' means a credit union within the meaning of: (1) the Credit Unions Act 1979 (see PARA 2402); (2) the Credit Unions (Northern Ireland) Order 1985, SI 1985/1205 (NI 12): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(7).

8 Ie the Companies Act 2006 Pt 27 (ss 902–941): see COMPANIES.

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 106(3) (amended by SI 2008/948).

593. Application for an order sanctioning a business transfer scheme. An application may be made to the High Court for an order sanctioning an insurance business transfer scheme[1] or a banking business transfer scheme[2]. An application may be made by: (1) the authorised person[3] concerned; (2) the transferee; or (3) both[4]. The application must be made: (a) if the authorised person concerned and the transferee are registered or have their head offices in the same jurisdiction, to the court in that jurisdiction; (b) if the authorised person concerned and the transferee are registered or have their head offices in different jurisdictions, to the court in either jurisdiction; (c) if the transferee is not registered in the United Kingdom[5] and does not have his head office there, to the court which has jurisdiction in relation to the authorised person concerned[6].

The Treasury[7] may by regulations impose requirements on applicants under the provisions described above[8], and the court may not determine an application[9] if the applicant has failed to comply with prescribed[10] requirements[11]. The regulations may, in particular, include provision: (i) as to the persons to whom, and periods within which, notice of an application must be given; (ii) enabling the court to waive a requirement of the regulations in prescribed circumstances[12].

On an application[13], the following are also entitled to be heard: (A) the Financial Services Authority; and (B) any person (including an employee of the authorised person concerned or of the transferee) who alleges that he would be adversely affected by the carrying out of the scheme[14].

1 As to insurance business transfer schemes see PARA 591. An application under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107 in respect of an insurance business transfer scheme must be accompanied by a report on the terms of the scheme (a 'scheme report'): s 109(1). A scheme report may be made only by a person: (1) appearing to the Financial Services Authority to have the skills necessary to enable him to make a proper report; and (2) nominated or approved for the purpose by the Authority: s 109(2). A scheme report must be made in a form approved by the Authority: s 109(3). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Ch 18. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107(1), (4). As to banking business transfer schemes see PARA 592. An objector to such an application, which generally involves a change in the legal rights of members and/or creditors of the applicant, has no right to his costs, the right order being no order as to costs: Re Alliance Assurance Co Ltd; Re British Engine Insurance Ltd [2006] EWHC 2947 (Ch), [2006] All ER (D) 196 (Oct).

3 As to authorised persons see PARA 314.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107(2).

5 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107(3).

7 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 108(1). As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.

An applicant under s 107 (see the text and notes 1–6) for an order sanctioning an insurance business transfer scheme (the 'scheme') must comply with the following requirements (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 3(1)):

(1) a notice stating that the application has been made must be: (a) published (i) in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes; (ii) in two national newspapers in the United Kingdom; and (iii) where, as regards any policy (other than a contract of reinsurance) included in the proposed transfer, an EEA state other than the United Kingdom is the state of the commitment or the state in which the risk is situated, in two national newspapers in that EEA state; and (iv) where, as regards any policy included in the proposed transfer which evidences a contract of reinsurance, an EEA state other than the United Kingdom is the state in which the establishment of the policyholder to which the policy relates is situated at the date when the contract was entered into, in one business newspaper which is published or circulated in that EEA State; and (b) sent to every policyholder of the parties (reg 3(2) (amended by SI 2007/3255));

(2) the notices mentioned in head (1) above must be approved by the Authority prior to publication (or, as the case may be, being sent), and must contain the address from which the documents mentioned in head (3) below may be obtained (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 3(3));

(3) a copy of the report and a statement setting out the terms of the scheme and containing a summary of the report must be given free of charge to any person who requests them (reg 3(4));

(4) a copy of the application, the report and the statement mentioned in head (3) above must be given free of charge to the Authority (reg 3(5));

(5) in the case of any such scheme as is mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 105(5) (see PARA 591), copies of the documents listed in the Companies Act 2006 ss 910(1), 911(3), 925(1), 926(3) (formerly the Companies Act 1985 Sch 15B para 6(1)) (see COMPANIES) or in the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), Sch 15B para 6(1) (application of provisions about compromises and arrangements to mergers and divisions of public companies) must be given to the Authority by the beginning of the period referred to in the Companies Act 2006 ss 908, 909, 911, 912, 923–927 (formerly the Companies Act 1985 Sch 15B para 3(e)) (see COMPANIES) or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), Sch 15B para 3(e) (see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 3(6)).

'State of the commitment' and 'state in which the risk is situated' have the meanings given by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 6 (see PARA 595): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 1(2). As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1. As to the meaning of 'reinsurance' see PARA 591 note 8.

An applicant under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107 for an order sanctioning a banking business transfer scheme (the 'scheme') must comply with the following requirements (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 5(1)):

(A) a notice stating that the application has been made must be published in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes, and in two national newspapers in the United Kingdom (reg 5(2));

(B) the notice mentioned in head (A) above must be approved by the Authority prior to its publication, and must contain the address from which the statement mentioned in head (C) below may be obtained (reg 5(3));

(C) a statement setting out the terms of the scheme must be given free of charge to any person who requests it (reg 5(4));

(D) copies of the application and the statement mentioned in head (iii) above must be given free of charge to the Authority (reg 5(5)).

9 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107: see the text and notes 1–6.

10 'Prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Treasury: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 417(1). See notes 8, 11.

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 108(2). The court may not determine an application under s 107 (see the text and notes 1–6) for an order sanctioning an insurance business transfer scheme: (1) where the applicant has failed to comply with the requirements in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 3(2), (3), (6) (see note 8); and (2) until a period of not less than 21 days has elapsed since the Authority was given the documents mentioned in reg 3(5) (see note 8): reg 4(1). The court may not determine an application under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 107 for an order sanctioning a banking business transfer scheme: (a) where the applicant has failed to comply with the requirements in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 5(2), (3) (see note 8); and (b) until a period of not less than 21 days has elapsed since the Authority was given the documents mentioned in reg 5(5) (see note 8): reg 6(1).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 108(3). Certain of the requirements as to publication in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, regs 3, 5 (see note 8) may be waived by the court in such circumstances and subject to such conditions as the court considers appropriate: see regs 4(2), 6(2) (reg 4(2) amended by SI 2007/3255). However the requirement in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625, reg 3(2)(a)(iv) (see note 8 head (1)(a)(iv)) must be waived where an applicant demonstrates that he has notified all policyholders of contracts of reinsurance: reg 4(3) (added by SI 2007/3255).

594. Conditions to be met before business transfer schemes are sanctioned. The following conditions must be satisfied before the court may make an order[1] sanctioning an insurance business transfer scheme[2] or a banking business transfer scheme[3]. The court must be satisfied that: (1) the appropriate certificates have been obtained[4]; (2) the transferee has the authorisation required (if any) to enable the business, or part, which is to be transferred to be carried on in the place to which it is to be transferred (or will have it before the scheme takes effect)[5]. The court must consider that, in all the circumstances of the case, it is appropriate to sanction the scheme[6].

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 111(1). As to banking business transfer schemes see PARA 592.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 111(2)(a). Certificates are obtained in accordance with Sch 12 Pts I, II: see PARAS 595–596.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 111(2)(b).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 111(3). A scheme can be sanctioned even though it varies the contractual rights of customers or policyholders: see Re the Standard Life Assurance Company [2007] SCLR 581.

595. Certificates for insurance business transfer schemes. The appropriate certificates which must be obtained[1] before the court sanctions an insurance business transfer scheme[2] are:

(1) a certificate as to margin of solvency[3] (that is to say, the excess of the value of the assets of the transferee over the amount of its liabilities[4]), given by the relevant authority[5], or in a case where there is no relevant authority, by the Financial Services Authority[6];

(2) if the authorised person concerned is a UK authorised person[7] which has received authorisation[8] from the Authority, and the establishment from which the business is to be transferred under the proposed insurance business transfer scheme is in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom[9], a certificate as to consent[10];

(3) if (a) the authorised person concerned has received authorisation[11] from the Authority; (b) the proposed transfer relates to business which consists of the effecting or carrying out of contracts of long-term insurance[12]; and (c) as regards any policy[13] which is included in the proposed transfer and which evidences a contract of insurance[14] (other than reinsurance[15]), an EEA state other than the United Kingdom is the state of the commitment[16], a certificate as to long-term business[17];

(4) if (a) the authorised person concerned has received authorisation[18] from the Authority; (b) the business to which the proposed insurance business transfer scheme relates is business which consists of the effecting or carrying out of contracts of general insurance[19]; and (c) as regards any policy which is included in the proposed transfer and which evidences a contract of insurance (other than reinsurance), the risk is situated in an EEA state[20] other than the United Kingdom, a certificate as to general business[21];

(5) if (a) the authorised person concerned has received authorisation[22] from the Authority; and (b) the proposed transfer is to a branch or agency, in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom, authorised under the same provision[23], certificates as to legality and as to consent[24].

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 1(1)(a), 2.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 2(5).
5 A certificate given under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 1(a) by the relevant authority is one certifying that, taking the proposed transfer into account: (1) the transferee possesses, or will possess before the scheme takes effect, the necessary margin of solvency; or (2) there is no necessary margin of solvency applicable to the transferee: Sch 12 para 2(2). 'Relevant authority' means: (a) if the transferee is an EEA firm falling within Sch 3 para 5(d) or (da) (see PARA 315 note 1), its home state regulator; (b) if the transferee is a non-EEA branch, the competent authorities of the EEA state in which the transferee is situated or, where appropriate, the competent authorities of an EEA state which supervise the state of solvency of the entire business of the transferee's agencies and branches within the EEA in accordance with the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3) on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of direct insurance other than life assurance) art 26 or the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1) concerning life assurance) art 56; (c) if the transferee is a Swiss general insurer, the authority responsible in Switzerland for supervising persons who effect or carry out contracts of insurance; (d) if the transferee is an authorised person not falling within head (a), (b) or (c) above, the Financial Services Authority: Sch 12 para 2(6) (amended by SI 2007/3253). As to the meanings of 'EEA firm', 'EEA state' and 'home state regulator' see PARA 315 note 1. As to authorised persons see PARA 314. As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. 'Competent authorities' has the same meaning as in the Insurance Directives: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 2(7A) (added by SI 2007/3253). As to the meaning of 'Insurance Directives' see PARA 86 note 6. 'Non-EEA branch means' a branch or agency which has received authorisation under the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3)) art 23 or the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1)) art 51: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 2(9) (added by SI 2007/3253). 'Swiss general insurer' means a body whose head office is in Switzerland, which has permission to carry on regulated activities consisting of the effecting and carrying out of contracts of general insurance, and whose permission is not restricted to the effecting or carrying out of contracts of reinsurance: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 2(8). As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq. For the purposes of Sch 12 para 2(6), any reference to a transferee of a particular description includes a reference to a transferee who will be of that description if the proposed scheme takes effect: Sch 12 para 2(7). 'Necessary margin of solvency' means the margin of solvency required in relation to the transferee, taking the proposed transfer into account, under the law which it is the responsibility of the relevant authority to apply: Sch 12 para 2(4).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 2(1). A certificate given by the Financial Services Authority is one certifying that the Authority has received from the authority which it considers to be the authority responsible for supervising persons who effect or carry out contracts of insurance in the place to which the business is to be transferred that, taking the proposed transfer into account: (1) the transferee possesses or will possess before the scheme takes effect the margin of solvency required under the law applicable in that place; or (2) there is no such margin of solvency applicable to the transferee: Sch 12 para 2(3).

7 As to the meaning of 'UK authorised person' see PARA 358 note 3.

9 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 1(1)(b), (2), 3 (Sch 12 para 1(2) amended by SI 2004/3379). A certificate as to consent is one given by the Authority and certifying that the host state regulator has been notified of the proposed scheme and that: (1) that regulator has responded to the notification; or (2) it has not responded but the period of three months beginning with the notification has elapsed: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 3. As to the meaning of 'host state regulator' see PARA 323 note 10.

11 Ie under the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1)) art 4 or art 51.

12 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, references to 'contracts of long-term insurance' are to be read with s 22 and Sch 2 (see PARA 84 et seq): s 424(1)(c).

13 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, 'policy', in relation to a contract of insurance, has such meaning as the Treasury may by order specify: s 424(2). The Treasury has ordered that, for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 424(2), 'policy' means, as the context requires, a contract of insurance, including one under which an existing liability has already accrued, or any instrument evidencing such a contract: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Meaning of 'Policy' and 'Policyholder') Order 2001, SI 2001/2362, art 2. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

15 As to references to 'contracts of reinsurance' see PARA 591 note 8.

16 'State of the commitment', in relation to a commitment entered into at any date, means: (1) if the policyholder is an individual, the state in which he had his habitual residence at that date; (2) if the policyholder is not an individual, the state in which the establishment of the policyholder to which the commitment relates was situated at that date: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 6(1). As to the meaning of 'policyholder' see PARA 591 note 15. 'Commitment' means a commitment represented by contracts of insurance of a prescribed class: Sch 12 para 6(2). 'Prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Treasury: s 417(1). See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Business Transfers) (Requirements on Applicants) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3625; and PARA 593. As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.

17 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 1(1)(c), (3), 4 (Sch 12 para 1(3) amended by SI 2004/3379; SI 2007/3253). A certificate as to long-term business is one given by the Authority and certifying that the authority responsible for supervising persons who effect or carry out contracts of insurance in the state of the commitment has been notified of the proposed scheme and that: (1) that authority has consented to the proposed scheme; or (2) the period of three months beginning with the notification has elapsed and that authority has not refused its consent: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 4.

18 Ie under the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3)) art 6 or art 23.

19 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, references to 'contracts of general insurance' are to be read with s 22 and Sch 2 (see PARA 84 et seq): s 424(1)(d).

20 References to the EEA state in which a risk is situated are: (1) if the insurance relates to a building or to a building and its contents (so far as the contents are covered by the same policy), to the EEA state in which the building is situated; (2) if the insurance relates to a vehicle of any type, to the EEA state of registration; (3) in the case of policies of a duration of four months or less covering travel or holiday risks (whatever the class concerned), to the EEA state in which the policyholder took out the policy; (4) in a case not covered by heads (1)–(3) above: (a) if the policyholder is an individual, to the EEA state in which he has his habitual residence at the date when the contract is entered into; and (b) otherwise, to the EEA state in which the establishment of the policyholder to which the policy relates is situated at that date: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 6(3). If the insurance relates to a vehicle dispatched from one EEA state to another, in respect of the period of 30 days beginning with the day on which the purchaser accepts delivery a reference to the EEA state in which a risk is situated is a reference to the state of destination (and not, as provided by head (2) above, to the state of registration): Sch 12 para 6(4) (added by SI 2007/2403).

21 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 1(1)(d), (4), 5 (Sch 12 para 1(4) amended by SI 2007/3253). A certificate as to general business is one given by the Authority and certifying that the authority responsible for supervising persons who effect or carry out contracts of insurance in the EEA state in which the risk is situated has been notified of the proposed scheme and that: (1) that authority has consented to the proposed scheme; or (2) the period of three months beginning with the notification has elapsed and that authority has not refused its consent: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 5.

22 Ie under the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3)) art 23 or the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1)) art 51.

24 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 1(1)(e), (5), 5A (added by SI 2007/3253). The relevant certificates are to be given, in the case of the certificate as to consent, by the Authority; and, in the case of the certificate as to legality, by the relevant authority: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 5A(1) (as so added). A certificate as to consent is one certifying that the relevant authority has been notified of the proposed scheme and that (1) the relevant authority has consented to the proposed scheme; or (2) the period of three months beginning with the notification has elapsed and that relevant authority has not refused its consent: Sch 12 para 5A(2) (as so added). A certificate as to legality is one certifying that the law of the EEA state in which the transferee is set up permits such a transfer: Sch 12 para 5A(3) (as so added). For these purposes, 'relevant authority' means the competent authorities (within the meaning of the Insurance Directives) of the EEA state in which the transferee is set up: Sch 12 para 5A(4) (as so added).

596. Certificates for banking business transfer schemes. The appropriate certificates which must be obtained[1] before the court sanctions a banking business transfer scheme[2] are: (1) a certificate as to financial resources[3]; and (2)

if the authorised person[4] concerned or the transferee is an EEA firm[5], a certificate as to consent of the home state regulator[6].

1 Ie for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 111(2): see PARA 594.
2 As to banking business transfer schemes see PARA 592.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 7(1)(a), 8. A certificate as to financial resources is one given by the relevant authority and certifying that, taking the proposed transfer into account, the transferee possesses, or will possess before the scheme takes effect, adequate financial resources: Sch 12 para 8(1). 'Relevant authority' means: (1) if the transferee is a person with a Part IV permission (see PARA 348) or with permission under Sch 4 (see PARAS 314, 319), the Financial Services Authority; (2) if the transferee is an EEA firm falling within Sch 3 para 5(b) (see PARA 315 note 1), its home state regulator; (3) if the transferee does not fall within head (1) or head (2) above, the authority responsible for the supervision of the transferee's business in the place in which the transferee has its head office: Sch 12 para 8(2). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to the meaning of 'EEA firm' see PARA 315 note 1. As to the meaning of 'home state regulator' see PARA 315 note 1. For the purposes of Sch 12 para 8(2), any reference to a transferee of a particular description of person includes a reference to a transferee who will be of that description if the proposed banking business transfer scheme takes effect: Sch 12 para 8(3).
4 As to authorised persons see PARA 314.
5 Ie falling within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 3 para 5(b): see PARA 315 note 1.
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 paras 7(1), (2), 9. A certificate as to consent of the home state regulator is one given by the Authority and certifying that the home state regulator of the authorised person concerned or of the transferee has been notified of the proposed scheme and that: (1) the home state regulator has responded to the notification; or (2) the period of three months beginning with the notification has elapsed: Sch 12 para 9.

597. Effect of order sanctioning business transfer scheme. If the court makes an order[1], it may by that or any subsequent order make such provision (if any) as it thinks fit[2]:

(1) for the transfer to the transferee of the whole or any part of the undertaking concerned and of any property[3] or liabilities[4] of the authorised person[5] concerned[6];
(2) for the allotment or appropriation by the transferee of any shares[7], debentures[8], policies or other similar interests in the transferee which under the scheme are to be allotted or appropriated to or for any other person[9];
(3) for the continuation by (or against) the transferee of any pending legal proceedings by (or against) the authorised person concerned[10];
(4) with respect to such incidental, consequential and supplementary matters as are, in its opinion, necessary to secure that the scheme is fully and effectively carried out[11].

If an order[12] makes provision for the transfer of property or liabilities, the property is transferred to and vests in, and the liabilities are transferred to and become liabilities of, the transferee as a result of the order[13]. However, if any property or liability included in the order is governed by the law of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom[14], the order may require the authorised person concerned, if the transferee so requires, to take all necessary steps for securing that the transfer to the transferee of the property or liability is fully effective under the law of that country or territory[15]. Property transferred[16] may, if the court so directs, vest in the transferee free from any charge[17] which is (as a result of the scheme) to cease to have effect[18]. An order[19] which makes provision for the transfer of property is to be treated as an instrument of transfer[20].

If the court makes an order[21] in relation to an insurance business transfer scheme[22], it may by that or any subsequent order make such provision (if any) as it thinks fit: (a) for dealing with the interests of any person who, within such time and in such manner as the court may direct, objects to the scheme; (b) for the dissolution, without winding up, of the authorised person concerned; (c) for the reduction, on such terms and subject to such conditions (if any) as it thinks fit, of the benefits payable under any description of policy[23], or policies generally, entered into by the authorised person concerned and transferred as a result of the scheme[24]. If, in the case of an insurance business transfer scheme, the authorised person concerned is not an EEA firm[25], it is, for certain purposes[26], immaterial that the law applicable to any of the contracts of insurance[27] included in the transfer is the law of an EEA state[28] other than the United Kingdom[29].

The transferee must, if an insurance or banking business transfer scheme[30] is sanctioned by the court, deposit two office copies of the order with the Financial Services Authority[31] within ten days of the making of the order[32].

598. Appointment of an actuary in relation to the reduction of benefits. If an order[1] has been made sanctioning an insurance business transfer scheme[2] or a banking business transfer scheme[3], the court making the order may, on the application of the Financial Services Authority[4], appoint an independent actuary: (1) to investigate the business transferred under the scheme; and (2) to report to the Authority on any reduction in the benefits payable under policies entered into by the authorised person[5] concerned that, in the opinion of the actuary, ought to be made[6].

599. Rights of certain policyholders in insurance business transfer scheme. The provisions described below[1] apply in relation to an insurance business transfer scheme[2] if: (1) the authorised person[3] concerned is an authorised person other than an EEA firm[4] qualifying for authorisation[5]; (2) the court has made an order[6] sanctioning the scheme; and (3) an EEA state[7] other than the United Kingdom[8] is, as regards any policy[9] included in the transfer which evidences a contract of insurance (other than a contract of reinsurance)[10], the state of the commitment[11] or the EEA state in which the risk is situated[12] (the 'EEA state concerned')[13].

The court must direct that notice of the making of the order, or the execution of any instrument, giving effect to the transfer must be published by the transferee in the EEA state concerned[14]. Such a notice must specify such period as the court may direct as the period during which the policyholder[15] may exercise any right which he has to cancel the policy[16]. The order or instrument[17] does not bind the policyholder if: (a) the notice required is not published; or (b) the policyholder cancels the policy during the period specified in the notice[18]. The law of the EEA state concerned governs: (i) whether the policyholder has a right to cancel the policy; and (ii) the conditions, if any, subject to which any such right may be exercised[19].

601. Insurance business transfers outside the United Kingdom. Provision is made with respect to certificates which the Financial Services Authority[1] may issue in relation to insurance business transfers[2] taking place outside the United Kingdom[3].

The provisions described below[4] apply to a proposal to execute under provisions corresponding to Part VII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[5] in a country or territory other than the United Kingdom an instrument transferring all the rights and obligations of the transferor under general or long-term insurance policies[6], or under such descriptions of such policies as may be specified in the instrument, to the transferee if any of the following conditions[7] is met in relation to it[8]. The conditions are:

(1) the transferor is an EEA firm[9] and the transferee is an authorised person[10] whose margin of solvency[11] is supervised by the Authority[12];

(2) the transferor is a company authorised in an EEA state[13] other than the United Kingdom[14] and the transferee is a UK authorised person[15] which has received authorisation[16];

(3) the transferor is a Swiss general insurer[17] and the transferee is a UK authorised person which has received authorisation[18].

In relation to such a proposed transfer, the Authority may, if it is satisfied that the transferee possesses the necessary margin of solvency[19], issue a certificate to that effect[20].

19 'Necessary margin of solvency' means the margin of solvency which the transferee, taking the proposed transfer into account, is required by the Authority to maintain: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 10(6).

20 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 para 10(5).

602. Effect of insurance business transfers authorised in other EEA states. The provisions described below[1] apply if, as a result of an authorised transfer[2], an EEA firm[3] transfers to another body all its rights and obligations under any UK policies[4] and if, as a result of an authorised transfer[5], a company authorised in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom[6] transfers to another body all its rights and obligations under any UK policies[7].

If appropriate notice[8] of the execution of an instrument giving effect to the transfer is published, the instrument has the effect in law: (1) of transferring to the transferee all the transferor's rights and obligations under the UK policies to which the instrument applies; and (2) if the instrument so provides, of securing the continuation by or against the transferee of any legal proceedings by or against the transferor which relate to those rights and obligations[9].

1 Ie the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116.

2 For these purposes, 'authorised transfer' means a transfer authorised in the home state of the EEA firm in accordance with: (1) the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1) concerning life assurance) art 14; (2) the Third Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 92/49 (OJ L228, 11.8.92, p 1) on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of direct insurance other than life assurance, and amending EC Directives 73/239 and 88/357) art 12; or (3) the Reinsurance Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/68 (OJ L323, 9.12.2005, p 1) on reinsurance and amending EEC Council Directives 73/239, 92/49 as well as EC Directives 98/78 and 2002/83) art 18: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(5)(a) (amended by SI 2004/3379; SI 2007/3253). As to the meaning of 'EEA firm' see PARA 315 note 1.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(1) (amended by SI 2007/3253). 'UK policy' means (1) in the case of an authorised transfer within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(5)(a)(i) or (ii) (see note 2 heads (1), (2)) or s 116(5)(b)(i) or (ii) (see note 5 heads (1), (2)), a policy evidencing a contract of insurance (other than a contract of reinsurance) for which the applicable law is the law of a part of the United Kingdom; (2) in the case of an authorised transfer within the meaning of s 116(5)(a))(iii) (see note 2 head (3)) or s 116(5)(b)(iii) (see note 5 head (3)), a policy evidencing a contract of reinsurance to which the applicable law is the law of a part of the United Kingdom: s 116(6) (substituted by SI 2007/3253). As to the meaning of 'policy' see PARA 595 note 13. As to the meaning of 'contracts of insurance' see PARA 351 note 13. As to the meaning of 'contract of reinsurance' see PARA 591 note 8. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

5 For these purposes, 'authorised transfer' means a transfer authorised in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom in accordance with: (1) the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1)) art 53; (2) the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3) on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of direct insurance other than life assurance) art 28a; or (3) the provisions in the law of that EEA state which provide for the authorisation of transfers of all or part of a portfolio of contracts of an undertaking authorised to carry out reinsurance activities in its territory (as mentioned in the Reinsurance Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/68 (OJ L323, 9.12.2005, p 1)) art 49): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(5)(b) (amended by SI 2004/3379; SI 2007/3253). As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1.

6 Ie (1) an undertaking authorised in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom under the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1)) art 51; (2) an undertaking authorised in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom under the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EC Council Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3)) art 23; (3) an undertaking, whose head office is not within the EEA, authorised under the law of an EEA state other than the United Kingdom to carry out reinsurance activities in its territory (as mentioned in the Reinsurance Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/68 (OJ L323, 9.12.2005, p 1)) art 49).

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(2) (substituted by SI 2007/3253).

8 'Appropriate notice' means: (1) if the UK policy evidences a contract of insurance in relation to which an EEA state other than the United Kingdom is the state of the commitment, notice given in accordance with the law of that state; (2) if the UK policy evidences a contract of insurance where the risk is situated in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom, notice given in accordance with the law of that EEA state; (3) in any other case, notice given in accordance with the applicable law: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(7). As to the meanings of 'state of the commitment' and 'commitment', and as to references to the EEA state in which the risk is situated, see PARA 595 notes 17, 21; definitions applied by s 116(8).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 116(3). No agreement or consent is required before s 116(3) has the effects mentioned: s 116(4).

(ii) Collective Investment Schemes

A. INTRODUCTION

603. Definitions. 'Collective investment scheme' means any arrangements with respect to property of any description, including money, the purpose or effect of which is to enable persons taking part in the arrangements (whether by becoming owners of the property or any part of it or otherwise) to participate in or receive profits or income arising from the acquisition, holding, management or disposal of the property or sums paid out of such profits or income[1]. The arrangements must be such that the persons who are to participate ('participants') do not have day-to-day control over the management of the property, whether or not they have the right to be consulted or to give directions[2]. The arrangements must also have either or both of the following characteristics: (1) the contributions of the participants and the profits or income out of which payments are to be made to them are pooled; (2) the property is managed as a whole by or on behalf of the operator of the scheme[3]. If arrangements provide for such pooling as is mentioned in head (1) above in relation to separate parts of the property, the arrangements are not to be regarded as constituting a single collective investment scheme unless the participants are entitled to exchange rights in one part for rights in another[4]. The Treasury may by order provide that arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme in specified circumstances or if the arrangements fall within a specified category of arrangement[5].

'Open-ended investment company' means a collective investment scheme which satisfies both the property condition and the investment condition[6]. The property condition is that the property belongs beneficially to, and is managed by or on behalf of, a body corporate[7] ('BC') having as its purpose the investment of its funds with the aim of spreading investment risk and giving its members the benefit of the results of the management of those funds by or on behalf of that body[8]. The investment condition is that, in relation to BC, a reasonable investor would, if he were to participate in the scheme: (a) expect that he would be able to realise, within a period appearing to him to be reasonable, his investment in the scheme (represented, at any given time, by the value of shares in, or securities of, BC held by him as a participant in the scheme); and (b) be satisfied that his investment would be realised on a basis calculated wholly or mainly by reference to the value of property in respect of which the scheme makes arrangements[9]. The Treasury may by order amend the definition of an open-ended investment company[10].

'Authorised open-ended investment company' means a body incorporated by virtue of regulations[11] in respect of which an authorisation order is in force under any provision made in such regulations[12].

'Unit trust scheme' means a collective investment scheme under which the property is held on trust for the participants[13]. 'Units' means the rights or interests (however described) of the participants in a collective investment scheme[14]. 'Authorised unit trust scheme' means a unit trust scheme which is authorised for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 by an authorisation order[15].

'Recognised scheme' means a scheme recognised as a scheme constituted in another EEA state[16], a scheme authorised in a designated country or territory[17] or an individually recognised overseas scheme[18].

604. Arrangements not amounting to a collective investment scheme. The following arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme[1]:

(1) individual investment management arrangements[2];
(2) enterprise initiative schemes[3];
(3) pure deposit based schemes[4];
(4) schemes not operated by way of business[5];
(5) debt issues[6];
(6) common accounts[7];
(7) certain funds relating to leasehold property[8];
(8) certain employee share schemes[9];
(9) schemes entered into for commercial purposes related to existing business[10];
(10) group schemes[11];
(11) franchise arrangements[12];
(12) trading schemes[13];
(13) timeshare schemes[14];
(14) other schemes relating to use or enjoyment of property[15];
(15) schemes involving the issue of certificates representing investments[16];
(16) clearing services[17];
(17) contracts of insurance[18];
(18) funeral plan contracts[19];
(19) individual pension accounts[20];
(20) occupational and personal pension schemes[21];

1 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, art 3. As to the meaning of 'collective investment scheme' see PARA 603.
2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 1. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if:
(1) the property to which the arrangements relate (other than cash awaiting investment) consists of investments of one or more of the following kinds: (a) an investment of the kind specified by any of the provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, arts 76–80 (see PARA 224); (b) an investment of the kind specified by art 81 (units in a collective investment scheme) (see PARA 224) so far as relating to authorised unit trust schemes, recognised schemes or shares in an open-ended investment company; or (c) a contract of long term insurance (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 1(a));
(2) each participant is entitled to a part of that property and to withdraw that part at any time (Schedule para 1(b)); and
(3) the arrangements do not have the characteristics mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 235(3)(a) (see PARA 603 head (1)) and have those mentioned in s 235(3)(b) (see PARA 603 head (2)) only because the parts of the property to which different participants are entitled are not bought and sold separately except where a person becomes or ceases to be a participant (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 1(c)).

As to the meanings of 'authorised unit trust scheme' and 'recognised scheme' see PARA 603; both definitions applied by art 2. As to the meaning of 'contract of long term insurance' see PARA 90 note 3; definition applied by art 2.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 2. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if:

(1) the property to which the arrangements relate (other than cash awaiting investment) consists of shares (Schedule para 2(1)(a));

(2) the arrangements constitute a complying fund (Schedule para 2(1)(b));

(3) each participant is entitled to a part of the property to which the arrangements relate and:

(a) to the extent that the property to which he is entitled comprises relevant shares of a class which are admitted to official listing in an EEA state or to dealings on a recognised investment exchange, he is entitled to withdraw it at any time after the end of the period of five years beginning with the date on which the shares in question were issued;

(b) to the extent that the property to which he is entitled comprises other relevant shares, he is entitled to withdraw it at any time after the end of the period of seven years beginning with the date on which the shares in question were issued;

(c) to the extent that the property to which he is entitled comprises shares other than relevant shares, he is entitled to withdraw it at any time after the end of the period of six months beginning with the date on which the shares in question ceased to be relevant shares; and

(d) to the extent that the property comprises cash which the operator has agreed (conditionally or unconditionally) to apply in subscribing for shares, he is entitled to withdraw it at any time (Schedule para 2(1)(c)); and

(4) the arrangements would meet the conditions described in Schedule para 1(c) (see note 2 head (3)) were it not for the fact that the operator is entitled to exercise all or any of the rights conferred by shares included in the property to which the arrangements relate (Schedule para 2(1)(d)).

'Shares' means investments of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 76 (see PARA 224) and shares are to be regarded as relevant shares if and so long as they are shares in respect of which neither: (i) a claim for relief made in accordance with the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 306 (repealed with respect to 2007–08 and subsequent income tax years) (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1149) has been disallowed; nor (ii) an assessment has been made pursuant to s 307 (repealed with respect to 2007–08 and subsequent income tax years) (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1150) withdrawing or refusing relief by reason of the body corporate in which the shares are held having ceased to be a body corporate which is a qualifying company for the purposes of that Act: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 2(2)(a). 'Complying fund' means arrangements which provide that: (A) the operator will, so far as is practicable, make investments each of which, subject to each participant's individual circumstances, qualify for relief by virtue of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 Pt VII Ch III (ss 289–312) (repealed with respect to 2007–08 and subsequent income tax years) (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1137 et seq); and (B) the minimum contribution to the arrangements which each participant must make is not less than £2,000: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 2(2)(b).

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 3. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if the whole amount of each participant's contribution is a deposit which is accepted by an authorised person with permission to carry on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 5 (accepting deposits) (see PARA 89) or a person who is an exempt person in relation to such an activity: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 3.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 4. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if they are operated otherwise than by way of business: Schedule para 4.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if they are arrangements under which the rights or interests of participants are, except as provided in Schedule para 5(2) (see below), represented by investments of one, and only one, of the following descriptions:

(1) investments of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 77 (instruments creating or acknowledging indebtedness) (see PARA 224) which are:
   (a) issued by a single body corporate other than an open-ended investment company; or
   (b) issued by a single issuer who is not a body corporate and which are guaranteed by the government of the United Kingdom, the Scottish Administration, the Executive Committee of the Northern Ireland Assembly, the National Assembly for Wales or the government of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom, and which are not convertible into or exchangeable for investments of any other description (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5(1)(a));

(2) investments falling within head (1)(a) or head (1)(b) above (the 'former investments') which are convertible into or exchangeable for investments of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 76 (see PARA 224) (the 'latter investments') provided that the latter investments are issued by the same person who issued the former investments or are issued by a single other issuer (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5(1)(b));

(3) investments of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 78 (government and public securities) (see PARA 224) which are issued by a single issuer (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5(1)(c)); or

(4) investments of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 79 (instruments giving entitlement to investments) (see PARA 224) which are issued otherwise than by an open-ended investment company and which confer rights in respect of investments, issued by the same issuer, of the kind specified by art 76 or within any of heads (1)–(3) above (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5(1)(d)).

As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. Arrangements which would otherwise not amount to a collective investment scheme by virtue of the provisions of heads (1)–(4) above are not to be regarded as amounting to such a scheme by reason only that one or more of the participants (the 'counterparty') is a person: (i) whose ordinary business involves him in carrying on activities of the kind specified by any of the provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 14 (dealing in investments as principal) (see PARA 112), art 21 (dealing in investments as agent) (see PARA 126), art 25 (arranging deals in investments) (see PARA 139), art 25D (operating a multilateral trading facility) (see PARA 139); art 37 (managing investments) (see PARA 152), art 40 (safeguarding and administering investments) (see PARA 160), art 45 (sending dematerialised instructions) (see PARA 190), art 51 (establishing etc a collective investment scheme) (see PARA 171), art 52 (establishing etc a stakeholder pension scheme) (see PARA 187) and art 53 (advising on investments) (see PARA 174) or, so far as relevant to any of those articles, art 64 (agreeing to carry on specified kinds of activities) (see PARA 221), or would do so apart from any exclusion from any of those articles made by that order; and (ii) whose rights or interests in the arrangements are or include rights or interests under a swap arrangement: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5(2) (amended by SI 2006/3384). 'Swap arrangement' means an arrangement the purpose of which is to facilitate the making of payments to participants whether in a particular amount or currency or at a particular time or rate of interest or all or any combination of those things, being an arrangement under which the counterparty: (A) is entitled to receive amounts, whether representing principal or interest, payable in respect of any property subject to the arrangements or sums determined by reference to such amounts; and (B) makes payments, whether or not of the same amount or in the same currency as the amounts or sums referred to in head (A) above, which are calculated in accordance with an agreed formula by reference to those amounts or sums: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 5(3).

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 6. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if: (1) they are arrangements under which the rights or interests of participants are rights to or interests in money held in a common account; and (2) that money is held in the account on the understanding that an amount representing the contribution of each participant is to be applied: (a) in making payments to him; (b) in satisfaction of sums owed by him; or (c) in the acquisition of property for him or the provision of services to him: Schedule para 6.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 7 (substituted by SI 2007/800). Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if the rights or interests of the participants are rights or interests (1) in a fund which is a trust fund within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(1) (see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 352) or which would be such a fund if the landlord were not an exempt landlord within the meaning of s 58(1) (see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 354); or (2) in money held in a designated account by the scheme administrator under a tenancy deposit scheme within the meaning of the Housing Act 2004 s 212(2) (see HOUSING): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 7 (as so substituted).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 8. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if they are operated by a person ('A'), a member of the same group as A, or a relevant trustee for the purpose of enabling or facilitating: (1) transactions in shares in, or debentures issued by, A between, or for the benefit of, any of the persons mentioned in Schedule para 8(2); or (2) the holding of such shares or debentures by, or for the benefit of, any such persons: Schedule para 8(1). The persons referred to in Schedule para 8(1) are: (a) the bona fide employees or former employees of A or of another member of the same group; or (b) the wives, husbands, widows, widowers, civil partners, surviving civil partners, or children or step-children under the age of 18 of such employees or former employees: Schedule para 8(2) (amended by SI 2005/2114). 'Shares' and 'debentures' have the meaning given by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 71(6)(a) (see PARA 123); and 'relevant trustee' means a person who, in pursuance of the arrangements, holds shares in or debentures issued by A: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 8(3).

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 9 (amended by SI 2001/3650; SI 2006/3384). Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if each of the participants: (1) carries on a business other than the business of engaging in any regulated activity of the kind specified by any of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 14 (see PARA 112), art 21 (see PARA 126), art 25 (see PARA 139), art 25D (see PARA 139), art 37 (see PARA 152), art 40 (see PARA 160), art 45 (see PARA 190), arts 51–53 (see PARAS 171, 174, 187) or, so far as relevant to any of those articles, art 64 (see PARA 221); and (2) enters into the arrangements for commercial purposes related to that business: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 9(1) (as so amended). Schedule para 9(1) does not apply where the person will carry on the business in question by virtue of being a participant in the arrangements: Schedule para 9(2).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 10. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if each of the participants is a body corporate in the same group as the operator: Schedule para 10. As to the meaning of the 'operator' see PARA 606 note 16; definition applied by art 2.

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 11. Franchise arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme: Schedule para 11. 'Franchise arrangements' means arrangements under which a person earns profits or income by exploiting a right conferred by the arrangements to use a trade mark or design or other intellectual property or the goodwill attached to it: art 2.

13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 12. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if: (1) the purpose of the arrangements is that participants should receive, by way of reward, payments or other benefits in respect of the introduction by any person of other persons who become participants; (2) the arrangements are such that the payments or other benefits referred to in head (1) above are to be wholly or mainly funded out of the contributions of other participants; and (3) the only reason why the arrangements have either or both of the characteristics mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 235(3) (see PARA 603 heads (1), (2)) is because, pending their being used to fund those payments or other benefits, contributions of participants are managed as a whole by or on behalf of the operator of the scheme: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 12.

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 13. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if the rights or interests of the participants are timeshare rights: Schedule para 13. 'Timeshare rights' has the meaning given by the Timeshare Act 1992 s 1 (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 868): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, art 2.

15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 14. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if: (1) the predominant purpose of the arrangements is to enable the participants to share in the use or enjoyment of property or to make its use or enjoyment available gratuitously to others; and (2) the property to which the arrangements relate does not consist of the currency of any country or territory and does not consist of or include any investment of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, Pt III (arts 73–89) (see PARA 224) or which would be of such a kind apart from any exclusion made by Pt III: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 14.

16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 15. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if the rights or interests of the participants are investments of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 80 (certificates representing certain securities) (see PARA 224): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 15.

17 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 16. Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if their purpose is the provision of clearing services and they are operated by an authorised person, a recognised clearing house or a recognised investment exchange: Schedule para 16.

18 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 17. A contract of insurance does not amount to a collective investment scheme: Schedule para 17. As to the meaning of 'contract of insurance' see PARA 90 note 3; definition applied by art 2.

19 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 18 (substituted by SI 2001/3650). Arrangements do not amount to a collective investment scheme if they consist of, or are made pursuant to: (1) a funeral plan contract; or (2) a contract which would be a funeral plan contract but for the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 59(2) proviso, or the exclusion in art 60 (see PARA 201): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 18 (as so substituted). As to the meaning of 'funeral plan contract' see PARA 200 note 1; definition applied by art 2.

20 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 19. An individual pension account does not amount to a collective investment scheme: Schedule para 19. 'Individual pension account' has the meaning given by the Personal Pension Schemes (Restriction on Discretion to Approve) (Permitted Investments) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/117, reg 4 (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS); definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, art 2.

21 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 20. An occupational pension scheme does not amount to a collective investment scheme: Schedule para 20(1). A personal pension scheme does not amount to a collective investment scheme: Schedule para 20(2). Schedule para 20(2) does not extend to a personal pension unit trust which is constituted as a feeder fund or comprises feeder funds: Schedule para 20(3). 'Occupational pension scheme' has the meaning given by the Pension Schemes Act 1993 s 1 but with para (b) of the definition omitted (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARAS 710, 741): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, art 2 (definition substituted by SI 2006/1969). 'Personal pension scheme' means a scheme or arrangement which is not an occupational pension scheme and which is comprised in one or more instruments or agreements, having or capable of having effect so as to provide benefits to or in respect of people (1) on retirement; (2) on having reached a particular age; or (3) on termination of service in an employment: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, art 2 (definition substituted by SI 2006/1969). 'Personal pension unit trust' means a personal pension scheme which is an authorised unit trust scheme of a kind mentioned in the Personal Pension Schemes (Appropriate Schemes) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/470, Sch 1 Pt I (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 886): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, art 2. 'Feeder fund' means an authorised unit trust scheme the sole object of which is investment in units of a single authorised unit trust scheme or shares in a single open-ended investment company: art 2.

22 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 21 (substituted by SI 2001/3650). No body incorporated under the law of, or any part of, the United Kingdom relating to building societies or industrial and provident societies or registered under any such law relating to friendly societies, and no other body corporate other than an open-ended investment company, amounts to a collective investment scheme: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes) Order 2001, SI 2001/1062, Schedule para 21(1) (as so substituted). This does not apply to any body incorporated as a limited liability partnership: Schedule para 21(2) (as so substituted). As to building societies see PARA 1856 et seq; as to industrial and provident societies see PARA 2394 et seq; as to friendly societies see PARA 2081 et seq; and as to limited liability partnerships see PARTNERSHIP.

B. RESTRICTION ON PROMOTION

605. Main restriction. An authorised person[1] must not communicate[2] an invitation or inducement to participate[3] in a collective investment scheme[4].

1 As to authorised persons see PARA 314.

2 'Communicate' includes causing a communication to be made: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(9).

3 'Participate', in relation to a collective investment scheme, means become a participant (within the meaning given by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 235(2) (see PARA 603)) in the scheme: s 238(11). As to the meaning of 'collective investment scheme' see PARA 603.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(1). This provision is subject to ss 238(3)–(8), 239 (see PARA 606): s 238(2). An unauthorised person cannot communicate such an invitation or inducement by virtue of s 21: see PARA 225.

606. Qualifications to main restriction. The main restriction on promotion[1] is subject to the provisions described below[2].

The main restriction applies in the case of a communication[3] originating outside the United Kingdom[4] only if the communication is capable of having an effect in the United Kingdom[5]. It does not apply in relation to: (1) an authorised unit trust scheme[6]; (2) a scheme constituted by an authorised open-ended investment company[7]; or (3) a recognised scheme[8], nor does it apply to anything done in accordance with rules[9] made by the Financial Services Authority[10] for the purpose of exempting[11] the promotion otherwise than to the general public[12] of schemes of specified descriptions[13].

The Treasury may by order specify circumstances in which the main restriction does not apply[14]. Such an order may, in particular, provide that the main restriction does not apply in relation to communications: (a) of a specified description; (b) originating in a specified country or territory outside the United Kingdom; (c) originating in a country or territory which falls within a specified description of country or territory outside the United Kingdom; or (d) originating outside the United Kingdom[15].

The Treasury may by regulations make provision for exempting single property schemes[16] from the main restriction[17]. If such regulations are made, the Authority may make rules imposing duties or liabilities on the operator and (if any) the trustee or depositary[18] of a scheme exempted by the regulations[19].

An authorised person may not approve[20] the content of a communication relating to a collective investment scheme if he would be prohibited[21] from effecting the communication himself or from causing it to be communicated[22].

1 As to the main restriction see PARA 605.
2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(2).
3 As to the meaning of 'communicate' see PARA 605 note 2.
4 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(3). The Treasury may by order repeal s 238(3): s 238(8). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

If an authorised person contravenes a requirement imposed on him by s 238, then s 150 (action for damages) (see PARA 33) applies to the contravention as it applies to a contravention mentioned in s 150: s 241.

6 As to the meaning of 'authorised unit trust scheme' see PARA 603.
7 As to the meaning of 'authorised open-ended investment company' see PARA 603.
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(4). See note 5. As to the meaning of 'recognised scheme' see PARA 603.
9 As to the meaning of 'rule' see PARA 23 note 2.
10 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
11 Ie from the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(1): see PARA 605.
12 'Promotion otherwise than to the general public' includes promotion in a way designed to reduce, so far as possible, the risk of participation by persons for whom participation would be unsuitable: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(10). As to the meaning of 'participate' see PARA 603.
13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(5). See note 5.
14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(6). As to the order that has been made see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060; and PARA 607. As to orders made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.
15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(7). See note 14.
16 For these purposes, a single property scheme is a scheme which has the characteristics mentioned below and satisfies such other requirements as are prescribed by the regulations conferring the exemption: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 239(2). The characteristics are: (1) that the property subject to the scheme (apart from cash or other assets held for management purposes) consists of: (a) a single building (or a single building with ancillary buildings) managed by or on behalf of the operator of the scheme; or (b) a group of adjacent or contiguous buildings managed by him or on his behalf as a single enterprise, with or without ancillary land and with or without furniture, fittings or other contents of the building or buildings in question; and (2) that the units of the participants in the scheme are either dealt in on a recognised investment exchange or offered on terms such that any agreement for their acquisition is conditional on their admission to dealings on such an exchange: s 239(3). 'Operator', in relation to a unit trust scheme with a separate trustee, means the manager; and, in relation to an open-ended investment company, means that company: s 237(2). 'Trustee', in relation to a unit trust scheme, means the person holding the property in question on trust for the participants: s 237(2). As to the meanings of 'units', 'unit trust scheme' and 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 603. As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.
17 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 239(1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made.
18 'Depositary', in relation to: (1) a collective investment scheme which is constituted by a body incorporated by virtue of regulations under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 262 (see PARA 621); or (2) any other collective investment scheme which is not a unit trust scheme, means any person to whom the property subject to the scheme is entrusted for safekeeping: s 237(2).
19 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 239(4). The rules may include, to such extent as the Authority thinks appropriate, provision for purposes corresponding to those for which provision can be made under s 248 (see PARA 615) in relation to authorised unit trust schemes: s 239(5).
20 Ie for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 21: see PARA 225.
21 Ie by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(1): see PARA 605.

22 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 240(1). For the purposes of determining in any case whether there has been a contravention of s 21(1) (see PARA 225), an approval given in contravention of s 240(1) is to be regarded as not having been given: s 240(2). If an authorised person contravenes a requirement imposed on him by s 240, then s 150 (action for damages) (see PARA 33) applies to the contravention as it applies to a contravention mentioned in s 150: s 241.

607. Exemptions from restriction. The scheme promotion restriction[1] does not apply to any communication[2]: (1) which is made (whether from inside or outside the United Kingdom) to a person who receives the communication outside the United Kingdom; or (2) which is directed (whether from inside or outside the United Kingdom) only at persons outside the United Kingdom[3]. This exemption does not apply to an unsolicited real time communication unless it is made from a place outside the United Kingdom, and it relates to an overseas scheme[4].

The scheme promotion restriction does not apply to any solicited real time communication[5] which is made from outside the United Kingdom and which relates to units in an overseas scheme[6].

The scheme promotion restriction does not apply to a non-real time or unsolicited real time communication which is made from outside the United Kingdom by an authorised person to a previously overseas customer[7] of his, and which relates to units in an overseas scheme[8].

The scheme promotion restriction does not apply to an incoming electronic commerce communication[9].

The following are also exempted from the scheme promotion restriction:

(a) follow up non-real time communications and solicited real time communications[10];

(b) introductions[11];

(c) generic promotions[12];

(d) communications made only to investment professionals[13];

(e) one off non-real time communications and solicited real time communications[14];

(f) one off unsolicited real time communications[15];

(g) communications required or authorised by enactments other than the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[16];

(h) communications to persons in the business of placing promotional material[17];

(i) communications to existing participants in an unregulated scheme[18];

(j) communications made by one body corporate in a group to another body corporate in the same group[19];

(k) communications to persons in the business of disseminating information[20];

(l) communications to certified high net worth individuals[21];

(m) communications to high net worth companies, unincorporated associations or partnerships or trustees of high value trusts[22];

(n) communications to certified sophisticated investors[23];

(o) non-real time communications or solicited real time communications to associations of high net worth or sophisticated investors[24];

(p) communications to settlors, trustees and personal representatives if the communication is made for the purposes of the trust or estate[25];

(q) communications to beneficiaries of trusts, wills or intestacy if the communication relates to the management or distribution of the trust fund or estate[26];

(r) communications made or directed by a person for the purpose of enabling any injustice[27] to be remedied[28];

(s) any communication received by a person who receives the publication in which the communication is contained because he has himself placed an advertisement in that publication[29];

(t) a scheme constituted by an authorised Northern Ireland open-ended investment company[30];

(u) any communication which is made by an EEA management company[31].

Nothing in the provisions relating to exemptions from the scheme promotion restriction[32] is to be construed as preventing a person from relying on more than one exemption in respect of the same communication[33].

1 'Scheme promotion restriction' means the restriction imposed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 238(1) (see PARA 605): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 2(2).

2 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060: (1) any reference to a communication is a reference to the communication, by an authorised person in the course of business, of an invitation or inducement to participate in an unregulated scheme; (2) any reference to a communication being made to another person is a reference to a communication being addressed, whether verbally or in legible form, to a particular person or persons (e g where it is contained in a telephone call or letter); (3) any reference to a communication being directed at persons is a reference to a communication being addressed to persons generally (e g where it is contained in a television broadcast or website); (4) 'communicate' includes causing a communication to be made; (5) a 'recipient' of a communication is a person to whom the communication is made or, in the case of a non-real time communication which is directed at persons generally, any person who reads or hears the communication; (6) 'electronic commerce communication' means a communication the making of which constitutes the provision of an information society service; (7) 'incoming electronic commerce communication' means an electronic commerce communication made from an establishment in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom; (8) 'outgoing electronic commerce communication' means an electronic commerce communication made from an establishment in the United Kingdom to a person in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom: art 3 (amended by SI 2002/2157). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1. As to outgoing electronic commerce communications see also the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 5A (added by SI 2002/2157).

References to a 'real time communication' are references to any communication made in the course of a personal visit, telephone conversation or other interactive dialogue: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 4(1). A 'non-real time communication' is a communication not falling within art 4(1): art 4(2). Non-real time communications include communications made by letter or e-mail or contained in a publication: art 4(3). 'Publication' means: (a) a newspaper, journal, magazine or other periodical publication; (b) a website or similar system for the electronic display of information; (c) any programme forming part of a service consisting of the broadcast or transmission of television or radio programmes; and (d) any teletext service, that is to say a service consisting of television transmissions consisting of a succession of visual displays (with or without accompanying sound) capable of being selected and held for separate viewing or other use: art 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2002/1310). The following factors are to be treated as indications that a communication is a non-real time communication: (i) the communication is made to or directed at more than one recipient in identical terms (save for details of the recipient's identity); (ii) the communication is made or directed by way of a system which in the normal course constitutes or creates a record of the communication which is available to the recipient to refer to at a later time; (iii) the communication is made or directed by way of a system which in the normal course does not enable or require the recipient to respond immediately to it: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 4(4), (5).

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 8(1) (amended by SI 2002/2157). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 8(1) does not apply to an outgoing electronic commerce communication: art 8(7) (added by SI 2002/2157).

For the purposes of head (1) in the text: (1) if the conditions set out in heads (a), (b), (c) and (d) below are met, a communication directed from a place inside the United Kingdom is to be regarded as directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom; (2) if the conditions set out in heads (c) and (d) below are met, a communication directed from a place outside the United Kingdom is to be regarded as directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom; (3) in any other case where one or more of the conditions in heads (a)–(e) below are met, that fact must be taken into account in determining whether the communication is to be regarded as directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom (but a communication may still be regarded as directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom even if none of the conditions in heads (a)–(e) below is met): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 8(3). The conditions are that: (a) the communication is accompanied by an indication that it is directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom; (b) the communication is accompanied by an indication that it must not be acted upon by persons in the United Kingdom; (c) the communication is not referred to in, or directly accessible from, any other communication which is made to a person or directed at persons in the United Kingdom by or on behalf of the same person; (d) there are in place proper systems and procedures to prevent recipients in the United Kingdom (other than those to whom the communication might otherwise lawfully have been made or directed) acquiring from the person directing the communication, a close relative of his or a company in the same group, units in the scheme to which the communication relates; (e) the communication is included in: (i) a website, newspaper, journal, magazine or periodical publication which is principally accessed in or intended for a market outside the United Kingdom; (ii) a radio or television broadcast or teletext service transmitted principally for reception outside the United Kingdom: art 8(4). As to the meaning of 'units' see PARA 603; definition applied by art 2(1). A communication may be treated as directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom even if it is also directed at investment professionals or at high net worth persons: see art 8(5). Where a communication falls within art 8(5), the condition in head (a) above is to be construed as requiring an indication that the communication is directed only at persons outside the United Kingdom or persons having professional experience in matters relating to investments or high net worth persons (as the case may be); the condition in head (b) above is to be construed as requiring an indication that the communication must not be acted upon by persons in the United Kingdom or by persons who do not have professional experience in matters relating to investments or who are not high net worth persons (as the case may be): art 8(6). 'Close relative', in relation to a person, means: (A) his spouse or civil partner; (B) his children and step-children, his parents and step-parents, his brothers and sisters and his step-brothers and step-sisters; and (C) the spouse or civil partner of any person within head (B) above: art 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2005/2114). As to the degree of prominence to be given to the required indications see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 6.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 8(2). 'Overseas scheme' means an unregulated scheme which is operated and managed in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom: art 2(1). 'Unregulated scheme' means a collective investment scheme which is not an authorised unit trust scheme nor a scheme constituted by an authorised open-ended investment company nor a recognised scheme for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVII (ss 235–284) (see PARA 603): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 2(1).

5 A real time communication is solicited where it is made in the course of a personal visit, telephone call or other interactive dialogue if that call, visit or dialogue: (1) was initiated by the recipient of the communication; or (2) takes place in response to an express request from the recipient of the communication: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 5(1). A real time communication is unsolicited where it is made otherwise than as described in art 5(1): art 5(2). A person is not to be treated as expressly requesting a call, visit or dialogue: (a) because he omits to indicate that he does not wish to receive any or any further visits or calls or to engage in any or any further dialogue; (b) because he agrees to standard terms that state that such visits, calls or dialogue will take place, unless he has signified clearly that, in addition to agreeing to the terms, he is willing for them to take place: art 5(3)(a). A communication is solicited only if it is clear from all the circumstances when the call, visit or dialogue is initiated or requested that during the course of the visit, call or dialogue communications will be made concerning the kind of activities or investments to which the communications in fact made relate: art 5(3)(b). It is immaterial whether the express request is made before or after the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060 came into force (ie 1 December 2001): art 5(3)(c). Where a real time communication is solicited by a recipient ('R'), it is treated as having also been solicited by any other person to whom it is made at the same time as it is made to R if that other recipient is a close relative of R, or expected to participate in the unregulated scheme jointly with R: art 5(4).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 9.

7 'Previously overseas customer' means a person with whom the authorised person has done business within the period of 12 months ending with the day on which the communication was made (the 'earlier business'), where: (1) at the time that the earlier business was done, the customer was neither resident in the United Kingdom nor had a place of business there; or (2) at the time the earlier business was done, the authorised person had on a former occasion done business with the customer, being business of the same description as the business to which the communication relates, and on that former occasion the customer was neither resident in the United Kingdom nor had a place of business there: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 10(2). An authorised person has done business with a customer if, in the course of his overseas business, he has: (a) effected a transaction, or arranged for a transaction to be effected, with the customer in respect of units in an overseas scheme; or (b) given, outside the United Kingdom, any advice on the merits of the customer buying or selling units in an overseas scheme: art 10(3).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 10(1).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 10A(1) (art 10A added by SI 2002/2157). This provision does not apply to certain advertisements or unsolicited communications made by electronic mail: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Promotion of Collective Investment Schemes) (Exemptions) Order 2001, SI 2001/1060, art 10A(2)–(4) (as so added; art 10A(3) amended by SI 2003/2067).

C. AUTHORISED UNIT TRUSTS

(A) Authorisation

608. Applications for authorisation. Any application for an order declaring a unit trust scheme[1] to be an authorised unit trust scheme[2] must be made to the Financial Services Authority[3] by the manager and trustee[4], or proposed manager and trustee, of the scheme[5]. The manager and trustee (or proposed manager and trustee) must be different persons[6]. The application must be made in such manner as the Authority may direct, and must contain or be accompanied by such information as the Authority may reasonably require for the purpose of determining the application[7]. At any time after receiving an application and before determining it, the Authority may require the applicants to provide it with such further information as it reasonably considers necessary to enable it to determine the application[8]. Different directions may be given, and different requirements imposed, in relation to different applications[9]. The Authority may require applicants to present information which they are required to give in such form, or to verify it in such a way, as the Authority may direct[10].

If, on an application[11] in respect of a unit trust scheme, the Authority: (1) is satisfied that the scheme complies with the following requirements[12]; (2) is satisfied that the scheme complies with the requirements of the trust scheme rules[13]; and (3) has been provided with a copy of the trust deed and a certificate signed by a solicitor to the effect that it complies with such of the requirements mentioned in head (1) or head (2) above as relate to its contents, the Authority may make an order declaring the scheme to be an authorised unit trust scheme[14]. If the Authority makes such an order, it must give written notice of the order to the applicant[15]. The requirements are:

(a) the manager and the trustee must be persons who are independent of each other[16];

(b) the manager and the trustee must each be a body corporate[17] incorporated in the United Kingdom[18] or another EEA state[19] and must have a place of business in the United Kingdom, and the affairs of each must be administered in the country in which it is incorporated[20];

(c) the manager and the trustee must each be an authorised person[21] and the manager must have permission to act as manager and the trustee must have permission to act as trustee[22];

(d) the name of the scheme must not be undesirable or misleading[23];

(e) the purposes of the scheme must be reasonably capable of being successfully carried into effect[24];

(f) the participants[25] must be entitled to have their units[26] redeemed in accordance with the scheme at a price: (i) related to the net value of the property to which the units relate; and (ii) determined in accordance with the scheme[27].

An application[28] must be determined by the Authority before the end of the period of six months beginning with the date on which it receives the completed application[29]. The Authority may determine an incomplete application if it considers it appropriate to do so; and it must in any event determine such an application within 12 months beginning with the date on which it first receives the application[30]. The applicant may withdraw his application, by giving the Authority written notice, at any time before the Authority determines it[31].

609. Refusal of applications. If the Financial Services Authority[1] proposes to refuse an application[2], it must give each of the applicants a warning notice[3]. If the Authority decides to refuse the application: (1) it must give each of the applicants a decision notice[4]; and (2) either applicant may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[5].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 245(2)(b). As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.

610. Certificates. If the manager or trustee[1] of a unit trust scheme[2] which complies with the conditions necessary for it to enjoy the rights conferred by any relevant Community instrument so requests, the Financial Services Authority[3] may issue a certificate to the effect that the scheme complies with those conditions[4]. Such a certificate may be issued on the making of an authorisation order[5] in respect of the scheme or at any subsequent time[6].

1 As to the meaning of 'trustee' see PARA 606 note 16.

5 As to the meaning of 'authorisation order' see PARA 608 note 14.
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 246(2).

611. Exclusion clauses. Any provision of the trust deed of an authorised unit trust scheme[1] is void in so far as it would have the effect of exempting the manager or trustee[2] from liability for any failure to exercise due care and diligence in the discharge of his functions in respect of the scheme[3].

1 As to the meaning of 'authorised unit trust scheme' see PARA 603.
2 As to the meaning of 'trustee' see PARA 606 note 16.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 253.

612. Alterations of schemes and changes of manager or trustee. The manager of an authorised unit trust scheme[1] must give written notice to the Financial Services Authority[2] of any proposal to alter the scheme or to replace its trustee[3]. Any notice given in respect of a proposal to alter the scheme involving a change in the trust deed must be accompanied by a certificate signed by a solicitor to the effect that the change will not affect the compliance of the deed with the trust scheme rules[4]. The trustee of an authorised unit trust scheme must give written notice to the Authority of any proposal to replace the manager of the scheme[5].

Effect is not to be given to any proposal of which notice has been given[6] unless: (1) the Authority, by written notice, has given its approval to the proposal; or (2) one month, beginning with the date on which the notice was given, has expired without the manager or trustee having received from the Authority a warning notice[7] in respect of the proposal[8]. The Authority must not approve a proposal to replace the manager or the trustee of an authorised unit trust scheme unless it is satisfied that, if the proposed replacement is made, the scheme will continue to comply with the statutory requirements[9].

If the Authority proposes to refuse approval of a proposal to replace the trustee or manager of an authorised unit trust scheme, it must give a warning notice to the person by whom notice of the proposal was given[10]. If the Authority proposes to refuse approval of a proposal to alter an authorised unit trust scheme, it must give separate warning notices to the manager and the trustee of the scheme[11]. To be valid the warning notice must be received by that person before the end of one month beginning with the date on which notice of the proposal was given[12]. If, having given a warning notice to a person, the Authority decides to refuse approval: (a) it must give him a decision notice; and (b) he may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[13].

613. Revocation of authorisation. An authorisation order[1] may be revoked by an order made by the Financial Services Authority[2] if it appears to the Authority that[3]:

(1) one or more of the requirements for the making of the order are no longer satisfied[4];

(2) the manager or trustee[5] of the scheme concerned has contravened a requirement imposed on him by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[6];

(3) the manager or trustee of the scheme has, in purported compliance with any such requirement, knowingly or recklessly given the Authority information which is false or misleading in a material particular[7];

(4) no regulated activity[8] is being carried on in relation to the scheme and the period of that inactivity began at least 12 months earlier[9]; or

(5) none of heads (1) to (4) above applies, but it is desirable to revoke the authorisation order in order to protect the interests of participants[10] or potential participants in the scheme[11].

If the Authority proposes to make an order[12] revoking an authorisation order (a 'revoking order'), it must give separate warning notices[13] to the manager and the trustee of the scheme[14]. If the Authority decides to make a revoking order, it must without delay give each of them a decision notice[15]; and either of them may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[16].

An authorisation order may be revoked by an order made by the Authority at the request of the manager or trustee of the scheme concerned[17]. If the Authority makes such an order, it must give written notice of the order to the manager and trustee of the scheme concerned[18]. The Authority may refuse a request to make such an order if it considers that: (a) the public interest requires that any matter concerning the scheme should be investigated before a decision is taken as to whether the authorisation order should be revoked; or (b) revocation would not be in the interests of the participants or would be incompatible with a European Community obligation[19]. If the Authority proposes to refuse a request, it must give separate warning notices to the manager and the trustee of the scheme[20]. If the Authority decides to refuse the request, it must without delay give each of them a decision notice; and either of them may refer the matter to the Tribunal[21].

(B) Trust Scheme Rules

614. Trust scheme rules. The Financial Services Authority[1] may make rules ('trust scheme rules') as to: (1) the constitution, management and operation of authorised unit trust schemes[2]; (2) the powers, duties, rights and liabilities of the manager and trustee[3] of any such scheme; (3) the rights and duties of the participants[4] in any such scheme; and (4) the winding up of any such scheme[5]. Trust scheme rules may, in particular, make provision:

(a) as to the issue and redemption of the units[6] under the scheme[7];
(b) as to the expenses of the scheme and the means of meeting them[8];
(c) for the appointment, removal, powers and duties of an auditor for the scheme[9];
(d) for restricting or regulating the investment and borrowing powers exercisable in relation to the scheme[10];
(e) requiring the keeping of records with respect to the transactions and financial position of the scheme and for the inspection of those records[11];
(f) requiring the preparation of periodical reports with respect to the scheme and the provision of those reports to the participants and to the Authority[12]; and
(g) with respect to the amendment of the scheme[13].

Trust scheme rules may make provision as to the contents of the trust deed, including provision requiring any of the matters mentioned in heads (a) to (g) above to be dealt with in the deed[14]. However, trust scheme rules are binding on the manager, trustee and participants independently of the contents of the trust deed and, in the case of the participants, have effect as if contained in it[15].

If (i) a modification is made of the statutory provisions in force in Great Britain or Northern Ireland relating to companies[16]; (ii) the modification relates to the rights and duties of persons who hold the beneficial title to any shares in a company without also holding the legal title; and (iii) it appears to the Treasury[17] that, for the purpose of assimilating the law relating to authorised unit trust schemes to the law relating to companies as so modified, it is expedient to modify the rule-making powers conferred on the Authority[18], then the Treasury may by order make such modifications of those powers as it considers appropriate[19].

615. Scheme particulars rules. The Financial Services Authority[1] may make rules ('scheme particulars rules') requiring the manager of an authorised unit trust scheme[2]: (1) to submit scheme particulars[3] to the Authority; and (2) to publish scheme particulars or make them available to the public on request[4].

Scheme particulars rules may require the manager of an authorised unit trust scheme to submit, and to publish or make available, revised or further scheme particulars if there is a significant change affecting any matter which is contained in scheme particulars previously published or made available, and whose inclusion in those particulars was required by the rules[5]. Scheme particulars rules may require the manager of an authorised unit trust scheme to submit, and to publish or make available, revised or further scheme particulars if a significant new matter arises, and the inclusion of information in respect of that matter would have been required in previous particulars if it had arisen when those particulars were prepared[6].

Scheme particulars rules may provide for the payment, by the person or persons who in accordance with the rules are treated as responsible for any scheme particulars, of compensation to any qualifying person[7] who has suffered loss as a result of any untrue or misleading statement in the particulars, or the omission from them of any matter required by the rules to be included[8].

Scheme particulars rules do not affect any liability which any person may incur apart from the rules[9].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to the meaning of 'authorised unit trust scheme' see PARA 603.
3 'Scheme particulars' means particulars in such form, containing such information about the scheme and complying with such requirements, as are specified in scheme particulars rules: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248(2).
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 248(1), 417(1).
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248(3).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248(4).
7 'Qualifying person' means a person who: (1) has become or agreed to become a participant in the scheme; or (2) although not being a participant, has a beneficial interest in units in the scheme: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248(6). As to the meaning of 'participants' see PARA 603. As to the meaning of 'units' see PARA 603.
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248(5).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248(7).

616. Disqualification of auditor for breach of trust scheme rules. If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[1] that an auditor has failed to comply with a duty imposed on him by trust scheme rules[2], it may disqualify him from being the auditor for any authorised unit trust scheme[3] or authorised open-ended investment company[4].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
2 As to the trust scheme rules see PARA 614.
3 As to the meaning of 'authorised unit trust scheme' see PARA 603.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 249(1). As to the meaning of 'authorised open-ended investment company' see PARA 603. The provisions of s 345(2)–(5) (see PARA 767) have effect in relation to disqualification under s 249(1) as they have effect in relation to disqualification under s 345(1): s 249(2).

617. Modification or waiver of rules. The Financial Services Authority[1] may, on the application or with the consent of any person to whom any rules[2] apply, direct that all or any of the rules: (1) are not to apply to him as respects a particular scheme; or (2) are to apply to him, as respects a particular scheme, with such modifications as may be specified in the direction[3]. The Authority may, on the application or with the consent of the manager and trustee[4] of a particular scheme acting jointly, direct that all or any of the rules: (a) are not to apply to the scheme; or (b) are to apply to the scheme with such modifications as may be specified in the direction[5].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebook, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 For these purposes, 'rules' means: (1) trust scheme rules (see PARA 614); or (2) scheme particulars rules (see PARA 615): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 250(1).
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 250(2). The provisions of s 148(3)–(9), (11) (modification or waiver of rules) (see PARA 23) have effect in relation to a direction under s 250(2) as they have effect in relation to a direction under s 148(2) but with modifications: see s 250(4) (amended by SI 2007/1973).
4 As to the meaning of 'trustee' see PARA 606 note 16.

(C) Powers of Intervention

618. Directions. The Financial Services Authority[1] may give a direction[2] if it appears to the Authority that[3]:

(1) one or more of the requirements for the making of an authorisation order[4] are no longer satisfied[5];
(2) the manager or trustee[6] of an authorised unit trust scheme[7] has contravened, or is likely to contravene, a requirement imposed on him by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[8];
(3) the manager or trustee of such a scheme has, in purported compliance with any such requirement, knowingly or recklessly given the Authority information which is false or misleading in a material particular[9]; or
(4) none of heads (1) to (3) above applies, but it is desirable to give a direction in order to protect the interests of participants[10] or potential participants in such a scheme[11].

A direction may: (a) require the manager of the scheme to cease the issue or redemption, or both the issue and redemption, of units[12] under the scheme; (b) require the manager and trustee of the scheme to wind it up[13].

If the authorisation order is revoked, the revocation does not affect any direction[14] which is then in force[15]. A direction may be given in relation to a scheme in the case of which the authorisation order has been revoked if a direction was already in force at the time of revocation[16].

The Authority may, either on its own initiative or on the application of the manager or trustee of the scheme concerned, revoke or vary a direction given under the above provisions if it appears to the Authority: (i) in the case of revocation, that it is no longer necessary for the direction to take effect or continue in force; (ii) in the case of variation, that the direction should take effect or continue in force in a different form[17].

If a person contravenes a direction, the statutory provisions relating to actions for damages[18] apply[19].

619. Procedure in relation to directions. A direction[1] takes effect: (1) immediately, if the notice given[2] states that that is the case; (2) on such date as may be specified in the notice; or (3) if no date is specified in the notice, when the matter to which it relates is no longer open to review[3]. A direction may be expressed to take effect immediately (or on a specified date) only if the Financial Services Authority[4], having regard to the ground on which it is exercising its power[5], considers that it is necessary for the direction to take effect immediately (or on that date)[6]. If the Authority proposes to give a direction[7], or gives such a direction with immediate effect, it must give separate written notice to the manager and the trustee[8] of the scheme concerned[9]. The notice must:

(a) give details of the direction[10];
(b) inform the person to whom it is given of when the direction takes effect[11];
(c) state the Authority's reasons for giving the direction and for its determination as to when the direction takes effect[12];
(d) inform the person to whom it is given that he may make representations to the Authority within such period as may be specified in it (whether or not he has referred the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal)[13]; and

If the direction imposes a requirement on the manager to cease the issue or redemption of units under the scheme[15], the notice must state that the requirement has effect until a specified date, or a further direction[16]. If the direction imposes a requirement to wind the scheme up[17], the scheme must be wound up by a date specified in the notice, or if no date is specified, as soon as practicable[18].

If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides to give the direction in the way proposed, or if it decides, where a direction has been given, not to revoke the direction, it must give separate written notice to the manager and the trustee of the scheme concerned[19]. If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides: (i) not to give the direction in the way proposed; (ii) to give the direction in a way other than that proposed; or (iii) to revoke a direction which has effect, it must give separate written notice to the manager and the trustee of the scheme concerned[20].

If a notice informs a person of his right to refer a matter to the Tribunal, it must give an indication of the procedure on such a reference[21].

The provisions described above apply to the variation of a direction on the Authority's own initiative as they apply to the giving of a direction[22].

If on an application for a direction to be revoked[23] or varied the Authority proposes to vary the direction otherwise than in accordance with the application, or to refuse to revoke or vary the direction, it must give the applicant a warning notice[24]. If the Authority decides to refuse to revoke or vary the direction, it must give the applicant a decision notice[25]; and the applicant may refer the matter to the Tribunal[26].

If the Authority decides on its own initiative to revoke a direction[27], it must give separate written notices of its decision to the manager and trustee of the scheme[28]. If on an application for a direction to be revoked or varied[29] the Authority decides to revoke the direction or vary it in accordance with the application, it must give the applicant written notice of its decision[30]. The notice[31] must specify the date on which the decision takes effect[32]. The Authority may publish such information about the revocation or variation in such way as it considers appropriate[33].

620. Applications to the court. Where the Financial Services Authority[1] is empowered to give a direction[2], it may also apply to the High Court for an order: (1) removing the manager or the trustee[3], or both the manager and the trustee, of the scheme; and (2) replacing the person or persons removed with a suitable person or persons nominated by the Authority[4]. If it appears to the Authority that there is no person it can nominate for the purposes of head (2) above, it may apply to the court for an order: (a) removing the manager or the trustee, or both the manager and the trustee, of the scheme; and (b) appointing an authorised person[5] to wind up the scheme[6]. On such an application the court may make such order as it thinks fit[7]. The Authority must give written notice of the making of an application to the manager and trustee of the scheme concerned[8].

D. OPEN-ENDED INVESTMENT COMPANIES

(A) Introduction

621. Treasury power. Part XVIII Chapter IV of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 relates to open-ended investment companies[1].

The Treasury[2] may by regulations make provision for: (1) facilitating the carrying on of collective investment by means of open-ended investment companies[3]; (2) regulating such companies[4].

The regulations may in particular make provision:

(a) for the incorporation and registration in Great Britain of bodies corporate[5];
(b) for a body incorporated by virtue of the regulations to take such form as may be determined in accordance with the regulations[6];
(c) as to the purposes for which such a body may exist, the investments which it may issue and otherwise as to its constitution[7];
(d) as to the management and operation of such a body and the management of its property[8];
(e) as to the powers, duties, rights and liabilities of such a body and of other persons, including the directors or sole director of such a body[9], its depositary (if any)[10], its shareholders and persons who hold the beneficial title to shares in it without holding the legal title[11], its auditor[12], and any persons who act or purport to act on its behalf[13];

(f) as to the merger of one or more such bodies and the division of such a body[14];
(g) for the appointment and removal of an auditor for such a body[15];
(h) as to the winding up and dissolution of such a body[16];
(i) for such a body, or any director or depositary of such a body, to be required to comply with directions by the Financial Services Authority[17];
(j) enabling the Authority to apply to a court for an order removing and replacing any director or depositary of such a body[18];
(k) for the carrying out of investigations by persons appointed by the Authority or the Secretary of State[19];
(l) corresponding to any provision made in relation to unit trust schemes[20].

Regulations may also:
(i) impose criminal liability[21];
(ii) confer functions on the Authority[22];
(iii) in the case of a provision made by virtue of head (l) above, authorise the making of rules[23] by the Authority[24];
(iv) confer jurisdiction on any court or on the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[25];
(v) provide for fees to be charged by the Authority in connection with the carrying out of any of its functions under the regulations (including fees payable on a periodical basis)[26];
(vi) modify, exclude or apply (with or without modifications) any primary or subordinate legislation (including any provision of, or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000)[27];
(vii) make consequential amendments, repeals and revocations of any such legislation[28];
(viii) modify or exclude any rule of law[29].

No regulations are to be made under the provisions described above unless a draft of the regulations has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House[30].

In exercise of the power to make regulations the Treasury has made the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[31].

27 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 262(3)(f). The provision that may be made by virtue of s 262(3)(f) includes provision extending or adapting any power to make subordinate legislation: s 262(4).
28 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 262(3)(g). Regulations under s 262 may, in particular revoke the Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/2827 (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 262(5)(a)), and provide for things done under or in accordance with those regulations to be treated as if they had been done under or in accordance with regulations under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 262 (s 262(5)(b)). The Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/2827, have been revoked (see the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 85(1)); and anything done under or in accordance with the Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/2827, has effect as if done under or in accordance with the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228 (see reg 85(2)). Without prejudice to the generality of reg 85(2), the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, provide that:
    (1) a body incorporated by virtue of the Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/2827, reg 3(1) (revoked) is to be treated as if it had been incorporated by virtue of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 3(1) (see PARA 623) (reg 85(3)(a));
    (2) where an application under the Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/2827, reg 7 (revoked) had not been determined by the Authority at the time when the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 85 came into force, it is to be treated as if it were an application made under reg 12 (see PARA 627) (reg 85(3)(b));
    (3) the Authority's registration functions under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Pt IV (regs 71–79) (see PARAS 668–670) apply to any documents or records delivered to the appropriate registrar pursuant to the Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/2827, reg 4 and Sch 1 (revoked) (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 85(3)(c)).

Certain provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 apply in relation to notices given under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228:
    (1) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 387 (warning notices) (see PARA 769) applies to a warning notice given under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, in the same way as it applies to a warning notice given under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 8(a));
    (2) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 388 (decision notices) (see PARA 770) applies to a decision notice given under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, in the same way as it applies to a decision notice given under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 8(b));
    (3) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 389 (notices of discontinuance) (see PARA 771) applies to the discontinuance of the action proposed in a warning notice or the action to which a decision notice relates given under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, in the same way as it applies to a warning notice or decision notice given under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 8(c));

(4) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 390 (final notices) (see PARA 772) applies to a decision notice given under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, in the same way as it applies to a decision notice given under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 8(d));

(5) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 391 (publication) (see PARA 774) applies to the notices mentioned in the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 8 in the same way as it applies to any notice given under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 9);

(6) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 395 (procedures of the Financial Services Authority) (see PARAS 773, 777) applies to the procedure relating to the Authority's functions in relation to supervisory notices, warning notices and decision notices given under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228 (reg 10).

The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 133 (which makes general provision in relation to proceedings: see PARA 46), applies to any reference to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228 as it applies to any reference to the Tribunal under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 11. As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.

622. Rules made by the Financial Services Authority. The powers of the Financial Services Authority[1] to make rules under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 in relation to authorised unit trust schemes[2] are, subject to the provisions of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[3], exercisable in relation to open-ended investment companies[4] for like purposes, and subject to the same conditions[5].

The Authority may, on the application or with the consent of any person to whom any FSA rules[6] apply, direct that all or any of the FSA rules: (1) are not to apply to him as respects a particular open-ended investment company[7]; or (2) are to apply to him as respects such a company with such modifications as may be specified in the direction[8].

On the application or with the consent of an open-ended investment company and its depositary[9] acting jointly, the Authority may direct that all or any of the FSA rules: (a) are not to apply to the company[10]; or (b) are to apply to the company with such modifications as may be specified in the direction[11].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

4 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.

5 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 6(1). In the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, any document which a person is required to submit and publish by virtue of rules made by the Authority under reg 6(1) for like purposes to those in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 248 (see PARA 615) is referred to as a prospectus, and 'prospectus' means such a document: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, regs 2(1), 6(2).

6 'FSA rules' means any rules made by the Authority under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 6(1): reg 2(1).

7 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 7(1)(a).

8 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 7(1)(b). In accordance with reg 7(3), the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 148(3)–(9), (11) (modification or waiver of rules) (see PARA 23) has effect in relation to a direction under reg 7(1) as it has effect in relation to a direction under s 148(2) (see PARA 23) but with modifications: see the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 7(3) (amended by SI 2007/1973).

11 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 7(2)(b). In accordance with reg 7(4), the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 148(3)–(9), (11) (modification or waiver of rules) (see PARA 23) has effect in relation to a direction under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 7(2) as it has effect in relation to a direction under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 148(2) but with modifications: see the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 7(4) (amended by SI 2007/1973).

(B) Formation, Supervision and Control

(a) In general

623. Incorporation and registration. If the Financial Services Authority[1] makes an authorisation order[2] then, immediately upon the coming into effect of the order, the body to which the authorisation order relates is to be incorporated as an open-ended investment company[3] (notwithstanding that, at the point of such incorporation, the body will not have any shareholders or property)[4]. The name of an open-ended investment company is the name mentioned in the authorisation order made in respect of the company or, if it changes its name in accordance with the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[5] and FSA rules[6], its new name[7].

Upon making an authorisation order, the Authority must forthwith register:

(1) the instrument of incorporation of the company[8];
(2) a statement of the address of the company's head office[9];
(3) a statement, with respect to each person named in the application for authorisation as director of the company, of the required particulars[10]; and
(4) a statement of the corporate name and registered or principal office of the person named in the application for authorisation as the depositary[11] of the company[12].

If an open-ended investment company which complies with the conditions necessary to enable it to enjoy the rights conferred by the UCITS Directive[13] so requests, the Authority may issue a certificate to the effect that the company complies with those conditions[14]. Such a certificate may be issued on the making of an authorisation order in respect of the company or at any subsequent time[15].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 'Authorisation order' means an order made by the Authority under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 14 (see PARA 628): reg 2(1).
3 For the purposes of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, 'open-ended investment company' means a body incorporated by virtue of reg 3(1) or a body treated as if it had been so incorporated by virtue of reg 85(3)(a) (see PARA 621 note 28): reg 2(1). See also PARA 603.

15 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 17(2).

624. Instruments of incorporation. The Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[1] make provision with respect to the contents, alteration and binding nature of the instrument of incorporation of an open-ended investment company[2].

The instrument of incorporation of an open-ended investment company must contain the following statements[3]:

(1) the head office of the company is situated in England, Wales or Scotland (as the case may be)[4];
(2) the company is an open-ended investment company with variable share capital[5];
(3) the shareholders[6] are not liable for the debts of the company[7];
(4) the scheme property[8] is entrusted to a depositary[9] for safekeeping (subject to any exceptions permitted by FSA rules)[10]; and
(5) charges or expenses of the company may be taken out of the scheme property[11].

The instrument of incorporation must contain provision as to the following matters[12]:

(a) the object of the company[13];
(b) any matter relating to the procedure for the appointment, retirement and removal of any director of the company for which provision is not made in the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[14] or FSA rules[15]; and
(c) the currency in which the accounts of the company are to be prepared[16].

The instrument of incorporation must also contain provision as to the following matters[17]:

(i) the name of the company[18];
(ii) the category, as specified in FSA rules, to which the company belongs[19];
(iii) the maximum and minimum sizes of the company's capital[20];
(iv) in the case of an umbrella company[21], the investment objectives applicable to each part of the scheme property that is pooled separately[22];
(v) the classes of shares that the company may issue indicating, in the case of an umbrella company, which class or classes of shares may be issued in respect of each part of the scheme property that is pooled separately[23];
(vi) the rights attaching to shares of each class (including any provision for the expression in two denominations of such rights)[24];

(vii) if the company is to be able to issue bearer shares, a statement to that effect together with details of any limitations on the classes of the company's shares which are to include bearer shares[25];

(viii) in the case of a company which is a participating issuer, a statement to that effect together with an indication of any class of shares in the company which is a class of participating securities[26];

(ix) if the company is to dispense with the requirements relating to share certificates[27], the details of any substituted procedures for evidencing title to the company's shares[28]; and

(x) the form, custody and use of the company's common seal (if any)[29].

Once an authorisation order has been made in respect of a company, no amendment may be made to the statements contained in the company's instrument of incorporation which are required as set out in heads (1)–(5) above[30]. Subject to this and to any restriction imposed by FSA rules, a company may amend any provision which is contained in its instrument of incorporation[31]. No amendment to a provision which is contained in a company's instrument of incorporation by virtue of heads (a)–(c) above[32] may be made unless it has been approved by the shareholders of the company in general meeting[33].

The provisions of a company's instrument of incorporation are binding on the officers[34] and depositary of the company and on each of its shareholders; and all such persons (but no others) are to be taken to have notice of the provisions of the instrument[35].

625. Registrar's approval of names. Where, in respect of a proposed open-ended investment company[1], it appears to the Financial Services Authority[2] that certain requirements for authorisation[3] are or will be met, the Authority must notify the appropriate registrar[4] of the name by which it is proposed that the company should be incorporated[5].

Every open-ended investment company must obtain the Authority's approval to any proposed change in the name by which the company is incorporated and the Authority must notify the appropriate registrar of the proposed name[6]. If it appears to the appropriate registrar that the provisions in heads (1)–(3) below are not contravened in relation to the proposed name, he must notify the Authority to that effect[7].

No open-ended investment company is to have a name that:

(1) includes any of the following words or expressions: (a) limited, unlimited or public limited company, or their Welsh equivalents ('cyfyngedig', 'anghyfyngedig' and 'cwmni cyfyngedig cyhoeddus' respectively)[8]; or (b) European Economic Interest Grouping or any equivalent[9];

(2) includes an abbreviation of any of the words or expressions referred to in head (1)(a) above[10]; or

(3) is the same as any other name appearing in the registrar's index of company names[11].

Upon making an authorisation order in respect of an open-ended investment company or upon approving any change in the name of such a company, the Authority must notify the appropriate registrar of the name by which the company is incorporated or, as the case may be, of the company's new name[12].

1 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.

2 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

11 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 19(1)(c). The Companies Act 1985 s 714 (prospectively repealed) (registrar's index of company and corporate names) (see COMPANIES vol 7(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 279) (as to replacement provisions see the Companies Act 2006 s 1099) has effect as if the bodies listed in the Companies Act 1985 s 714(1) included open-ended investment companies in respect of which an authorisation order has come into effect (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 20(2)(a)) and collective investment schemes which are open-ended investment companies and which have a head office situated in Northern Ireland (reg 20(2)(b)).

In determining for the purposes of reg 19(1)(c) whether one name is the same as another, there are to be disregarded:

(1) the definite article, where it is the first word of the name (reg 19(2)(a));

(2) the following word and expressions where they appear at the end of the name: (a) 'company' or its Welsh equivalent ('cwmni'); (b) 'and company' or its Welsh equivalent ('a'r cwmni'); (c) 'company limited' or its Welsh equivalent ('cwmni cyfyngedig'); (d) 'limited' or its Welsh equivalent ('cyfyngedig'); (e) 'unlimited' or its Welsh equivalent ('anghyfyngedig'); (f) 'public limited company' or its Welsh equivalent ('cwmni cyfyngedig cyhoeddus'); (g) 'European Economic Interest Grouping' or any equivalent set out in European Economic Interest Grouping Regulations 1989, SI 1989/638, Sch 3; (h) 'investment company with variable capital' or its Welsh equivalent ('cwmni buddsoddi â chyfalaf newidiol'); (i) 'open-ended investment company' or its Welsh equivalent ('cwmni buddsoddiant penagored') (reg 19(2)(b));

(3) abbreviations of any of those words or expressions where they appear at the end of the name (reg 19(2)(c)); and

(4) type and case of letters, accents, spaces between letters and punctuation marks (reg 19(2)(d)), and 'and' and '&' are to be taken as the same (reg 19(2)).

12 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 20(1).

626. Depositaries and safekeeping of property. All the scheme property[1] of an open-ended investment company[2] must be entrusted for safekeeping to a person appointed for the purpose (the 'depositary')[3]. However, nothing in that requirement:

(1) applies to any scheme property designated[4] by FSA rules[5];

(2) prevents a depositary from entrusting to a third party all or some of the assets in its safekeeping[6] or, in such a case, authorising the third party to entrust all or some of those assets to other specified persons[7].

On the coming into effect of an authorisation order[8] in respect of an open-ended investment company, the person named in the authorisation application[9] as depositary of the company is deemed to be appointed as its first depositary[10]. Any subsequent appointment of the depositary of a company must be made by the directors of the company[11].

Except upon the appointment of a new depositary, the depositary of a company may not retire voluntarily[12].

The depositary of a company has the following rights:

(a) to receive all such notices of, and other communications relating to, any general meeting of the company as a shareholder of the company is entitled to receive[13];

(b) to attend any general meeting of the company[14];

(c) to be heard at any general meeting which it attends on any part of the business of the meeting which concerns it as depositary[15];

(d) to convene a general meeting of the company when it sees fit[16];

(e) to require from the company's officers[17] such information and explanations as it thinks necessary for the performance of its functions as depositary[18]; and

(f) to have access, except in so far as they concern its appointment or removal, to any reports, statements or other papers which are to be considered at any meeting held by the directors of the company (when acting in their capacity as such), at any general meeting of the company or at any meeting of holders of shares of any particular class[19].

Where the depositary of a company ceases, for any reason other than by virtue of a court order[20], to hold office, it may deposit at the head office of the company a statement of any circumstances connected with its ceasing to hold office which it considers should be brought to the attention of the shareholders or creditors of the company or, if it considers that there are no such circumstances, a statement that there are none[21]. If such a statement is of circumstances which the depositary considers should be brought to the attention of the shareholders or creditors of the company, the company must, not later than 14 days after the deposit of the statement, either:

(i) send a copy of the statement to each of the shareholders whose name appears on the register of shareholders[22] (other than the designated person) and take such steps as FSA rules[23] may require for the purpose of bringing the fact that the statement has been made to the attention of the holders of any bearer shares[24]; or

Where an application is made under head (ii) above, the company must notify the depositary[26]. Unless the depositary receives notice of such application to the court before the end of the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which it deposited the statement, it must, not later than seven days after the end of that period, send a copy of the statement to the Financial Services Authority[27].

If the court is satisfied that the depositary is using the statement to secure needless publicity for defamatory matter it must direct that copies of the statement need not be sent out and that the steps required by FSA rules need not be taken[28]. It may also order the company's costs on the application to be paid in whole or in part by the depositary notwithstanding that the depositary is not a party to the application[29]. The company must, not later than 14 days after the court's decision, take such steps in relation to a statement setting out the effect of the order as are required in head (i) above in relation to the statement deposited[30].

If the court is not so satisfied, the company must, not later than 14 days after the court's decision, take the steps required by head (i) above and notify the depositary of the court's decision[31]. The depositary must, not later than seven days after receiving such a notice, send a copy of the statement to the Authority[32].

The depositary who made the statement has, notwithstanding that it has ceased to hold office, the rights set out in heads (a) to (c) above[33] in relation to the general meeting of the company next following the date on which the copies were sent out[34].

(b) Authorisation

627. Applications for authorisation. Any application for an authorisation order[1] in respect of a proposed open-ended investment company[2]:

(1) must be made in such manner as the Financial Services Authority[3] may direct[4];
(2) must state the required particulars with respect to each person proposed in the application as a director of the company[5];
(3) must state the corporate name and registered or principal office of the person proposed in the application as depositary[6] of the company[7]; and
(4) must contain or be accompanied by such other information as the Authority may reasonably require for the purpose of determining the application[8].

An application for an authorisation order must contain the following particulars with respect to each person proposed as a director of the company:

(a) in the case of an individual, his present name[9], any former name[10], his usual residential address, his nationality, his business occupation (if any), particulars of any other directorships[11] held by him or which have been held by him and his date of birth[12];
(b) in the case of a body corporate or Scottish firm, its corporate or firm name and the address of its registered or principal office[13].

At any time after receiving an application and before determining it the Authority may require the applicant to furnish additional information[14].

A person commits an offence if, for the purposes of or in connection with any application for authorisation[15] or in purported compliance with any requirement imposed on him[16], he furnishes information which he knows to be false or misleading in a material particular or recklessly furnishes information which is false or misleading in a material particular[17].

8 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 12(1)(d).
9 'Name' means a person's Christian name (or other forename) and surname, except that in the case of a peer, or an individual usually known by a title, the title may be stated instead of his Christian name (or other forename) and surname or in addition to either or both of them: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 13(4)(a).
10 The reference to a former name does not include:

(1) in the case of a peer, or an individual normally known by a British title, the name by which he was known previous to the adoption of or succession to the title (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 13(4)(b)(i));
(2) in the case of any person, a former name which was changed or disused before he attained the age of 18 years or which has been changed or disused for 20 years or more (reg 13(4)(b)(ii)); or
(3) in the case of a married woman, the name by which she was known previous to the marriage (reg 13(4)(b)(iii)).

11 The reference in the text to directorships is a reference to directorships in any body corporate whether or not incorporated in Great Britain: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 13(4)(c). As to the meaning of 'Great Britain' see PARA 2 note 3.

The application need not contain particulars of a directorship:
(1) which has not been held by a director at any time during the five years preceding the date on which the application is delivered to the Authority (reg 13(2)(a));
(2) which is held by a director in a body corporate which is dormant and, if he also held that directorship for any period during those five years, which was dormant for the whole of that period (reg 13(2)(b)); or
(3) which was held by a director for any period during those five years in a body corporate which was dormant for the whole of that period (reg 13(2)(c)).

A body corporate is dormant during a period in which no significant transaction occurs, and it ceases to be dormant on the occurrence of such a transaction: reg 13(3). The reference to a significant transaction in reg 13(3) is, in relation to a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 1985 s 735(1) (prospectively repealed) (see COMPANIES) (as to replacement provisions see the Companies Act 2006 ss 1, 1171), a reference to a significant accounting transaction within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 s 1169(2), other than a transaction to which s 1169(3) applies (see COMPANIES): Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 13(5) (amended by SI 2008/948).

14 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 12(2). Different directions may be given and different requirements imposed in relation to different applications: reg 12(3). Any information to be furnished to the Authority under reg 12 must be in such form or verified in such manner as it may specify: reg 12(4).

15 Ie any application under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 12.

16 Ie imposed by or under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 12.

17 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 12(5). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both (reg 12(6)(a)); and is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both (reg 12(6)(b)). As to the statutory maximum see PARA 56 note 24.

628. Authorisation orders. Where an application is duly made[1], the Financial Services Authority[2] may make an authorisation order in respect of an open-ended investment company[3] if:

(1) it is satisfied that the company will, on the coming into effect of the authorisation order, comply with the requirements for authorisation[4];
(2) it is satisfied that the company will, at that time, comply with the requirements of FSA rules[5];
(3) it has been provided with a copy of the proposed company's instrument of incorporation[6] and a certificate signed by a solicitor to the effect that the instrument of incorporation complies with the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[7] and with such of the requirements of FSA rules as relate to the contents of that instrument of incorporation[8]; and
(4) it has received a notification[9] from the appropriate registrar[10].

If the Authority makes an authorisation order[11], it must give written notice of the order to the applicant[12].

An application must be determined by the Authority before the end of the period of six months beginning with the date on which it receives a completed application[13]. The Authority may determine an incomplete application if it considers it appropriate to do so and, if it does so, it must determine the application within the period of 12 months beginning with the date on which it first receives the application[14].

The applicant may withdraw his application, by giving the Authority written notice, at any time before the Authority determines it[15].

An authorisation order must specify the date on which it is to come into effect[16].

16 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 14(7).

629. Requirements for authorisation. There are several requirements under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[1] in regard to authorisation[2]. The company and its instrument of incorporation[3] must comply with the requirements of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001 and FSA rules[4].

The head office of the company must be situated in England, Wales, or Scotland[5]. The company must have at least one director[6]. The directors of the company must be fit and proper persons to act as such[7]. If the company has only one director, that director must be a body corporate which is an authorised person[8] and which has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[9] to act as sole director of an open-ended investment company[10]. If the company has two or more directors, the combination of their experience and expertise must be such as is appropriate for the purposes of carrying on the business of the company[11]. The person appointed as the depositary[12] of the company:

(1) must be a body corporate incorporated in the United Kingdom[13] or another EEA state[14];
(2) must have a place of business in the United Kingdom[15];
(3) must have its affairs administered in the country in which it is incorporated[16];
(4) must be an authorised person[17];
(5) must have permission under Part IV of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to act as the depositary of an open-ended investment company[18]; and
(6) must be independent of the company and of the persons appointed as directors of the company[19].

The name of the company must not be undesirable or misleading[20], and the aims of the company must be reasonably capable of being achieved[21].

The company must meet one or both of the following requirements:

(a) shareholders[22] are entitled to have their shares redeemed or repurchased upon request at a price related to the net value of the scheme property[23] and determined in accordance with the company's instrument of incorporation and FSA rules[24]; or
(b) shareholders are entitled to sell their shares on an investment exchange at a price not significantly different from that mentioned in head (a)[25].

7 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 15(5). In determining whether the requirement referred to in reg 15(5) is satisfied in respect of any proposed director of a company, the Financial Services Authority may take into account:
   (1) any matter relating to any person who is or will be employed by or associated with the proposed director, for the purposes of the business of the company (reg 14(3)(a));
   (2) if the proposed director is a body corporate, any matter relating to any director or controller of the body, to any other body corporate in the same group, or to any director or controller of any such other body corporate (reg 14(3)(b));

630. Refusal of authorisation. If the Financial Services Authority[1] proposes to refuse an application for authorisation[2], it must give the applicant a warning notice[3]. If the Authority decides to refuse the application it must give the applicant a decision notice[4] and the applicant may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[5].

As to the application of relevant provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 in relation to references to the Financial and Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 621 note 31. As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.

631. Approval of the Financial Services Authority required for certain changes. An open-ended investment company[1] must give written notice to the Financial Services Authority[2] of:

(1) any proposed alteration to the company's instrument of incorporation[3];
(2) any proposed alteration to the company's prospectus[4] which, if made, would be significant[5];
(3) any proposed reconstruction or amalgamation involving the company[6];
(4) any proposal to wind up the affairs of the company otherwise than by the court[7];
(5) any proposal to replace a director of the company, to appoint any additional director, or to decrease the number of directors in post[8]; and
(6) any proposal to replace the depositary[9] of the company[10].

Any proposal falling within heads (1) to (6) above may not be give effect unless: (a) the Authority, by written notice, has given its approval to the proposal[11]; or (b) one month, beginning with the date on which notice of the proposal was given, has expired without the company or the depositary having received from the Authority a warning notice[12] in respect of the proposal[13].

If the Financial Services Authority proposes to refuse approval of a proposal to replace the depositary or any director of an open-ended investment company, it must give a warning notice[14] to the company[15]. If the Authority proposes to refuse approval of any other proposal[16], it must give separate warning notices to the company and its depositary[17]. In order to be valid, the warning notice must be received by that person before the end of one month beginning with the date on which notice of the proposal was given[18].

If, having given a warning notice to a person, the Authority decides to refuse approval, it must give him a decision notice[19]; and he may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[20]. If, having given a warning notice to a person, the Authority decides to approve the proposal, it must give him a written notice[21].

632. Revocation. The Financial Services Authority[1] may revoke an authorisation order[2] if it appears to it that:

(1) any requirement for the making of the order is no longer satisfied[3];
(2) the company, any of its directors or its depositary[4] has contravened any relevant provision[5] or has, in purported compliance with any such provision, knowingly or recklessly given the Authority information which is false or misleading in a material particular[6];
(3) no regulated activity has been carried on in relation to the company for the previous 12 months[7]; or
(4) it is desirable to revoke the authorisation order in order to protect the interests of shareholders[8] or potential shareholders in the company[9].

For the purposes of head (4) above, the Authority may take into account any matter relating to:

(a) the company or its depositary[10];
(b) any director or controller of the depositary[11];

(c) any person employed by or associated, for the purposes of the business of the company, with the company or its depositary[12];
(d) any director of the company[13];
(e) any person exercising influence over any director of the company or its depositary[14];
(f) any body corporate in the same group as any director of the company or its depositary[15];
(g) any director of any such body corporate[16];
(h) any person exercising influence over any such body corporate[17];
(i) any person who would be such a person as is mentioned in the 'fit and proper person' requirement[18] were it to apply to a director as it applies to a proposed director[19].

Before revoking any authorisation order that has come into effect, the Authority must ensure that such steps as are necessary and appropriate to secure the winding up of the company (whether by the court[20] or otherwise) have been taken[21].

If the Authority proposes to make an order revoking an authorisation order (a 'revoking order'), it must give separate warning notices[22] to the company and its depositary[23]. If, having given warning notices, the Authority decides to make a revoking order it must without delay give the company and its depositary a decision notice[24] and either of them may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[25].

(c) Powers of Intervention

633. Directions. The Financial Services Authority[1] may give a direction[2] if it appears to it that:

(1) one or more requirements for the making of an authorisation order[3] are no longer satisfied[4];

(2) the company, any of its directors or its depositary[5] has contravened or is likely to contravene any relevant provision[6], or has, in purported compliance with any such provision, knowingly or recklessly given the Authority information which is false or misleading in a material particular[7]; or

(3) it is desirable to give a direction in order to protect the interests of shareholders or potential shareholders in the company[8].

A direction[9] may:

(a) require the company to cease the issue or redemption, or both the issue and redemption, of shares or any class of shares in the company[10];

(b) in the case of a director of the company who is the designated person[11], require that director to cease transfers to or from, or both to and from, his own holding of shares, or of any class of shares, in the company[12];

(c) in the case of an umbrella company[13], require that investments made in respect of one or more parts of the scheme property[14] which are pooled separately be realised and, following the discharge of such liabilities of the company as are attributable to the relevant part or parts of the scheme property, that the resulting funds be distributed to shareholders[15] in accordance with FSA rules[16];

(d) require any director of the company to present a petition to the court[17] to wind up the company[18]; or

(e) require that the affairs of the company be wound up otherwise than by the court[19].

If the authorisation order is revoked, the revocation does not affect the operation of any direction[20] which is then in force; and a direction may be given in relation to a company in the case of which an authorisation order has been revoked if such a direction was already in force at the time of revocation[21]. However, where a winding-up order has been made by the court, no such direction is to have effect in relation to the company concerned[22].

If a person contravenes a direction[23], the provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 relating to actions for damages[24] applies to that contravention[25].

The Authority may, on its own initiative or on the application of the company or its depositary, revoke or vary a direction[26] if it appears to the Authority, in the case of revocation, that it is no longer necessary for the direction to take effect or continue in force[27], and, in the case of variation, that the direction should take effect or continue in force in a different form[28].

634. Procedure in regard to directions. A direction[1] takes effect: (1) immediately, if the notice[2] states that that is the case[3]; (2) on such date as may be specified in the notice[4]; or (3) if no date is specified in the notice, when the matter to which it relates is no longer open to review[5].

A direction may be expressed to take effect immediately (or on a specified date) only if the Financial Services Authority[6], having regard to the ground on which it is exercising its power[7], considers that it is necessary for the direction to take effect immediately (or on that date)[8].

If the Authority proposes to give a direction[9], or gives such a direction with immediate effect, it must give separate written notices to the company and its depositary[10]. The notice must:

(a) give details of the direction[11];
(b) inform the person to whom it is given of when the direction takes effect[12];
(c) state the Authority's reasons for giving the direction and for its determination as to when the direction takes effect[13];
(d) inform the person to whom it is given that he may make representations to the Authority within such period as may be specified in it (whether or not he has referred the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal)[14]; and

If the direction imposes certain specific requirements in regard to the cessation of share issues and transfers[16], the notice must state that the requirement has effect until either a specified date, or a further direction[17].

If the direction imposes certain specific requirements in regard to the winding up of the company[18], the petition must be presented (or, as the case may be, the company must be wound up) either by a date specified in the notice, or (if no date is specified) as soon as possible[19].

The Authority may extend the period allowed under the notice for making representations[20].

If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides to give the direction in the way proposed[21] or if it decides, where a direction has been given, not to revoke the direction[22], the Authority must give separate written notices to the company and its depositary[23].

If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides not to give the direction in the way proposed[24], to give the direction in a way other than that proposed[25], or to revoke a direction which has effect[26], then it must give separate written notices to the company and its depositary[27]. If a notice informs a person of his right to refer a matter to the Tribunal[28], it must give an indication of the procedure on such a reference[29].

The provisions described above[30] apply to the variation of a direction on the Authority's own initiative as they apply to the giving of a direction[31].

If on an application[32] for a direction[33] to be revoked or varied the Authority proposes to vary the direction otherwise than in accordance with the application[34] or to refuse to revoke or vary the direction[35], it must give the applicant a warning notice[36]. If the Authority decides to refuse to revoke or vary the direction, it must give the applicant a decision notice[37] and the applicant may refer the matter to the Tribunal[38]. If the Authority decides on its own initiative to revoke a direction[39], it must give separate written notices of its decision to the company and its depositary[40]. If, on an application[41] for a direction to be revoked or varied, the Authority decides to revoke or vary it in accordance with the application, it must give the applicant written notice of its decision[42]. The notice[43] must specify the date on which the decision takes effect[44].

The Authority may publish such information about the revocation or variation in such way as it considers appropriate[45].

635. Applications to the High Court. In situations where the Financial Services Authority[1] could give a direction[2] in relation to an open-ended investment company[3], it may apply to the High Court for an order removing the depositary[4] or any director of the company and replacing any such person with a person or persons nominated by the Authority[5].

If it appears to the Authority that there is no person whom it may nominate for the above purposes[6], it may apply to the court for an order removing the director in question or the depositary (or both) and appointing an authorised person[7] to wind up the company[8]. On such an application[9] the court may make such order as it thinks fit[10].

The Authority must:

(1) give written notice of the making of an application[11] to the company[12], its depositary[13] and, where the application seeks the removal of any director of the company, that director[14]; and

(2) take such steps as it considers appropriate for bringing the making of the application to the attention of the shareholders of the company[15].

(d) Winding Up and Dissolution

636. Winding up by the court. Where an open-ended investment company[1] is wound up as an unregistered company under Part V of the Insolvency Act 1986[2], the provisions of that Act apply for the purposes of the winding up with a number of modifications[3].

Where a petition for the winding up of an open-ended investment company is presented by a person other than the Financial Services Authority[4]: (1) that person must serve a copy of the petition on the Authority[5]; and (2) the Authority is entitled to be heard on the petition[6].

1 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.

2 Ie the Insolvency Act 1986 Pt V (ss 220–229).

3 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 31(1). The modifications are as follows:

(1) a petition for the winding up of an open-ended investment company may be presented by the depositary of the company as well as by any person authorised under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 124 (application for winding up) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 450 et seq) or s 124A (petition for winding up on grounds of public interest) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 444), as those provisions apply by virtue of Pt V, to present a petition for the winding up of the company (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 31(2));

(2) if, before the presentation of a petition for the winding up by the court of an open-ended investment company as an unregistered company under the Insolvency Act 1986 Pt V, the affairs of the company are being wound up otherwise than by the court:

(a) s 129(2) (commencement of winding up by the court) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 489) is not to apply (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 31(4)(a)); and

(b) any winding up of the company by the court is to be deemed to have commenced at the time at which the Authority gave its approval to a proposal mentioned in reg 21(1)(d) (see PARA 631), or in a case falling within reg 21(3)(b) (see PARA 631), on the day following the end of the one-month period mentioned in reg 21(3)(b) (reg 31(4)(b)).

As to the meaning of 'depositary' see PARA 626.

4 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

6 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 31(3)(b).

637. Dissolution on winding up by the court. The provisions in Part V of the Insolvency Act 1986[1] in regard to the winding up of unregistered companies on the final meeting of creditors and vacation of office by the liquidator[2] have effect, in relation to open-ended investment companies[3], as if the reference to the registrar of companies was a reference to the Financial Services Authority[4].

Where, in respect of an open-ended investment company, the Authority receives:

(1) a notice given for the purposes of the final meeting of creditors and vacation of office by the liquidator as described above[5]; or

(2) a notice from the official receiver that the winding up, by the court, of the company is complete[6], the Authority must, on receipt of the notice, forthwith register it and[7], at the end of the period of three months beginning with the day of the registration of the notice, the company is to be dissolved[8]. The Secretary of State[9] may, on the application of the official receiver or any other person who appears to the Secretary of State to be interested, give a direction deferring the date at which the dissolution of the company is to take effect for such period as the Secretary of State thinks fit[10]. An appeal to the court lies from any decision of the Secretary of State on such an application for a direction[11].

It is the duty of the person:

(a) on whose application such a direction[12] is given[13];
(b) in whose favour an appeal with respect to an application for such a direction is determined[14]; or
(c) on whose application an order for deferral is made where the winding-up order was made by the court in Scotland[15], not later than seven days after the giving of the direction, the determination of the appeal or the making of the order, to deliver to the Authority for registration a copy of the direction or determination or, in respect of an order under head (c) above, a certified copy of the interlocutor[16]. If a person without reasonable excuse fails to fulfil this duty to deliver a copy[17], he is guilty of an offence[18].

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction: (1) to a fine not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale (reg 32(8)(a)); and (2) on a second or subsequent conviction, instead of to the penalty set out in head (1) above, to a fine of £100 for each day on which the contravention is continued (reg 32(8)(b)). As to the standard scale see PARA 27 note 21.

638. Dissolution in other circumstances. Where the affairs of an open-ended investment company[1] have been wound up otherwise than by the court, the Financial Services Authority[2] must, as soon as is reasonably practicable after the winding up is complete, register that fact and[3], at the end of the period of three months beginning with the day of the registration, the company is to be dissolved[4].

The court may, on the application of the Authority or the company, make an order deferring the date at which the dissolution of the company is to take effect for such period as the court thinks fit[5]. It is the duty of the company, on whose application such an order of the court[6] is made, to deliver to the Authority, not later than seven days after the making of the order, a copy of the order for registration[7].

Where any company, the head office of which is situated in England or Wales, is dissolved[8], any sum of money (including unclaimed distributions) standing to the account of the company at the date of the dissolution must, on such date as is determined in accordance with FSA rules[9], be paid into court[10].

10 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 33(4).
Where any company, the head office of which is situated in Scotland, is dissolved, any sum of money (including unclaimed dividends and unapplied or undistributable balances) standing to the account of the company at the date of the dissolution must, on such date as is determined in accordance with FSA rules, be lodged in an appropriate bank or institution as defined in the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 s 73(1) in the name of the Accountant of the Court (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 33(5)(a)) and thereafter be treated as if it were a sum of money lodged in such an account by virtue of the Insolvency Act 1986 s 193 (unclaimed dividends (Scotland)) as that provision applies by virtue of Pt V (ss 220–229) (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 33(5)(b)).

(C) Corporate Code

(a) Administrative Provisions

639. Directors. On the coming into effect of an authorisation order[1] in respect of an open-ended investment company[2], the persons proposed in the application for authorisation[3] as directors of the company are deemed to be appointed as its first directors[4]. Any subsequent appointment as a director of a company must be made by the company in general meeting, except that the directors of the company may appoint a person to act as director to fill any vacancy until such time as the next annual general meeting of the company takes place or, if the company does not hold annual general meetings, the directors of the company may appoint a person to act as director[5].

Any act of a director is valid notwithstanding any defect that may thereafter be discovered in his appointment or qualifications[6] or that it is afterwards discovered that his appointment had terminated by virtue of any provision contained in FSA rules[7] which required a director to retire upon attaining a specified age[8].

The business of a company must be managed: (1) where a company has only one director, by that director[9]; or (2) where a company has more than one director, by the directors but subject to any provision contained in FSA rules as to the allocation between the directors of responsibilities for the management of the company (including any provision there may be as to the allocation of such responsibility to one or more directors to the exclusion of others)[10].

Subject to the provisions of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[11], FSA rules and the company's instrument of incorporation, the directors of a company may exercise all the powers of the company[12].

The matters to which a director of an open-ended investment company must have regard in the performance of his functions include the interests of the company's employees in general, as well as the interests of its shareholders[13]. This duty[14] on a director is owed by him to the company (and the company alone) and is enforceable in the same way as any other fiduciary duty owed to a company by its directors[15].

2 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.

5 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 34(2) (substituted by SI 2005/923). The Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 34(2) is subject to reg 21 (see PARA 631) and reg 26 (see PARA 635).

The directors of an open-ended investment company must, on a members' requisition, forthwith proceed duly to convene an extraordinary general meeting of the company and this applies notwithstanding anything in the company's instrument of incorporation: reg 34A(1) (reg 34A added by SI 2005/923). A members' requisition is a requisition (1) by members of the company holding at the date of the deposit of the requisition not less than one-tenth of such of the paid-up capital of the company as at that date carries the right of voting at general meetings of the company; and (2) which states as the object of the meeting the removal of one or more directors appointed in accordance with the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 34(2) and which must be signed by the requisitionists and deposited at the registered office of the company: reg 34A(2) (as so added). As to instruments of incorporation see PARA 624.

A company may by ordinary resolution at an extraordinary general meeting convened in accordance with reg 34A(1) remove any director or directors appointed in accordance with reg 34(2): reg 34A(3) (as so added). Regulation 34A is not to be treated as depriving a person removed under it of compensation or damages payable to him in respect of the termination of his appointment as director or as derogating from any power to remove a director which exists apart from that provision: reg 34A(4) (as so added).

640. Inspection of directors' service contracts. Every open-ended investment company[1] must keep at an appropriate place[2]: (1) in the case of each director whose contract of service with the company is in writing, a copy of that contract[3]; and (2) in the case of each director whose contract of service with the company is not in writing, a written memorandum setting out its terms[4].

All copies and memoranda kept by a company in accordance with heads (1) and (2) above must be kept at the same place[5]. Every copy and memorandum required by heads (1) and (2) above to be kept must be open to the inspection of any shareholder[6] of the company[7]. If such an inspection is refused, the High Court may by order compel an immediate inspection of the copy or memorandum concerned[8]. Every copy and memorandum required to be kept by heads (1) and (2) above must be made available, for inspection, by the company at the company's annual general meeting[9] or, if the company does not hold annual general meetings, sent to any shareholder at his request within ten days of the company's receipt of such request by the company for inspection by any shareholder at the company's annual general meeting[10].

The requirements in heads (1) and (2) above apply to a variation of a director's contract of service as they apply to the contract[11].

1 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.
2 Appropriate places are the company's head office (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 36(3)(a)), the place where the company's register of shareholders is kept (reg 36(3)(b)) and, where the designated person is a director of the company and is a body corporate, the registered or principal office of that person (reg 36(3)(c)).

11 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 36(7).

641. General meetings. Every open-ended investment company[1] incorporated before 6 April 2005 must in each year hold a general meeting (the 'annual general meeting')[2] in addition to any other meetings, whether general or otherwise, it may hold in that year[3]. However, if a company holds its first annual general meeting within 18 months of the date on which the authorisation order made by the Financial Services Authority[4] in respect of the company comes into effect, the company is not required[5] to hold any other meeting as its annual general meeting in the year of its incorporation or in the following year[6]. In addition, the directors of an open-ended investment company may elect to dispense with the holding of an annual general meeting by giving 60 days' written notice to all the company's shareholders[7].

Subject to the above[8], not more than 15 months may elapse between the date of one annual general meeting of a company and the date of the next[9].

1 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.

642. Name and particulars to be mentioned in documents. Every open-ended investment company[1] must have its name mentioned in legible characters in all letters of the company and in all other documents issued by the company in the course of business[2].

If an officer[3] of a company or a person on the company's behalf signs or authorises to be signed on behalf of the company any cheque or order for money or goods in which the company's name is not mentioned as required above[4], he is personally liable to the holder of the cheque or order for money or goods for the amount of it (unless it is duly paid by the company)[5].

Every open-ended investment company must have the following particulars mentioned in legible characters in all letters of the company and in all other documents issued by the company in the course of business:

(1) the company's place of registration[6];
(2) the number with which it is registered[7];
(3) the address of its head office[8]; and
(4) the fact that it is an investment company with variable capital[9].

Where, in accordance with reg 72 (see PARA 668), the Financial Services Authority makes any change of existing registered numbers in respect of any open-ended investment company then, for a period of three years beginning with the date on which the notification of the change is sent to the company by the Authority, the requirement of reg 55(1)(b) is, notwithstanding reg 72(4), satisfied by the use of either the old number or the new: reg 55(2). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

9 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 55(1)(d).

643. Power and capacity of company, etc. An open-ended investment company[1] has power to do all such things as are incidental or conducive to the carrying on of its business[2].

The validity of an act done by an open-ended investment company cannot be called into question on the ground of lack of capacity by reason of anything in the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[3], FSA rules[4] or the company's instrument of incorporation[5]. However, this does not affect the duty of the directors to observe any limitation on their powers[6].

In favour of a person dealing in good faith: (1) the power of the directors of an open-ended investment company (whether or not acting as a board) to bind the company, or authorise others to do so[7]; and (2) the power of such a company in general meeting to bind the company, or authorise others to do so[8], are deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution[9]. This does not affect any liability incurred by the directors or any other person by reason of the directors exceeding their powers[10].

A party to a transaction with an open-ended investment company is not bound to inquire:

(a) as to whether the transaction is permitted by the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[11], FSA rules or the company's instrument of incorporation[12]; or

(b) as to any limitation on the powers referred to in head (1) or head (2) above[13].

A person is not to be taken to have notice of any matter merely because of its being disclosed in any document made available by an open-ended investment company for inspection; but this does not affect the question whether a person is affected by notice of any matter by reason of a failure to make such inquiries as ought reasonably to be made[14].

8 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 39(1)(b).
9 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 39(1). The reference in reg 39(1) to any limitation under the company's constitution on the powers therein set out includes any limitation deriving from the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, from FSA rules or from a resolution of the company in general meeting or of a meeting of any class of shareholders: reg 39(3). As to general meetings see PARA 641; and as to shareholders see PARA 624 note 6. As to the meaning of 'FSA rules' see PARA 622 note 6.

For the purposes of reg 39:

(1) a person deals with a company if he is party to any transaction or other act to which the company is a party (reg 39(2)(a));

(2) a person is not to be regarded as acting in bad faith by reason only of his knowing that, under the company's constitution, an act is beyond any of the powers referred to in reg 39(1)(a) or (b) (see heads (1) and (2) in the text) (reg 39(2)(b)); and

(3) a person is presumed to have acted in good faith unless the contrary is proved (reg 39(2)(c)).

Heads (2) and (3) above do not apply where:

(a) by virtue of a limitation deriving from the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, or from FSA rules, an act is beyond any of the powers referred to in reg 39(1)(a) or (b) (see heads (1) and (2) in the text) (reg 39(4)(a)); and

(b) the person in question has actual knowledge of that fact (reg 39(4)(b)(i)) or has deliberately failed to make inquiries in circumstances in which a reasonable and honest person would have done so (reg 39(4)(b)(ii)).

644. Restraint and ratification by shareholders. A shareholder[1] of an open-ended investment company[2] may bring proceedings to restrain the doing of an act which but for the statutory provisions relating to company capacity[3] would be beyond the company's capacity[4]. The provisions relating to the powers of directors and the general meeting to bind the company[5] do not affect any right of a shareholder of an open-ended investment company to bring proceedings to restrain the doing of an act which is beyond any of the powers referred to in those provisions[6].

Any action by the directors of a company: (1) which, but for the provision on company capacity[7], would be beyond the company's capacity[8]; or (2) which is within the company's capacity but beyond the powers of directors to bind the company[9], may only be ratified by a resolution of the company in general meeting[10]. A resolution ratifying such an action does not affect any liability incurred by the directors or any other person, as relief from any such liability requires agreement by a separate resolution of the company in general meeting[11].

Nothing in the provisions described above[12] affects any power or right conferred by or arising under the provisions in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 relating to actions for damages[13] or injunctions and restitution orders[14].

No proceedings may be brought under reg 42(1) in respect of an act to be done in fulfilment of a legal obligation arising from a previous act of the company; and reg 42(2) (see the text and note 6) does not have the effect of enabling proceedings to be brought in respect of any such act: reg 42(3).

645. Events affecting company status. Where either of the conditions mentioned in heads (a) and (b) below[1] is satisfied, an open-ended investment company[2] is not entitled to rely against other persons on the happening of any of the following events:

(1) any alteration of the company's instrument of incorporation[3];
(2) any change among the directors of the company[4];
(3) as regards service of any document on the company, any change in the situation of the head office of the company[5]; or
(4) the making of a winding-up order in respect of the company or, in circumstances in which the affairs of a company are to be wound up otherwise than by the court, the commencement of the winding up[6].

The conditions mentioned above are that:

(a) the event in question had not been officially notified[7] at the material time and is not shown by the company to have been known at that time by the other person concerned[8]; and
(b) if the material time fell on or before the fifteenth day after the date of official notification (or where the fifteenth day was a non-business day, on or before the next day that was a business day), it is shown that the other person concerned was unavoidably prevented from knowing of the event at that time[9].

7 For the purposes of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 43, 'official notification' means the notification in the Gazette (by virtue of reg 78 (see PARA 670)) of any document containing the information referred to in reg 43(1); and 'officially notified' is to be construed accordingly: reg 43(3).

9 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 43(2)(b).

646. Invalidity of certain transactions involving directors. Where: (1) an open-ended investment company[1] enters into a transaction[2] the parties to which include a director[3] of the company or any person who is an associate[4] of such a director[5]; and (2) in connection with the transaction, the directors of the company (whether or not acting as a board) exceed any limitation on their powers under the company's constitution[6], the transaction is voidable at the instance of the company[7].

Whether or not the transaction is avoided, any such party to the transaction as is mentioned in head (1) above[8], and any director of the company who authorised the transaction, is liable to account to the company for any gain which he has made directly or indirectly by the transaction[9] and to indemnify the company for any loss or damage resulting from the transaction[10].

Nothing in the provisions described above[11] is to be construed as excluding the operation of any other enactment or rule of law by virtue of which the transaction may be called into question or any liability to the company may arise[12].

The transaction ceases to be voidable if:

(a) restitution of any money or other asset which was the subject-matter of the transaction is no longer possible[13];
(b) the company is indemnified for any loss or damage resulting from the transaction[14];
(c) rights which are acquired, bona fide for value and without actual notice of the directors concerned having exceeded their powers, by a person who is not a party to the transaction would be affected by the avoidance[15]; or
(d) the transaction is ratified by resolution of the company in general meeting[16].

6 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 44(1)(b). The reference in reg 44(1)(b) to any limitation on directors' powers under the company's constitution includes any limitation deriving from the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001,

SI 2001/1228, from FSA rules or from a resolution of the company in general meeting or of a meeting of any class of shareholders: reg 44(8)(c). As to the meaning of 'FSA rules' see PARA 622 note 6. As to shareholders see PARA 624 note 6.

647. Contracts, execution of documents, etc. A contract may be made by an open-ended investment company[1] by writing under its common seal[2] or on behalf of such a company, by any person acting under its authority (whether expressed or implied)[3]. Furthermore, any formalities required by law in the case of a contract made by an individual also apply, unless a contrary intention appears, to a contract made by or on behalf of such a company[4].

In relation to the execution of documents by an open-ended investment company[5]:

(1) a document is executed by a company by the affixing of its common seal[6];

(2) a company need not, however, have a common seal, and heads (3) to (5)[7] below apply whether it does or not[8];

(3) a document that is signed by at least one director[9] and expressed (in whatever form of words) to be executed by the company has the same effect as if executed under the common seal of the company[10];

(4) a document executed by a company which makes it clear on its face that it is intended by the person or persons making it to be a deed has effect, upon delivery, as a deed and it is to be presumed, unless a contrary intention is proved, to be delivered upon its being executed[11];

(5) in favour of a purchaser[12], a document is deemed to have been duly executed by a company if it purports to be signed by at least one director or, in the case of a director which is a body corporate, it purports to be executed by that director; and, where it makes it clear on its face that it is intended by the person or persons making it to be a deed, it is deemed to have been delivered upon its being executed[13].

An open-ended investment company may, by writing under its common seal, empower any person, either generally or in respect of any specified matters, as its attorney, to execute deeds on its behalf in any place elsewhere than in the United Kingdom[14]. A deed executed by such an attorney on behalf of the company has the same effect as if it were executed under the company's common seal[15].

A document or proceeding requiring authentication by an open-ended investment company is sufficiently authenticated for the purposes of the law of England and Wales by the signature of a director or other authorised officer of the company[16] or, in the case of a director which is a body corporate, if it is executed by that director[17].

An open-ended investment company which has a common seal may have, for use for sealing shares[18] issued by the company and for sealing documents creating or evidencing shares so issued, an official seal which is a facsimile of its common seal with the addition on its face of the word 'securities'[19]. The official seal when duly affixed to a document has the same effect as the company's common seal[20].

Nothing in reg 60 affects the right of an open-ended investment company whose head office is in Scotland to subscribe such shares and documents in accordance with the Requirements of Writing (Scotland) Act 1995: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 60(3).

648. Personal liability for contracts and deeds. A contract, which purports to be made by or on behalf of an open-ended investment company[1] at a time before the coming into effect of an authorisation order[2] in relation to that company, has effect (subject to any agreement to the contrary) as a contract made with the person purporting to act for the company or as agent for it, and he is accordingly personally liable under the contract[3]. This applies to the making of a deed as it applies to the making of a contract[4].

If a company enters into a transaction at any time after the authorisation order made in respect of the company has been revoked and the company fails to comply with its obligations in respect of that transaction within 21 days of being called upon to do so, the person who authorised the transaction is liable, and where the transaction was authorised by two or more persons they are jointly and severally liable, to indemnify the other party to the transaction in respect of any loss or damage suffered by him by reason of the company's failure to comply with those obligations[5].

Any provision, whether contained in the instrument of incorporation[6] of an open-ended investment company or in any contract with the company or otherwise:

(1) which exempts any officer[7] of the company or any person (whether or not an officer of the company) employed by the company as auditor[8] from, or indemnifies him against, any liability which by virtue of any rule of law would otherwise attach to him in respect of any negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust of which he may be guilty in relation to the company[9]; or

(2) which exempts the depositary[10] of the company from, or indemnifies him against, any liability for any failure to exercise due care and diligence in the discharge of his functions in respect of the company[11], is void[12]. However this does not prevent a company: (a) from purchasing and maintaining for any such officer, auditor or depositary insurance against any such liability[13]; or (b) from indemnifying any such officer, auditor or depositary against any liability incurred by him in defending any proceedings (whether civil or criminal) in which judgment is given in his favour or he is acquitted[14] or in connection with any application[15] in which relief is granted to him by the court[16].

649. Relief from liability. The provisions described below[1] apply to: (1) any proceedings for negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust against an officer[2] of an open-ended investment company[3] or a person (whether or not an officer of the company) employed by the company as auditor[4]; or (2) any proceedings against the depository[5] of such a company for failure to exercise due care and diligence in the discharge of his functions in respect of the company[6].

If, in any such proceedings[7], it appears to the court hearing the case:

(a) that the officer, auditor or depositary is or may be liable in respect of the cause of action in question[8];

(b) that, nevertheless, he has acted honestly and reasonably[9]; and

(c) that, having regard to all the circumstances of the case (including those connected with his appointment), he ought fairly to be excused from the liability sought to be enforced against him[10], the court may relieve him, either wholly or partly, from his liability on such terms as it may think fit[11].

If any such officer, auditor or depositary has reason to apprehend that any claim will or might be made against him in proceedings to which these provisions apply, he may apply to the court for relief[12]. The court, on such an application[13], has the same power to relieve the applicant as it would have had[14] if it had been a court before which the relevant proceedings against the applicant had been brought[15].

(b) Shares

651. Shares generally. An open-ended investment company[1] may issue more than one class of shares[2]. A shareholder[3] may not have any interest in the scheme property[4] of the company[5].

The rights which attach to each share of any given class are:

(1) the right, in accordance with the instrument of incorporation[6], to participate in or receive profits or income arising from the acquisition, holding, management or disposal of the scheme property[7];

(2) the right, in accordance with the instrument of incorporation, to vote at any general meeting[8] of the company or at any relevant class meeting[9]; and

(3) such other rights as may be provided for, in relation to shares of that class, in the instrument of incorporation of the company[10].

In respect of any class of shares, the rights mentioned above[11] may, if the company's instrument of incorporation so provides, be expressed in two denominations; and in the case of any such class, one (the 'smaller') denomination is to be such proportion of the other (the 'larger') denomination as is fixed by the instrument of incorporation[12]. In respect of any class of shares thus expressed in two denominations[13], any share to which rights expressed in the smaller denomination are attached is to be known as a 'smaller denomination share'; and any share to which rights expressed in the larger denomination are attached is to be known as a 'larger denomination share'[14].

In respect of any class of shares, the rights which attach to each share of that class are:

(a) except in respect of a class of shares expressed in two denominations[15], equal to the rights that attach to each other share of that class[16]; and

(b) in respect of a class of shares expressed in two denominations[17], equal to the rights that attach to each other share of that class of the same denomination[18].

652. Share certificates. An open-ended investment company[1] must prepare documentary evidence of title to its shares (known as 'share certificates'[2]) as follows:

(1) in respect of any new shares issued by it[3];

(2) where a shareholder[4] has transferred part only of his holding back to the company, in respect of the remainder of that holding[5];

(3) where a shareholder has transferred part only of his holding to the designated person[6], in respect of the remainder of that holding[7];

(4) where a company has registered a transfer of shares made to a person other than the company or a person designated as mentioned in head (3) above[8], in respect of the shares transferred to the transferee[9] and in respect of any shares retained by the transferor which were evidenced by any certificate sent to the company for the purposes of registering the transfer[10];

(5) in respect of any holding of bearer shares for which a certificate evidencing title has already been issued but where the certificate has been surrendered to the company for the purpose of being replaced by two or more certificates which between them evidence title to the shares comprising that holding[11]; and

(6) in respect of any shares for which a certificate has already been issued but where it appears to the company that the certificate needs to be replaced as a result of having been lost, stolen or destroyed or having become damaged or worn out[12].

A company must exercise due diligence and take all reasonable steps to ensure that certificates prepared in accordance with heads (1) to (5) above[13] are ready for delivery as soon as reasonably practicable[14]. Certificates need be prepared in the circumstances referred to in heads (5) and (6) above[15] only if the company has received:

(a) a request for a new certificate[16];

(b) the old certificate (if there is one)[17];

(c) such indemnity as the company may require[18]; and

(d) such reasonable sum as the company may require in respect of the expenses incurred by it in complying with the request[19].

A company is not required to prepare share certificates in the following cases[20]:

(i) where the company's instrument of incorporation[21] states that share certificates will not be issued and contains provision as to other procedures for evidencing a person's entitlement to shares[22];

(ii) where a shareholder has indicated to the company in writing that he does not wish to receive a certificate[23];

(iii) where shares are issued or transferred to the designated person[24];

(iv) where shares are issued or transferred to a nominee of a recognised investment exchange[25] who is designated for these purposes[26].

Each share certificate must state: (A) the number of shares the title to which is evidenced by the certificate[27]; (B) where the company has more than one class of shares, the class of shares title to which is evidenced by the certificate[28]; and (C) except in the case of bearer shares[29], the name of the holder[30].

A share certificate specifying any shares held by any person which is under the common seal of the company[31], or authenticated in accordance with the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[32], is prima facie evidence of that person's title to the shares[33].

27 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 46(4)(a). Regulation 46(5) provides that where, in respect of any class of shares, the rights that attach to shares of that class are expressed in two denominations, the reference in reg 46(4)(a) (as it applies to shares of that class) to the number of shares is a reference to the total of:

(1) N is the relevant number of the larger denomination shares of the class in question (reg 46(6)(a));
(2) n is the relevant number of the smaller denomination shares of that class (reg 46(6)(b)); and
(3) p is the number of smaller denomination shares of that class that are equivalent to one larger denomination share of that class (reg 46(6)(c)).

Nothing in the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, is to be taken as preventing the total arrived at under reg 46(5) being expressed on the certificate as a single entry representing the result derived from the formula set out above: reg 46(7).

33 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 46(8). In Scotland, a share certificate specifying any shares held by any person which is under the common seal of the company (reg 46(9)(a)), or subscribed by the company in accordance with the Requirements of Writing (Scotland) Act 1995 (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 46(9)(b)), is, unless the contrary is shown, sufficient evidence of that person's title to the shares (reg 46(9)).

653. Bearer shares. An open-ended investment company[1] may, if its instrument of incorporation so provides, issue shares ('bearer shares')[2] evidenced by a share certificate, or by any other documentary evidence of title for which provision is made in its instrument of incorporation, which indicates that the holder of the document is entitled to the shares specified in it[3] and that no entry will be made on the register of shareholders[4] identifying the holder of those shares[5].

1 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.
2 As to the meaning of 'bearer shares' see PARA 626 note 24.
3 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 48(a).
4 As to the register of shareholders see PARA 654.
5 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 48(b).

654. The register of shareholders. Every open-ended investment company[1] must keep a register of persons who hold shares in the company[2]. The register of shareholders is prima facie evidence of any matters which are directed or authorised[3] to be contained in it[4]. In the case of companies registered in England and Wales, no notice of any trust, express, implied or constructive, is to be entered on the company's register or to be receivable by the company[5]. A company must exercise all due diligence and take all reasonable steps to ensure that the information contained in the register is at all times complete and up to date[6].

The register of shareholders must contain an entry consisting of the name of the designated person[7], and a statement of the aggregate number of all shares in the company held by that person[8]. Where a company issues a share to any person and the name of that person is not already entered on the register, the company must enter his name on the register[9].

In respect of any person whose name is entered on the register under these provisions[10] or on the transfer of registered shares[11], the register must contain an entry consisting of:

(1) the address of the shareholder[12];
(2) the date on which the shareholder's name was entered on the register[13];
(3) a statement of the aggregate number of shares held by the shareholder, distinguishing each share by its number (if it has one) and, where the company has more than one class of shares, by its class[14].

The register of shareholders must contain a monthly statement of the aggregate number of all the bearer shares in issue except for any bearer shares in issue which, at the time when the statement is made, are held by the designated person[15].

Where the aggregate number of shares referred to above[16] includes any shares to which rights expressed in two denominations are attached[17], in respect of each class of such shares[18], the number of shares of that class held by any person[19], or the number of bearer shares of that class[20], is to be taken[21] to be the total of:

where:

(a) N is the relevant number of larger denomination shares of that class[22];
(b) n is the relevant number of smaller denomination shares of that class[23]; and
(c) p is the number of smaller denomination shares of that class that are equivalent to one larger denomination share of that class[24].

The register of shareholders of a company must be kept at its head office, except that, if the work of making it up is done at another office of the company, it may be kept there[25] and, if the company arranges with some other person for the making up of the register to be undertaken on its behalf by that other person, it may be kept at the office of the other person at which the work is being done[26].

Every company must keep an index of the names of the holders of its registered shares[27]. The index must contain, in respect of each shareholder, a sufficient indication to enable the account of that shareholder in the register to be readily found[28]. The index must be at all times kept at the same place as the register of shareholders[29]. Not later than 14 days after the date on which any alteration is made to the register of shareholders, the company must make any necessary alteration in the index[30].

The register of shareholders and the index of names must be open to the inspection of any shareholder (including any holder of bearer shares) without charge[31]. Any shareholder may require a copy of the entries on the register relating to him and the company must cause any copy so required by a person to be sent to him free of charge[32]. If an inspection[33] is refused, or if a copy so required is not sent, the High Court may by order compel an immediate inspection of the register and index, or direct that the copy required be sent to the person requiring it[34].

Where the register of shareholders is kept at the office of some person other than the company[35] and by reason of any default of his the company fails to comply with any of the requirements relating to the index or inspection[36], the person at whose office the register of shareholders is kept is guilty of an offence if he knowingly or recklessly authorises or permits the default in question[37].

The power of the court in regard to inspection of the register and index[38] extends to the making of orders directed to the person at whose office the register of shareholders is kept and to any officer or employee of his[39].

655. Closure and rectification of register of shareholders. An open-ended investment company[1] may, on giving notice by advertisement in a national newspaper circulating in all the countries in which shares in the company are sold, close the register of shareholders[2] for any time or times not exceeding, in the whole, 30 days in each year[3]. This is subject to any requirements contained in FSA rules[4].

An application to the High Court to rectify the register of shareholders of an open-ended investment company may be made[5] if:

(1) the name of any person is, without sufficient cause, entered in or omitted from the register[6];

(2) default is made as to the details contained in any entry on the register in respect of a person's holding of shares in the company[7]; or

(3) default is made or unnecessary delay takes place in amending the register so as to reflect the fact of any person having ceased to be a shareholder[8].

Such an application may be made by the person aggrieved, by any shareholder of the company or by the company itself[9].

The court may refuse the application or may order rectification of the register of shareholders and payment by the company of any damages sustained by any party aggrieved[10]. On such an application the court may decide any question necessary or expedient to be decided for rectification of the register including, in particular, any question relating to the right of a person who is a party to the application to have his name entered in or omitted from the register (whether the question arises as between shareholders and alleged shareholders, or as between shareholders or alleged shareholders on the one hand and the company on the other hand)[11].

11 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 51(4).

656. Share transfers. The instrument of incorporation[1] may contain provision as to share transfers for the transfer of registered and bearer shares[2] in an open-ended investment company[3] in respect of any matter for which provision is not made in the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[4] or FSA rules[5]. Where any shares are transferred to the company, the company must cancel those shares[6].

Where a transfer of shares is made by the person (if any) who is designated in the company's instrument of incorporation[7], the company may not register the transfer unless such evidence as the company may require to prove that the transfer has taken place has been delivered to the company[8].

Where for any reason a person ceases to be so designated[9]: (1) any shares held by that person which are not disposed of on or before his ceasing to be so designated are to be deemed to be the subject of a new transfer to him which takes effect immediately after he ceases to be so designated[10]; and (2) the company must make such adjustments to the register[11] as are necessary to reflect his change of circumstances[12].

Except in the case of any transfer of shares mentioned above[13], the company may not register any transfer unless the transfer documents[14] relating to that transfer have been delivered to the company[15]. In the case of any transfer of shares which meets the requirements described above[16], the company must register the transfer[17] and, where the name of the transferee is not already entered on the register, enter that name on the register[18].

A company may, before the end of the period of 21 days commencing with the date of receipt of the transfer documents relating to any transfer of shares, refuse to register the transfer if: (a) there exists a minimum requirement as to the number or value of shares that must be held by any shareholder[19] of the company and the transfer would result in either the transferor or transferee holding less than the required minimum[20]; or (b) the transfer would result in a contravention of any provision of the company's instrument of incorporation or would produce a result inconsistent with any provision of the company's prospectus[21].

A company must give the transferee written notice of any refusal to register a transfer of shares[22]. Nothing in the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[23] requires a company to register a transfer or give notice to any person of a refusal to register a transfer where registering the transfer or giving the notice would result in a contravention of any provision of law (including any law that is for the time being in force in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom)[24].

Where, in respect of any transfer of shares, the company certifies that it has received the transfer documents consisting of a share certificate or such other evidence of title[25] (as the case may be), that certification is to be taken as a representation by the company to any person acting on the faith of the certification that there has been produced to the company such evidence as on its face shows a prima facie title to the shares in the transferor named in the instrument of transfer[26].

Where a person acts on the faith of a false certification by a company which is made negligently or fraudulently, the company is liable to make a payment to that person for any damage sustained by him[27].

A transfer of title to any bearer share in a company is effected by the transfer from one person to another of the relevant instrument[28] which relates to that share[29]. Where the holder of bearer shares proposes to transfer to another person a number of shares which is less than the number specified in the instrument relating to those shares, he may only do so if he surrenders the instrument to the company and obtains a new instrument specifying the number of shares to be transferred[30].

Nothing in the provisions described above[31] prejudices any power of the company to register as shareholder any person to whom the right to any shares in the company has been transmitted by operation of law[32].

A transfer of registered shares that are held by a deceased person at the time of his death which is made by his personal representative is as valid as if the personal representative had been the holder of the shares at the time of the execution of the instrument of transfer[33]. On the death of any one of the joint holders of any shares, the survivor is to be the only person recognised by the company as having any title to or any interest in those shares[34].

   (1) a stock transfer within the meaning of the Stock Transfer Act 1963 (see COMPANIES vol 7(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 872) which complies with the requirements of that Act as to the execution and contents of a stock transfer or such other instrument of transfer as is authorised by, and completed and executed in accordance with any requirements in, the company's instrument of incorporation (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 2(1), Sch 4 para 5(3)(a));
   (2) except in a case falling within reg 47(3) or (4) (see PARA 652), a share certificate relating to the shares in question (reg 2(1), Sch 4 para 5(3)(b));

(3) in a case falling within reg 47(3) (see PARA 652), such other evidence of title to those shares as is required by the instrument of incorporation of the company (reg 2(1), Sch 4 para 5(3)(c)); and

(4) such other evidence (if any) as the company may require to prove the right of the transferor to transfer the shares in question (reg 2(1), Sch 4 para 5(3)(d)).

15 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 4 para 5(1). No share certificate has to be delivered by virtue of Sch 4 para 5(1) in any case where shares are transferred by a nominee of a recognised investment exchange who is designated for the purposes of reg 47(6) (see PARA 652) in the rules of the investment exchange in question: Sch 4 para 5(2).

(c) Reports and Auditors

657. Reports. The directors[1] of an open-ended investment company[2] must prepare a report ('annual report') for each annual accounting period[3] of the company[4] and prepare a report ('half-yearly report') for each half-yearly accounting period[5] of the company[6]. However, where a company's first annual accounting period is a period of less than 12 months, a half-yearly report need not be prepared for any part of that period[7].

The directors of a company must lay copies of the annual report before the company in general meeting[8]. The annual report of an open-ended investment company must, in respect of the annual accounting period to which it relates, contain accounts of the company[9]. The company's auditors[10] must make a report to the company's shareholders in respect of the accounts of the company contained in its annual report[11]. A copy of the auditor's report must form part of the company's annual report[12].

If it appears to the directors of an open-ended investment company that any annual report of the company did not comply with the requirements of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[13] or FSA rules, they may prepare a revised annual report[14]. Where copies of the previous report have been laid before the company in general meeting or delivered to the Financial Services Authority, the revisions must be confined to the correction of anything in the previous report which did not comply with the requirements of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001 or FSA rules[15] and the making of any necessary consequential alterations[16].

1 As to directors see PARA 639.
2 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 622 note 3.
3 For the purposes of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 66, any reference to annual and half-yearly accounting periods of a company is a reference to those periods as determined in relation to that company in accordance with FSA rules: reg 66(5). Nothing in reg 66 or reg 67 prejudices the generality of reg 6(1) (see PARA 622) in relation to the powers of the Financial Services Authority as set out in that regulation: reg 66(4). As to the meaning of 'FSA rules' see PARA 622 note 6. As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. 658. Eligibility of auditors. No person is eligible for appointment as auditor of an open-ended investment company[1] unless he is eligible under the Companies Act 2006[2] for appointment as a statutory auditor[3]. A person is ineligible for appointment as auditor of an open-ended investment company if he is an officer[4] or employee of the company[5] or a partner or employee of such a person, or a partnership of which such a person is a partner[6].

A person is also ineligible for appointment if there exists between that person, or any associate[7] of that person, and the company a connection of any such description as may be specified by regulations made by the Secretary of State[8] under the Companies Act 2006[9].

No person is to act as auditor of a company if he is ineligible for appointment to the office[10]. If during his term of office an auditor of a company becomes ineligible for appointment to the office, he must vacate office and give notice in writing to the company concerned that he has vacated it by reason of ineligibility[11]. A person who acts as auditor of a company in contravention of the requirements described above[12] is guilty of an offence[13].

An auditor who has failed to comply with a duty imposed on him by trust scheme rules[14] may be disqualified from being the auditor for any authorised open-ended investment company[15].

7 For these purposes, 'associate' has the same meaning as in the Companies Act 2006 Pt 42 (ss 1209–1264) (see s 1260) (see COMPANIES): Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 2(4) (Sch 5 para 2(3) substituted and Sch 5 para 2(4), (5) added by SI 2008/948).

The power of the Secretary of State to make regulations under s 1214(4) for the purposes of s 1214(1) in relation to statutory auditors is exercisable, subject to the same conditions, for the purposes of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 2(3) in relation to auditors of open-ended investment companies: Sch 5 para 2(5) (as added: see note 7).

12 Ie contravention of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 3(1) or failure to give notice of vacating his office as required by Sch 5 para 3(2).
13 Such a person is liable, on conviction on indictment, to a fine (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 3(3)(a)) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (Sch 5 para 3(3)(b)). As to the statutory maximum see PARA 56 note 24.

In the case of continued contravention he is liable on a second or subsequent summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £100 in respect of each day on which the contravention is continued (instead of the fine mentioned in Sch 5 para 3(3)(b)): Sch 5 para 3(4). In proceedings against a person for an offence under Sch 5 para 3, it is a defence for him to show that he did not know and had no reason to believe that he was, or had become, ineligible for appointment: Sch 5 para 3(5).
14 As to the trust scheme rules see PARA 614.
15 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 249(1); and PARA 616. As to the meaning of 'authorised open-ended investment company' see PARA 603.

659. Appointment of auditors. Every company must appoint an auditor or auditors[1]. A company must, at each general meeting[2] at which the company's annual report[3] is laid, appoint an auditor or auditors to hold office from the conclusion of that meeting until the conclusion of the next general meeting at which an annual report is laid[4].

The first auditors of a company may be appointed by the directors[5] of the company at any time before the first general meeting of the company at which an annual report is laid; and auditors so appointed are to hold office until the conclusion of that meeting[6]. Where no such appointment is made[7], the first auditors of any company may be appointed by the company in general meeting[8].

No rules made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[9] in regard to appointment of auditors apply in relation to open-ended investment companies[10].

If, in any case, no auditors are appointed[11], the Financial Services Authority[12] may appoint a person to fill the vacancy[13]. The directors of a company, or the company in general meeting, may fill a casual vacancy in the office of auditor[14]. While such a vacancy continues, any surviving or continuing auditor or auditors may continue to act[15].

Where a partnership constituted under the law of England and Wales or Northern Ireland, or under the law of any country or territory in which a partnership is not a legal person, is appointed as auditor of a company[16]:

(1) the appointment is, unless the contrary intention appears, an appointment of the partnership as such and not of the partners[17];

(2) where the partnership ceases, the appointment is to be treated as extending to any partnership which succeeds to the practice of that partnership and is eligible for the appointment[18] and any person who succeeds to that practice having previously carried it on in partnership and is eligible for the appointment[19];

(3) where the partnership ceases and no person succeeds to the appointment under head (2) above[20], the appointment may with the consent of the company be treated as extending to a partnership or other person eligible for the appointment who succeeds to the business of the former partnership or to such part of it as is agreed by the company to be treated as comprising the appointment[21].

1 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 4(1). The appointment must be made in accordance with Sch 5 para 4.

2 As to general meetings see PARA 641.

3 As to the meaning of 'annual report' see PARA 657 note 4.

4 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 4(2) (amended by SI 2005/923). The Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 4(2) is subject to Sch 5 para 4(6), (7).

On the date on which the holding of an annual general meeting is dispensed with in accordance with reg 37A (see PARA 641), any auditor or auditors appointed in accordance with Sch 5 para 4(2) or Sch 5 para 4(3) (see the text to note 6) ceases to hold office and the directors must forthwith re-appoint the auditor or auditors or appoint a new auditor or auditors: Sch 5 para 4(6) (Sch 5 para 4(6), (7) added by SI 2005/923). The directors of any company which does not hold annual general meetings must appoint the auditor or auditors: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 4(7) (as so added).

5 As to directors see PARA 639.

660. Rights of auditors. The auditors of a company have a right of access at all times to the company's books, accounts and vouchers and are entitled to require from the company's officers[1] such information and explanations as they think necessary for the performance of their duties as auditors[2].

An officer of a company commits an offence if he knowingly or recklessly makes to the company's auditors a statement (whether written or oral) which conveys or purports to convey any information or explanations which the auditors require, or are entitled to require, as auditors of the company[3] and which is misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular[4].

The auditors of a company are entitled:

(1) to receive all such notices of, and other communications relating to, any general meeting[5] of the company as a shareholder[6] of the company is entitled to receive[7];
(2) to attend any general meeting of the company[8]; and
(3) to be heard at any general meeting which they attend on any part of the business of the meeting which concerns them as auditors[9].

The right to attend and be heard at a meeting is exercisable in the case of a body corporate or partnership by an individual authorised by it in writing to act as its representative at the meeting[10].

661. Remuneration of auditors. The remuneration of auditors of a company who are appointed by the company in general meeting[1] must be fixed by the company in general meeting or in such manner as the company in general meeting may decide[2].

The remuneration of auditors who are appointed by the directors[3] or the Financial Services Authority[4] must be fixed by the directors or the Authority, as the case may be (and is payable by the company even where it is fixed by the Authority)[5].

The power of the Secretary of State[6] to make regulations under the Companies Act 2006[7] in regard to the remuneration of auditors or their associates for non-audit work in relation to company auditors is to be exercisable in relation to auditors of open-ended investment companies[8] for like purposes[9] and subject to the same conditions[10].

As to the meaning of 'annual report' see PARA 657 note 4.

662. Removal of auditors. A company may by resolution remove an auditor from office notwithstanding anything in any agreement between it and him[1]. Where a resolution removing an auditor is passed at a general meeting[2] of a company, the company must, not later than 14 days after the holding of the meeting, notify the Financial Services Authority[3] of the passing of the resolution[4].

A resolution at a general meeting of a company removing an auditor before the expiration of his period of office[5] or appointing as auditor a person other than the retiring auditor[6] is not effective unless notice of the intention to move it has been given to the open-ended investment company[7] at least 28 days before the meeting at which it is moved[8]. On receipt of notice of such an intended resolution, the company must forthwith send a copy to the person proposed to be removed or, as the case may be, to the person proposed to be appointed and to the retiring auditor[9].

The auditor proposed to be removed or, as the case may be, the retiring auditor may make with respect to the intended resolution representations in writing to the company (not exceeding a reasonable length) and request their notification to the shareholders[10] of the company[11].

The company must (unless the representations are received by the company too late for it to do so):

(1) in any notice of the resolution given to the shareholders of the company, state the fact of the representations having been made[12];

(2) send a copy of the representations to each of the shareholders whose name appears on the register of shareholders[13] (other than the designated person) and to whom notice of the meeting is or has been sent[14];

(3) take such steps as FSA rules[15] may require for the purpose of bringing the fact that the representations have been made to the attention of the holders of any bearer shares[16]; and

(4) at the request of any holder of bearer shares, provide a copy of the representations[17].

If a copy of any such representations is not sent out as required because they were received too late or because of the company's default or if, for either of those reasons, any steps in head (3) or head (4) above[18] are not taken, the auditor may (without prejudice to his right to be heard orally) require that the representations be read out at the meeting[19].

Copies of the representations need not be sent out, the steps in head (3) or head (4) above[20] need not be taken and the representations need not be read out at the meeting if, on the application of the company or any other person claiming to be aggrieved, the High Court is satisfied that the rights conferred[21] are being abused to secure needless publicity for defamatory matter; and the court may order the costs of the company on such an application to be paid in whole or in part by the auditor, notwithstanding that he is not a party to the application[22].

An auditor who has been removed from office has, notwithstanding his removal, the various rights to receive notices, attend and be heard[23] in relation to any general meeting of the company at which his term of office would otherwise have expired or at which it is proposed to fill the vacancy caused by his removal[24].

24 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 5 para 14(1).

663. Resignation of auditors. An auditor of a company may resign his office by depositing a notice in writing to that effect at the company's head office[1]. Such a notice is not effective unless it is accompanied by the required statement[2]. An effective notice of resignation operates to bring the auditor's term of office to an end as of the date on which the notice is deposited or on such later date as may be specified in it[3]. The company must, not later than 14 days after the deposit of a notice of resignation, send a copy of the notice to the Financial Services Authority[4].

Where a notice of resignation of an auditor is accompanied by a statement of circumstances which he considers ought to be brought to the attention of the shareholders or creditors of the company[5], the auditor may deposit with the notice a signed requisition that a general meeting[6] of the company be convened forthwith for the purpose of receiving and considering such explanation of the circumstances connected with his resignation as he may wish to place before the meeting[7].

The company must, not later than 21 days after the date of the deposit of such a requisition[8], proceed to convene a meeting for a day not later than 28 days after the date on which the notice convening the meeting is given[9].

The auditor may request the company to circulate a statement in writing (not exceeding a reasonable length) of the circumstances connected with his resignation to each of the shareholders of the company whose name appears on the register of shareholders[10] (other than the designated person): (1) before the meeting convened on his requisition[11]; or (2) before any general meeting at which his term of office would otherwise have expired or at which it is proposed to fill the vacancy caused by his resignation[12], and to take such steps as FSA rules[13] may require for the purpose of bringing the fact that the statement has been made to the attention of the holders of any bearer shares[14].

The company must (unless the statement is received by it too late for it to do so):

(a) in any notice or advertisement of the meeting given or made to shareholders of the company, state the fact of the statement having been made[15];

(b) send a copy of the statement to every shareholder of the company to whom notice of the meeting is or has been sent[16]; and

(c) at the request of any holder of bearer shares, provide a copy of the statement[17].

If a copy of the statement is not sent out or provided as required because it was received too late or because of the company's default, the auditor may (without prejudice to his right to be heard orally) require that the statement be read out at the meeting[18].

Copies of a statement need not be sent out or provided and the statement need not be read out at the meeting if, on the application of the company or any other person claiming to be aggrieved, the High Court is satisfied that the rights conferred[19] are being abused to secure needless publicity for defamatory matter; and the court may order the costs of the company on such an application to be paid in whole or in part by the auditor, notwithstanding that he is not a party to the application[20].

An auditor who has resigned has, notwithstanding his removal, the various rights to receive notices, attend and be heard[21] in relation to any such general meeting of the company as is mentioned in head (1) or head (2) above[22].

664. Statement by auditor ceasing to hold office. Where an auditor ceases for any reason to hold office, he must deposit at the head office of the company a statement of any circumstances connected with his ceasing to hold office which he considers should be brought to the attention of the shareholders[1] or creditors of the company or, if he considers that there are no such circumstances, a statement that there are none[2].

The statement must be deposited:

(1) in the case of resignation, along with the notice of resignation[3];
(2) in the case of failure to seek re-appointment, not less than 14 days before the end of the time allowed for next appointing auditors[4]; and
(3) in any other case, not later than the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the date on which he ceases to hold office[5].

If the statement is of circumstances which the auditor considers should be brought to the attention of the shareholders or creditors of the company, the company must, not later than 14 days after the deposit of the statement, either: (a) send a copy of the statement to each of the shareholders whose name appears on the register of shareholders[6] (other than the designated person) and take such steps as FSA rules[7] may require for the purpose of bringing the fact that the statement has been made to the attention of the holders of any bearer shares[8]; or (b) apply to the court[9]. Where an application is made under head (b) above[10], the company must notify the auditor[11].

Unless the auditor receives notice of an application to the court before the end of the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he deposited the statement, he must, not later than seven days after the end of that period, send a copy of the statement to the Financial Services Authority[12].

If the court is satisfied that the auditor is using the statement to secure needless publicity for defamatory matter it must direct that copies of the statement need not be sent out and that the steps required by FSA rules need not be taken[13] and it may further order the company's costs on the application to be paid in whole or in part by the auditor notwithstanding that he is not a party to the application[14]. In addition, the company must, not later than 14 days after the court's decision, take such steps in relation to a statement setting out the effect of the order as are required by head (a) above[15] in relation to the statement of circumstances deposited at the company's head office[16].

If the court is not so satisfied, the company must, not later than 14 days after the court's decision, send to each of the shareholders a copy of the auditor's statement and notify the auditor of the court's decision[17]. The auditor must, not later than seven days after receiving such a notice, send a copy of the statement to the Authority[18]. Where notice of appeal is filed not later than 14 days after the court's decision, any reference to that decision[19] is to be construed as a reference to the final determination or withdrawal of that appeal, as the case may be[20].

If a person ceasing to hold office as auditor fails to comply with the requirements described above[21], he is guilty of an offence[22].

(d) Mergers and Divisions

665. Application to court. An open-ended investment company[1] may apply to the court under the Companies Act 2006[2] for an order in respect of a particular scheme[3] where:

(1) the scheme in question involves a compromise or arrangement with its shareholders[4] or creditors or any class of its shareholders or creditors[5]; and

(2) the consideration for the transfer or each of the transfers envisaged by the scheme is to be shares[6] in the transferee company receivable by shareholders of the transferor company[7] or, where there is more than one transferor company and any one or more of them is a public company, shares in the transferee company receivable by shareholders or members of the transferor companies (as the case may be)[8], in each case with or without any cash payment to shareholders[9].

A public company may apply to the court under the Companies Act 1985[10] for an order sanctioning a particular scheme[11] where:

(a) the scheme in question involves a compromise or arrangement with its members or creditors or any class of its members or creditors[12]; and

(b) the consideration for the transfer or each of the transfers envisaged by the scheme is to be shares in the transferee company receivable by members of the transferor company[13] or where there is more than one transferor company and any one or more of them is an open-ended investment company, shares in the transferee company receivable by shareholders or members of the transferor companies (as the case may be)[14], in each case with or without any cash payment to shareholders[15].

1 As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 623 note 3.

2 Ie the Companies Act 2006 s 896 or s 899 (power of company to compromise with creditors and members): see COMPANIES.

An application made by virtue of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 2 or Sch 6 para 3 (see the text and notes 3–15) is treated as one to which the Companies Act 2006 Pt 27 (ss 902–941) applies (mergers and divisions of public companies), and the provisions of Pt 27 and Pt 26 (ss 895–901) (see COMPANIES) have effect accordingly, subject to the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 6 (see below): Sch 6 para 5 (substituted by SI 2008/948). The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 have effect with such modifications as are necessary or appropriate for mergers and divisions involving open-ended investment companies: Sch 6 para 6(1) (amended by SI 2008/948). In particular, any reference in those provisions to a merger by absorption, a merger by formation of a new company or a division is to be taken to be a reference to a scheme falling within the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 4(1)(a), (b) or (c) (see PARA 666): Sch 6 para 6(2) (amended by SI 2008/948). Without prejudice to the generality of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 6(1), the following references in those provisions have effect as follows, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) any reference to a scheme is to be taken to be a reference to a scheme falling within any of the provisions of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 4(1)(a), (b) or (c) (Sch 6 para 6(3)(a));

(2) any reference to a company is to be taken to be a reference to an open-ended investment company (Sch 6 para 6(3)(b));

(3) any reference to members is to be taken to be a reference to shareholders of an open-ended investment company (Sch 6 para 6(3)(c));

(4) any reference to the registered office of a company is to be taken to be a reference to the head office of an open-ended investment company (Sch 6 para 6(3)(d));

(5) any reference to the memorandum and articles of a company is to be taken to be a reference to the instrument of incorporation of an open-ended investment company (Sch 6 para 6(3)(e));

(6) any reference to a report under the Companies Act 1985 s 103 (prospectively repealed) (non-cash consideration to be valued before allotment) (see COMPANIES vol 7(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 556) (as to replacement provisions see the Companies Act 2006 ss 593–595) is to be taken to be a reference to any report with respect to the valuation of any non-cash consideration given for shares in an open-ended investment company which may be required by FSA rules (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 6(3)(f));

(7) any reference to annual accounts is to be taken to be a reference to the accounts contained in the annual report of an open-ended investment company (Sch 6 para 6(3)(g));

(8) any reference to the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 as to balance sheets forming part of a company's annual accounts is to be taken to be a reference to any requirements arising by virtue of FSA rules (see PARA 622 note 6) as to balance sheets drawn up for the purposes of the accounts contained in the annual report of an open-ended investment company (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 6(3)(i) (amended by SI 2008/948));

(9) any reference to paid up capital is to be taken to be a reference to the share capital of an open-ended investment company (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, Sch 6 para 6(3)(j)).

666. Relevant schemes. The schemes[1] are:

(1) any scheme under which the undertaking, property and liabilities of an open-ended investment company[2] are to be transferred to another such company, other than one formed for the purpose of, or in connection with the scheme[3];

(2) any scheme under which the undertaking, property and liabilities of two or more bodies corporate, each of which is either an open-ended investment company[4] or a public company[5], are to be transferred to an open-ended investment company formed for the purpose of, or in connection with, the scheme[6];

(3) any scheme under which the undertaking, property and liabilities of an open-ended investment company or a public company are to be divided among and transferred to two or more open-ended investment companies whether or not formed for the purpose of, or in connection with, the scheme[7].

The court cannot sanction a scheme under which the whole or any part of the undertaking, property or liabilities of an open-ended investment company may be transferred to any person other than another such company[8].

(e) Provision for Employees on Cessation or Transfer of Business

667. Power to provide for employees on cessation or transfer of business. The powers of an open-ended investment company[1] include power to make provision for the benefit of persons employed or formerly employed by the company, that is to say, provision in connection with the cessation or the transfer to any person of the whole or part of the undertaking of the company[2]. This power[3] is exercisable notwithstanding that its exercise is not in the best interests of the company[4].

The power which a company may exercise by virtue of the provisions described above[5] may only be exercised by the company:

(1) in a case not falling within head (2) or head (3) below[6], if sanctioned by a resolution of the company in general meeting[7];

(2) if so authorised by the instrument of incorporation[8], in the case of a company that has only one director[9], by a resolution of that director[10] and, in any other case, by such resolution of directors as is required by FSA rules[11]; or

(3) if the instrument of incorporation requires the exercise of the power to be sanctioned by a resolution of the company in general meeting for which more than a simple majority of the shareholders[12] voting is necessary, by a resolution of that majority[13].

In any case the power can only be exercised after compliance with any other requirements of the instrument of incorporation applicable to the exercise of the power[14].

(D) The Register, Records and Documents

668. Register of open-ended investment companies. The Financial Services Authority[1] must maintain a register of open-ended investment companies[2]. The Authority may keep the register in any form it thinks fit provided that it is possible to inspect the information contained on it and to obtain a copy of that information (or any part of it) for inspection[3].

The Authority must allocate to every open-ended investment company a number, which is to be known as the company's registered number[4]. Companies' registered numbers must be in such form, consisting of one or more sequences of figures or letters, as the Authority may from time to time determine[5]. The Authority may, upon adopting a new form of registered number, make such changes of existing registered numbers (including numbers allocated by the appropriate registrar) as appear to it to be necessary[6]. A change in a company's registered number has effect from the date on which the company is notified by the Authority of the change[7].

Any document which is required by the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[8] to be delivered to the Authority in order to be recorded on the register[9] must be delivered in such form as the Authority may from time to time specify[10].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

3 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 71(2). Any requirement of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, as to the supply by the Authority of a document may, if the Authority thinks fit, be satisfied by the communication of the information in any non-legible form the Authority thinks appropriate: reg 76.

10 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 73. Any document which is delivered to the Authority under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, and relates to an open-ended investment company (whether already registered or to be registered) whose instrument of incorporation states that its head office is to be situated in Wales, may be in Welsh but must be accompanied by a certified translation into English: reg 77(1), (2). For the purposes of reg 77, 'certified translation' means a translation which is certified in the manner specified in FSA rules to be a correct translation: reg 77(5). As to the meaning of 'FSA rules' see PARA 622 note 6. As to instruments of incorporation see PARA 624. The requirement for a translation does not apply to documents of such description as may be specified in FSA rules (see reg 77(3)(a)) or to documents in a form prescribed by virtue of the Welsh Language Act 1993 s 26 (see COMPANIES vol 7(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 291) in Welsh, or partly in Welsh and partly in English (see the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 77(3)(b)). An open-ended investment company whose instrument of incorporation states that its head office is to be situated in Wales may deliver to the Authority a certified translation into Welsh of any document in English which relates to the company and which is or has been delivered to the Authority: reg 77(4).

669. Company records. The information contained in a document delivered to the Financial Services Authority[1] under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[2] may be recorded and kept by the Authority in any form it thinks fit, provided that it is possible to inspect the information and produce a copy of it in legible form[3].

The originals of documents delivered to the Authority[4] in legible form must be kept by it for ten years after which they may be destroyed[5]. Where a company has been dissolved, the Authority may, at any time after the expiration of two years from the date of the dissolution, direct that any records in its custody relating to the company may be removed to the Public Record Office; and records in respect of which such a direction is given must be disposed of in accordance with the enactments relating to the Public Record Office and the rules made under them[6].

Any person may inspect any records kept by the Authority for the purposes of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[7] and may require a copy, in such form as the Authority considers appropriate, of any information contained in those records[8] or a certified copy of, or extract from, any such record[9]. The right of inspection extends to the originals of documents delivered to the Authority in legible form only where the record kept by the Authority of the contents of the document is illegible or unavailable[10].

A copy of or extract from a record kept by the Authority under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[11], on which is indorsed a certificate signed by a member of the Authority's staff authorised by it for that purpose certifying that it is an accurate record of the contents of any document delivered to the Authority, is in all legal proceedings admissible in evidence as of equal validity with the original document and as evidence of any fact stated in it of which direct oral evidence would be admissible[12].

No process for compelling the production of a document kept by the Authority under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[13] is to issue from any court except with the leave of the court; and any such process must bear on it a statement that it is issued with the leave of the court[14].

670. Restriction of deemed notice in regard to documents received by the Financial Services Authority. A person is not to be taken to have deemed notice of any matter merely because of its being disclosed in any document kept by the Financial Services Authority[1] (and thus available for inspection) under any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[2].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
2 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 79.

(E) Contraventions and Offences

671. Contraventions and offences. Any of the following persons, that is to say: (1) a person who contravenes any provision of the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001[1]; and (2) an open-ended investment company[2] (including any director[3] or depositary[4] of such a company) which contravenes any provision of FSA rules[5], is to be treated as having contravened rules made under the general rule-making power in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[6].

The provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 relating to offences by bodies corporate[7], and those relating to jurisdiction and procedure in respect of offences[8], apply to offences under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001 as they apply to offences under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[9].

E. RECOGNISED OVERSEAS SCHEMES

(A) Schemes Constituted in Other EEA States

672. Schemes constituted in other EEA states. A collective investment scheme[1] constituted in another EEA state[2] is a recognised scheme[3] if: (1) it satisfies the prescribed[4] requirements[5]; and (2) not less than two months before inviting persons in the United Kingdom to become participants[6] in the scheme, the operator[7] of the scheme gives notice to the Financial Services Authority[8] of his intention to do so, specifying the way in which the invitation is to be made[9]. However, these provisions do not make the scheme a recognised scheme if within two months of receiving the notice[10] the Authority notifies: (a) the operator of the scheme; and (b) the authorities of the state in question who are responsible for the authorisation of collective investment schemes, that the way in which the invitation is to be made does not comply with the law in force in the United Kingdom[11].

The notice to be given to the Authority[12] must: (i) be accompanied by a certificate from the authorities mentioned in head (b) above to the effect that the scheme complies with the conditions necessary for it to enjoy the rights conferred by any relevant Community instrument; (ii) contain the address of a place in the United Kingdom for the service on the operator of notices or other documents[13] required or authorised to be served on him under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000; and (iii) contain or be accompanied by such other information and documents as may be prescribed[14].

The operator of a recognised scheme may give written notice to the Authority that he desires the scheme to be no longer recognised[15].

1 As to the meaning of 'collective investment scheme' see PARA 603.
2 As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1. For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264, a collective investment scheme is constituted in another EEA state if: (1) it is constituted under the law of that state by a contract or under a trust and is managed by a body corporate incorporated under that law; or (2) it takes the form of an open-ended investment company incorporated under that law: s 264(5). As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 86 note 11. As to the meaning of 'open-ended investment company' see PARA 603.
3 As to the meaning of 'recognised scheme' see PARA 603.
4 'Prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Treasury: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 417(1). As to the regulations made see the Financial Services and Markets

Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes Constituted in Other EEA States) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2383. As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264(1)(a). The requirements prescribed for the purposes of s 264 are that a collective investment scheme is one which, in accordance with the UCITS Directive (ie EEC Council Directive 85/611 (OJ L375, 31.12.85, p 3) on the coordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to undertakings for collective investment in transferable securities), is an undertaking for collective investment in transferable securities subject to that directive (the 'undertaking'): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes Constituted in Other EEA States) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2383, reg 3 (amended by SI 2003/2066).

10 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264(1): see the text to notes 1–9.

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264(2). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. A notice given by the Authority under s 264(2) must: (1) give the reasons for which the Authority considers that the law in force in the United Kingdom will not be complied with; and (2) specify a reasonable period (which may not be less than 28 days) within which any person to whom it is given may make representations to the Authority: s 264(4).

If any representations are made to the Authority, before the period for making representations has ended, by a person to whom a notice was given by the Authority under s 264(2), then the Authority must, within a reasonable period, decide in the light of those representations whether or not to withdraw its notice: s 265(1), (2). If the Authority withdraws its notice the scheme is a recognised scheme from the date on which the notice is withdrawn: s 265(3). If the Authority decides not to withdraw its notice, it must give a decision notice to each person to whom the notice under s 264(2) was given: s 265(4). As to decision notices see PARA 770. The operator of the scheme to whom the decision notice is given may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal: s 265(5). As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.

13 As to the meaning of 'document' see PARA 10 note 10.

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264(3). The notice to be given to the Authority under s 264(1) must contain or be accompanied by: (1) the fund rules or instrument of incorporation of the undertaking (see note 5); (2) its full and simplified prospectus within the meaning of the UCITS Directive (ie EEC Council Directive 85/611 (OJ L375, 31.12.85, p 3)) Section VI; and (3) where appropriate, its latest annual report and any subsequent half-yearly report: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Collective Investment Schemes Constituted in Other EEA States) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2383, reg 4 (amended by SI 2003/2066).

15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264(6): On the giving of notice under s 264(6), the scheme ceases to be a recognised scheme: s 264(7).

673. Disapplication of certain rules. Apart from: (1) financial promotion rules[1]; and (2) rules relating to facilities and information in the United Kingdom[2], rules made by the Financial Services Authority[3] under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 do not apply to the operator[4], trustee[5] or depositary[6] of a recognised scheme[7] in relation to the carrying on by him of regulated activities[8] for which he has permission in that capacity[9].

1 As to financial promotion rules see PARA 29.

2 Ie rules under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 283(1): see PARA 680. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

5 As to the meaning of 'trustee' see PARA 606 note 16.

6 As to the meaning of 'depositary' see PARA 606 note 18.

7 'Scheme' means a scheme which is a recognised scheme by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264 (see PARA 672): s 266(2).
8 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 266(1). However s 266(1) does not affect the application of rules to an operator of a scheme if the operator is an EEA firm falling within Sch 3 para 5(f) (ie a management company) (see PARA 315 note 1) who qualifies for authorisation under Sch 3: s 266(1A) (added by SI 2003/2066).

674. Power to suspend promotion of scheme. If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[1] that the operator[2] of a scheme[3] has communicated an invitation or inducement in relation to the scheme in a manner contrary to financial promotion rules[4], the Authority may give a direction suspending promotion of the scheme[5].

A direction[6] takes effect: (1) immediately, if the notice given under head (a) below states that that is the case; (2) on such date as may be specified in the notice; or (3) if no date is specified in the notice, when the matter to which it relates is no longer open to review[7]. A direction may be expressed to take effect immediately (or on a specified date) only if the Authority, having regard to its reasons for exercising its power[8], considers that it is necessary for the direction to take effect immediately (or on that date)[9]. If the Authority proposes to give a direction, or gives such a direction with immediate effect, it must: (a) give the operator of the scheme concerned written notice; and (b) inform the competent authorities in the scheme's home state of its proposal or (as the case may be) of the direction[10]. The notice must:

(i) give details of the direction[11];
(ii) inform the operator of when the direction takes effect[12];
(iii) state the Authority's reasons for giving the direction and for its determination as to when the direction takes effect[13];
(iv) inform the operator that he may make representations to the Authority within such period as may be specified in it (whether or not he has referred the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal)[14]; and
(v) inform him of his right to refer the matter to the Tribunal[15].

If, having considered any representations made by the operator, the Authority decides to give the direction in the way proposed or if it decides, where a direction has been given, not to revoke the direction, the Authority must give the operator of the scheme concerned written notice, and inform the competent authorities in the scheme's home state of the direction[16]. If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides not to give the direction in the way proposed, to give the direction in a way other than that proposed, or to revoke a direction which has effect, the Authority must give the operator of the scheme concerned written notice, and inform the competent authorities in the scheme's home state of its decision[17]. The provisions described above[18] apply to the variation of a direction on the Authority's own initiative as they apply to the giving of a direction[19].

If, on an application[20], the Authority proposes to vary a direction otherwise than in accordance with the application, or to refuse the application, it must give the operator of the scheme concerned a warning notice[21]. If, on such an application, the Authority decides to vary a direction otherwise than in accordance with the application, or to refuse the application, it must give the operator of the scheme concerned a decision notice[22]. If the application is refused, the operator of the scheme may refer the matter to the Tribunal[23]. If, on such an application, the Authority decides to grant the application it must give the operator of the scheme concerned written notice[24]. If the Authority decides on its own initiative to revoke a direction[25], it must give the operator of the scheme concerned written notice[26]. The Authority must inform the competent authorities in the scheme's home state of any notice given[27].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to the meaning of 'operator' see PARA 606 note 16.
3 'Scheme' means a scheme which is a recognised scheme by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 264 (see PARA 672): s 267(8).
4 As to financial promotion rules see PARA 29.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 267(1), (2). The Authority may direct: (1) that the exemption for a recognised scheme from the restriction on promotion in s 238(1) provided by s 238(4)(c) (see PARA 606) is not to apply in relation to the scheme; and (2) that s 238(5) (see PARA 606) is not to apply with respect to things done in relation to the scheme: s 267(2).

A direction under s 267(2) has effect: (a) for a specified period; (b) until the occurrence of a specified event; or (c) until specified conditions are complied with: s 267(3). 'Specified', in relation to a direction, means specified in it: s 267(9). The Authority may, either on its own initiative or on the application of the operator of the scheme concerned, vary a direction given under s 267(2) if it appears to the Authority that the direction should take effect or continue in force in a different form: s 267(4). The Authority may, either on its own initiative or on the application of the operator of the recognised scheme concerned, revoke a direction given under s 267(2) if it appears to the Authority that the conditions specified in the direction have been complied with, or that it is no longer necessary for the direction to take effect or continue in force: s 267(5). If an event is specified, the direction ceases to have effect (unless revoked earlier) on the occurrence of that event: s 267(6).

For the purposes of ss 267–269: (i) the scheme's home state is the EEA state in which the scheme is constituted (within the meaning given by s 264 (see PARA 672)); (ii) the competent authorities in the scheme's home state are the authorities in that state who are responsible for the authorisation of collective investment schemes: s 267(7). (B) Schemes Authorised in Designated Countries and Territories, and Individually Recognised Schemes

675. Schemes authorised in designated countries or territories. A collective investment scheme[1] which is not a scheme constituted in another EEA state[2] but is managed in, and authorised under the law of, a country or territory outside the United Kingdom[3] is a recognised scheme[4] if[5]:

(1) that country or territory is so designated[6] by an order made by the Treasury[7];
(2) the scheme is of a class specified by the order[8];
(3) the operator[9] of the scheme has given written notice to the Financial Services Authority[10] that he wishes it to be recognised[11]; and
(4) either: (a) the Authority, by written notice, has given its approval to the scheme's being recognised; or (b) two months, beginning with the date on which notice was given under head (3) above, have expired without the operator receiving a warning notice from the Authority[12].

The Treasury may not make an order designating any country or territory for the purposes of these provisions unless satisfied: (i) that the law and practice under which relevant collective investment schemes[13] are authorised and supervised in that country or territory affords to investors in the United Kingdom protection at least equivalent to that provided for them by or under Part XVII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[14] in the case of comparable authorised schemes[15]; and (ii) that adequate arrangements exist, or will exist, for co-operation between the authorities of the country or territory responsible for the authorisation and supervision of relevant collective investment schemes and the Authority[16]. If the Treasury is considering whether to make an order designating a country or territory for the purposes of these provisions: (A) the Treasury must ask the Authority for a report on the law and practice of that country or territory in relation to the authorisation and supervision of relevant collective investment schemes and on any existing or proposed arrangements for co-operation between it and the authorities responsible in that country or territory for the authorisation and supervision of relevant collective investment schemes[17]; (B) the Authority must provide the Treasury with such a report[18]; and (C) the Treasury must have regard to it in deciding whether to make the order[19].

If the Authority proposes to refuse approval of a scheme's being a recognised scheme[20], it must give the operator of the scheme a warning notice[21]. In order to be valid, the warning notice must be received by the operator before the end of two months beginning with the date on which notice was given to the Authority requesting it to recognise the scheme[22]. If, having given a warning notice, the Authority decides to refuse approval, it must give the operator of the scheme a decision notice[23]; and the operator may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[24].

676. Individually recognised overseas schemes. The Financial Services Authority[1] may, on the application of the operator[2] of a collective investment scheme[3] which: (1) is managed in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom[4]; (2) is not a scheme constituted in another EEA state[5]; (3) is not managed in a designated country or territory[6] or, if it is so managed, is of a class not specified by the designation order; and (4) appears to the Authority to satisfy the following requirements, make an order declaring the scheme to be a recognised scheme[7]. The requirements are that:

(a) adequate protection must be afforded to participants[8] in the scheme[9];
(b) the arrangements for the scheme's constitution and management must be adequate[10];

(c) the powers and duties of the operator and, if the scheme has a trustee[11] or depositary[12], of the trustee or depositary must be adequate[13];

(d) the scheme must take the form of an open-ended investment company or (if it does not take that form) the operator must be a body corporate[14];

(e) the operator of the scheme must: (i) if an authorised person[15], have permission to act as operator; (ii) if not an authorised person, be a fit and proper person to act as operator[16];

(f) the trustee or depositary (if any) of the scheme must: (i) if an authorised person, have permission to act as trustee or depositary; (ii) if not an authorised person, be a fit and proper person to act as trustee or depositary[17];

(g) the operator and the trustee or depositary (if any) of the scheme must be able and willing to co-operate with the Authority by the sharing of information and in other ways[18];

(h) the name of the scheme must not be undesirable or misleading[19];

(i) the purposes of the scheme must be reasonably capable of being successfully carried into effect[20];

(j) the participants must be entitled to have their units[21] redeemed in accordance with the scheme at a price related to the net value of the property to which the units relate and determined in accordance with the scheme[22].

In deciding whether the matters mentioned in s 272(3) or s 272(4) (see the text to notes 11–13) are adequate, the Authority must have regard to: (1) any rule of law; and (2) any matters which are, or could be, the subject of rules, applicable in relation to comparable authorised schemes: s 272(5). 'Comparable authorised schemes' means whichever of the following the Authority considers the most appropriate, having regard to the nature of the scheme in respect of which the application is made: (a) authorised unit trust schemes; (b) authorised open-ended investment companies; (c) both such unit trust schemes and such companies: s 272(6). 22 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 272(13). A scheme is to be treated as complying with s 272(13) if it requires the operator to ensure that a participant is able to sell his units on an investment exchange at a price not significantly different from that mentioned in s 272(13): s 272(14). Section 272(13) is not to be read as imposing a requirement that the participants must be entitled to have their units redeemed (or sold as mentioned in s 272(14)) immediately following a demand to that effect: s 272(15). As to investment exchanges see PARA 684 et seq.

677. Applications for recognition of individual schemes. An application[1] for an order declaring a scheme to be a recognised scheme[2] must be made to the Financial Services Authority[3] by the operator[4] of the scheme[5]. The application must: (1) be made in such manner as the Authority may direct; (2) contain the address of a place in the United Kingdom[6] for the service on the operator of notices or other documents[7] required or authorised to be served on him under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000; (3) contain or be accompanied by such information as the Authority may reasonably require for the purpose of determining the application[8]. At any time after receiving an application and before determining it, the Authority may require the applicant to provide it with such further information as it reasonably considers necessary to enable it to determine the application[9]. Different directions may be given, and different requirements imposed, in relation to different applications[10]. The Authority may require an applicant to present information which he is required to give under the provisions described above in such form, or to verify it in such a way, as the Authority may direct[11].

An application[12] must be determined by the Authority before the end of the period of six months beginning with the date on which it receives the completed application[13]. The Authority may determine an incomplete application if it considers it appropriate to do so; and it must in any event determine such an application within 12 months beginning with the date on which it first receives the application[14]. If the Authority makes an order declaring a scheme to be a recognised scheme[15], it must give written notice of the order to the applicant[16].

If the Authority proposes to refuse an application[17] it must give the applicant a warning notice[18]. If the Authority decides to refuse the application it must give the applicant a decision notice[19], and the applicant may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[20].

678. Alteration of individually recognised schemes and changes of operator, trustee or depositary. The operator[1] of an individually recognised scheme[2] must give written notice to the Financial Services Authority[3] of any proposed alteration to the scheme[4]. Any such proposal may not be given effect unless: (1) the Authority, by written notice, has given its approval to the proposal; or (2) one month, beginning with the date on which notice was given[5], has expired without the Authority having given written notice to the operator that it has decided to refuse approval[6]. At least one month before any replacement of the operator, trustee[7] or depositary[8] of such a scheme, notice of the proposed replacement must be given to the Authority by the operator, trustee or depositary (as the case may be), or by the person who is to replace him[9].

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 277(3).

679. Requirements for schemes authorised in designated countries or territories and for individually recognised schemes. The Financial Services Authority[1] may make rules[2] imposing duties or liabilities on the operator[3] of a scheme authorised in a designated country or territory or an individually recognised scheme[4] for purposes corresponding to those for which rules may be made[5] in relation to authorised unit trust schemes[6].

The Authority may direct that a scheme is to cease to be recognised[7] or revoke a recognition order[8] if it appears to the Authority[9]:

(1) that the operator, trustee[10] or depositary[11] of the scheme has contravened a requirement imposed on him by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[12];
(2) that the operator, trustee or depositary of the scheme has, in purported compliance with any such requirement, knowingly or recklessly given the Authority information which is false or misleading in a material particular[13];
(3) in the case of an order[14], that one or more of the requirements for the making of the order are no longer satisfied[15]; or
(4) that none of heads (1) to (3) above applies, but it is undesirable in the interests of the participants[16] or potential participants that the scheme should continue to be recognised[17].

If the Authority proposes to give a direction[18] or to make an order[19] revoking a recognition order, it must give a warning notice to the operator and (if any) the trustee or depositary of the scheme[20]. If the Authority decides to give such a direction or make such an order it must without delay give a decision notice[21] to the operator and (if any) the trustee or depositary of the scheme; and the operator or the trustee or depositary may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[22].

If it appears to the Financial Services Authority that: (a) the operator, trustee or depositary of a relevant recognised scheme[23] has contravened, or is likely to contravene, a requirement imposed on him by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000; (b) the operator, trustee or depositary of such a scheme has, in purported compliance with any such requirement, knowingly or recklessly given the Authority information which is false or misleading in a material particular; (c) one or more of the requirements for the recognition of a scheme[24] are no longer satisfied; or (d) none of heads (a) to (c) above applies, but the exercise of the power to give directions[25] is desirable in order to protect the interests of participants or potential participants in a relevant recognised scheme who are in the United Kingdom, it may direct that the scheme is not to be a recognised scheme for a specified period or until the occurrence of a specified event or until specified conditions are complied with[26].

A direction takes effect: (i) immediately, if the notice given by the Authority[27] states that that is the case; (ii) on such date as may be specified in the notice; or (iii) if no date is specified in the notice, when the matter to which it relates is no longer open to review[28]. A direction may be expressed to take effect immediately (or on a specified date) only if the Authority, having regard to the ground on which it is exercising its power[29], considers that it is necessary for the direction to take effect immediately (or on that date)[30]. If the Authority proposes to give a direction[31], or gives such a direction with immediate effect, it must give separate written notice to the operator and (if any) the trustee or depositary of the scheme concerned[32]. The notice must: (A) give details of the direction; (B) inform the person to whom it is given of when the direction takes effect; (C) state the Authority's reasons for giving the direction and for its determination as to when the direction takes effect; (D) inform the person to whom it is given that he may make representations to the Authority within such period as may be specified in it (whether or not he has referred the matter to the Tribunal); and (E) inform him of his right to refer the matter to the Tribunal[33]. The Authority may extend the period allowed under the notice for making representations[34]. If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides to give the direction in the way proposed, or if it decides, where a direction has been given, not to revoke the direction, it must give separate written notice to the operator and (if any) the trustee or depositary of the scheme concerned[35]. If, having considered any representations made by a person to whom the notice was given, the Authority decides not to give the direction in the way proposed, to give the direction in a way other than that proposed, or to revoke a direction which has effect, it must give separate written notice to the operator and (if any) the trustee or depositary of the scheme concerned[36]. The provisions described above[37] apply to the variation of a direction on the Authority's own initiative as they apply to the giving of a direction[38].

(C) Facilities and Information

680. Facilities. The Financial Services Authority[1] may make rules[2] requiring operators[3] of recognised schemes[4] to maintain in the United Kingdom[5], or in such part or parts of it as may be specified, such facilities as the Authority thinks desirable in the interests of participants[6] and as are specified in rules[7].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to the meaning of 'rule' see PARA 23 note 2.

5 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

6 As to the meaning of 'participants' see PARA 603.
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 283(1).

681. Information. The Financial Services Authority[1] may by notice in writing require the operator[2] of any recognised scheme[3] to include such explanatory information as is specified in the notice in any communication of his which: (1) is a communication of an invitation or inducement[4]; and (2) names the scheme[5].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Collective Investment Schemes (COLL). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to the meaning of 'operator' see PARA 606 note 16.

4 Ie of a kind mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 21(1): see PARA 225.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 283(2). In the case of a communication originating outside the United Kingdom, s 283(2) only applies if the communication is capable of having an effect in the United Kingdom: s 283(3). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

F. POWER TO INVESTIGATE

682. The power to investigate in relation to open-ended investment companies. The Financial Services Authority[1] or the Secretary of State[2] may appoint one or more competent persons to investigate and report on the affairs of, or of any director or depositary[3] of, an open-ended investment company[4] if it appears to either of them that it is in the interests of shareholders[5] or potential shareholders of the company to do so or that the matter is of public concern[6].

A person so appointed[7] to investigate the affairs of, or of any director or depositary of, a company may also, if he thinks it necessary for the purposes of that investigation, investigate the affairs of (or of the directors, depositary, trustee or operator of):

(1) an open-ended investment company, the directors of which include any of the directors of the company whose affairs are being investigated as described above[8];
(2) an open-ended investment company, the directors of which include any of the directors of the depositary whose affairs are being so investigated[9];
(3) an open-ended investment company, the depositary of which is: (a) the same as the depositary of the company whose affairs are being so investigated[10]; or (b) the depositary whose affairs are being so investigated[11];
(4) an open-ended investment company, the directors of which include: (a) the director whose affairs are being so investigated[12]; or (b) any director of a body corporate which is the director whose affairs are being so investigated[13];
(5) a collective investment scheme[14], the manager, depositary or operator of which is a director of the company whose affairs are being so investigated[15];
(6) a collective investment scheme, the trustee of which is: (a) the same as the depositary of the company whose affairs are being so investigated[16]; or (b) the depositary whose affairs are being so investigated[17]; or
(7) a collective investment scheme, the manager, depositary or operator of which is: (a) the director whose affairs are being so investigated[18]; or (b) a director of a body corporate which is the director whose affairs are being so investigated[19].

If the person ('A') appointed to conduct an investigation[20] considers that a person ('B') is or may be able to give information which is relevant to the investigation, A may require B:

(i) to produce to A any documents in B's possession or under his control which appear to A to be relevant to that investigation[21];

(ii) to attend before A[22]; and

(iii) otherwise to give A all such assistance in connection with the investigation which B is reasonably able to give[23].

It is B's duty to comply with that requirement[24].

Certain provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 relating to investigations apply in certain circumstances[25].

No person may be required[26] to disclose information or produce a document in respect of which he owes an obligation of confidence by virtue of carrying on a banking business unless:

(A) the imposition of the requirement is authorised by the Authority or the Secretary of State (as the case may be) or the person to whom the obligation of confidence is owed[27]; or

(B) the person to whom it is owed is a director or depositary of any open-ended investment company which is under investigation, or any other person whose own affairs are under investigation[28].

25 The provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 170(5)–(9) (general provisions relating to investigations) (see PARA 451) apply if the Authority appoints a person under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30 to conduct an investigation on its behalf (reg 30(4)(a)) or the Secretary of State appoints a person under reg 30 to conduct an investigation on his behalf (reg 30(4)(b)), as they apply in the cases mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 170(1) (Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30(4)).

The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 174 (admissibility of statements made to investigators) (see PARA 452) applies to a statement made by a person in compliance with a requirement imposed on him under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30 as it applies to a statement mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 174: Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30(5).

The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 175(2)–(4), (6) (supplemental provisions relating to information and documents) (see PARA 453) and s 177 (offences) (see PARAS 451, 455) have effect as if the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30 were contained in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XI (ss 165–177) (information gathering and investigations) (see PARA 447 et seq): Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30(6).

The provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 176(1)–(9) (entry of premises under warrant) (see PARA 454) apply in relation to a person appointed under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30(1) as if references to an investigator were references to a person so appointed (reg 30(7)(a)), references to an information requirement were references to a requirement imposed under reg 30 by a person so appointed (reg 30(7)(b)), and the premises mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 176(3)(a) were the premises of a person whose affairs are the subject of an investigation under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30 or of an appointed representative of such a person (reg 30(7)(b)). As to the meaning of 'appointed representative' see PARA 346.

28 Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 30(8)(b).

683. Power to investigate in relation to other collective investment schemes. If it appears to an investigating authority[1] that it is in the interests of the participants[2] or potential participants to do so or that the matter is of public concern, the investigating authority may appoint one or more competent persons to investigate on its behalf[3]:

(1) the affairs of, or of the manager or trustee[4] of, any authorised unit trust scheme[5];

(2) the affairs of, or of the operator[6], trustee or depositary[7] of, any recognised scheme[8] so far as relating to activities carried on in the United Kingdom[9]; or

(3) the affairs of, or of the operator, trustee or depositary of, any other collective investment scheme[10] except a body incorporated by virtue of regulations made in relation to open-ended investment companies[11].

A person appointed[12] to investigate the affairs of, or of the manager, trustee, operator or depositary of, any scheme (scheme 'A'), may also, if he thinks it necessary for the purposes of that investigation, investigate: (a) the affairs of, or of the manager, trustee, operator or depositary of, any other such scheme[13] whose manager, trustee, operator or depositary is the same person as the manager, trustee, operator or depositary of scheme A; (b) the affairs of such other schemes and persons (including open-ended investment companies[14] and the directors[15] and depositaries of such bodies) as may be prescribed[16].

If the person appointed to conduct an investigation under these provisions ('B') considers that a person ('C') is or may be able to give information which is relevant to the investigation, B may require C: (i) to produce to B any documents[17] in C's possession or under his control which appear to B to be relevant to the investigation; (ii) to attend before B; and (iii) otherwise to give B all assistance in connection with the investigation which C is reasonably able to give, and it is C's duty to comply with that requirement[18].

1 'Investigating authority' means the Financial Services Authority or the Secretary of State: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 284(11). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 3.
2 As to the meaning of 'participants' see PARA 603.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 284(1). Section 170(5)–(9) (investigations) (see PARA 451) applies if an investigating authority appoints a person under s 284 to conduct an investigation on its behalf as it applies in the case mentioned in s 170(1) (see PARA 451): s 284(4). Section 174 (admissibility of statements made to investigators) (see PARA 452) applies to a statement made by a person in compliance with a requirement imposed under s 284 as it applies to a statement mentioned in s 174: s 284(5). Section 175(2)–(4), (6) (supplemental provisions relating to information and documents) (see PARA 453) and s 177 (offences) (see PARA 455) have effect as if s 284 were contained in Pt XI (ss 165–177): s 284(6).

Section 176(1)–(9) (entry of premises under warrant) (see PARA 454) applies in relation to a person appointed under s 284(1) as if: (1) references to an investigator were references to a person so appointed; (2) references to an information requirement were references to a requirement imposed under s 175 or under s 284(3) by a person so appointed; (3) the premises mentioned in s 176(3)(a) were the premises of a person whose affairs are the subject of an investigation under s 284 or of an appointed representative of such a person: s 284(7). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
17 As to the meaning of 'document' see PARA 10 note 10.
18 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 284(3). No person may be required under s 284 to disclose information or produce a document in respect of which he owes an obligation of confidence by virtue of carrying on the business of banking unless: (1) the person to whom the obligation of confidence is owed consents to the disclosure or production, or the imposing on the person concerned of a requirement with respect to information or such a document has been specifically authorised by the investigating authority; or (2) the person owing the obligation of confidence or the person to whom it is owed is: (a) the manager, trustee, operator or depositary of any collective investment scheme which is under investigation; (b) the director of on open-ended investment company which is under investigation; (c) any other person whose own affairs are under investigation: s 284(8)–(10).

(iii) Recognised Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses

A. EXEMPTION

684. Exemption from the general prohibition. A recognised investment exchange[1] is exempt from the general prohibition[2] as respects any regulated activity[3] which is carried on as part of the exchange's business as an investment exchange[4] or which is carried on for the purposes of, or in connection with, the provision of clearing services by the exchange[5].

A recognised clearing house[6] is exempt from the general prohibition as respects any regulated activity which is carried on for the purposes of, or in connection with, the provision of clearing services by the clearing house[7].

1 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, 'recognised investment exchange' means an investment exchange in relation to which a recognition order is in force: ss 285(1)(a), 417(1). For the purposes of Pt XVIII (ss 285–313), 'recognition order' means an order made under s 290 (see PARA 709) or s 292 (see PARA 710): s 313(1).
2 As to the general prohibition see PARA 80.
3 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 285(2)(a).
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 285(2)(b).
6 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, 'recognised clearing house' means a clearing house in relation to which a recognition order is in force: ss 285(1)(b), 417(1).
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 285(3).

B. RECOGNITION

(A) In general

685. Qualification for recognition. The Treasury[1] may make regulations[2] setting out the requirements: (1) which must be satisfied by an investment exchange or clearing house if it is to qualify as a body in respect of which the Financial Services Authority[3] may make a recognition order[4] under Part XVIII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[5]; and (2) which, if a recognition order is made, it must continue to satisfy if it is to remain a recognised body[6].

However, if regulations contain provision as to the default rules[7] of an investment exchange or clearing house, or as to proceedings taken under such rules by such a body, they require the approval of the Secretary of State[8].

In the case of an investment exchange, the above requirements[9] are in addition to requirements which must be satisfied by the exchange[10] before the Authority may make a recognition order declaring the exchange to be a recognised investment exchange[11].

Requirements resulting from the provisions described above[12] are referred to in Part XVIII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 as 'recognition requirements'[13].

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
2 In exercise of this power the Treasury has made the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995: see also PARA 686 et seq. As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.

Nothing in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, is to be construed as requiring a recognised investment exchange to limit dealings on the exchange to dealings in investments, or as requiring a recognised investment exchange or recognised clearing house to limit the provision of its clearing services to clearing services in respect of transactions in investments: reg 7. As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1. As to references to dealings on an exchange see PARA 687 note 11. As to the meaning of 'investments' see PARA 688 note 6. As to the meaning of 'recognised clearing house' see PARA 684 note 6. See note 5.
3 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

4 As to the meaning of 'recognition order' see PARA 684 note 1.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(1)(a). The reference in the text is a reference to Pt XVIII (ss 285–313).

If regulations under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(1) require an investment exchange to make information available to the public in accordance with (1) the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 29.1 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1); or (2) the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 44.1 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1), the regulations may authorise the Authority to waive the requirement in the circumstances specified in the relevant provisions: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(4A), (4E) (s 286(4A)–(4E) added by SI 2006/2975). For these purposes, the 'relevant provisions' are in a case falling within head (1) above, the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive art 29.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1); and in a case falling within head (2) above, the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 44.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(4B) (as so added).

If regulations under s 286(1) require an investment exchange to make information available to the public in accordance with (a) the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 30.1 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1); or (b) the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 45.1 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1), the regulations may authorise the Authority to defer the requirement in the circumstances specified, and subject to the requirements contained, in the relevant provisions: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(4A), (4E) (as so added). For these purposes the 'relevant provisions' are in a case falling within head (a) above, the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 30.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1); and in a case falling within head (b) above, the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 45.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(4E) (as so added).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(1)(b). See note 5. For the purposes of Pt XVIII, 'recognised body' means a recognised investment exchange or a recognised clearing house: s 313(1).

7 'Default rules' means rules of an investment exchange or clearing house which provide for the taking of action in the event of a person's appearing to be unable, or likely to become unable, to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts connected with the exchange or clearing house: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(3).

References in Pt XVIII to rules of an investment exchange (or a clearing house) are to rules made, or conditions imposed, by the investment exchange (or the clearing house) with respect to: (1) recognition requirements (see the text to notes 12–13); (2) admission of persons to, or their exclusion from the use of, its facilities; or (3) matters relating to its constitution: s 313(2). 'Market contract' means: (a) a contract to which the Companies Act 1989 Pt VII (ss 154–191) (see PARA 509 et seq) applies as a result of s 155 or a contract to which the Companies (No 2) (Northern Ireland) Order 1990, SI 1990/1504 (NI 10) Pt V (arts 90–126) applies as a result of art 80; and (b) such other kind of contract as may be prescribed: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(4).

(B) Recognition Requirements

(a) Requirements for Investment Exchanges

686. Application for or by an investment exchange. There are specific recognition requirements[1] for investment exchanges for or by whom applications have been made for recognition orders[2].

1 As to recognition requirements generally see PARA 685.
2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 4. The provisions of the Schedule Pt I (see PARAS 687–690) and Pt II (see PARAS 693–695) set out the requirements applying to bodies in respect of which a recognition order has been made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1)(a) (see PARA 709) or which have applied for such an order under s 287 (see PARA 706). As to the meaning of 'recognition order' see PARA 684 note 1.
As to the method of satisfying recognition requirements see PARA 705.

687. Financial resources, suitability, systems and controls. In order to qualify for recognition, an exchange must have financial resources sufficient for the proper performance of its functions as a recognised investment exchange[1]. In considering whether this requirement is satisfied, the Financial Services Authority[2] must[3] take into account all the circumstances, including the exchange's connection with any person, and any activity carried on by the exchange, whether or not it is an exempt activity[4].

The exchange must be a fit and proper person to perform the functions of a recognised investment exchange[5]. In considering whether this requirement is satisfied, the Authority may[6] take into account all the circumstances, including the exchange's connection with any person[7].

The exchange must ensure that the systems and controls used in the performance of its functions are adequate, and appropriate for the scale and nature of its business[8]. This applies in particular to systems and controls concerning:

(1) the transmission of information[9];
(2) the assessment, mitigation and management of risks to the performance of the exchange's functions[10];
(3) the effecting and monitoring of transactions on the exchange[11];
(4) the technical operation of the exchange, including contingency arrangements for disruption to its facilities[12];
(5) the operation of arrangements for the timely discharge of the rights and liabilities of the parties to the transactions effected on the exchange[13]; and
(6) (where relevant) the safeguarding and administration of assets belonging to users of the exchange's facilities[14].

1 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 1(1). References in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, to the performance of the functions of a recognised body are references to the carrying on by it of exempt activities together with the performance of its regulatory functions: reg 3(3). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6.
2 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

3 Ie without prejudice to the generality of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 6(1) (see PARA 705) in regard to the method of satisfying recognition requirements.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 1(2) (amended by SI 2006/3386). 'Exempt activities', in relation to a recognised body, means the regulated activities in respect of which the body is exempt as a result of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 285(2) or (3) (see PARA 684): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 2(1).

6 See note 3.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 2(2). The persons who effectively direct the business and operations of the exchange must be of sufficiently good repute and sufficiently experienced to ensure the sound and prudent management and operation of the financial markets operated by it: Schedule para 2(3) (Schedule para 2(3), (4) added by SI 2006/338). The persons who are in a position to exercise significant influence over the management of the exchange, whether directly or indirectly, must be suitable: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 2(4) (as so added).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(1).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(2)(a).

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(2)(b).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(2)(c). References in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, to dealings on an exchange, or transactions effected on an exchange, are references to dealings or transactions which are effected by means of the exchange's facilities or which are governed by the rules of the exchange; and references to the use of the facilities of an exchange include use which consists of any such dealings or entering into any such transactions: reg 3(2).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(2)(ca) (added by SI 2006/3386).

13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(2)(d). The arrangements referred to in the text are those mentioned in Schedule para 4(2)(d): see PARA 688.

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 3(2)(e).

688. Safeguards for investors. In order to qualify for recognition, an exchange must ensure that business conducted by means of its facilities[1] is conducted in an orderly manner and so as to afford proper protection to investors[2]. Without prejudice to the generality of this, the exchange must ensure that:

(1) access to the exchange's facilities is subject to criteria designed to protect the orderly functioning of the market and the interests of investors[3];

(2) it has transparent and non-discretionary rules and procedures (a) to provide for fair and orderly trading; and (b) to establish objective criteria for the efficient execution of orders[4];

(3) appropriate arrangements are made for relevant information[5] to be made available (whether by the exchange or, where appropriate, by issuers of the investments) to persons engaged in dealing in investments on the exchange[6];

(4) satisfactory arrangements[7] are made for securing the timely discharge (whether by performance, compromise or otherwise) of the rights and liabilities of the parties to transactions effected on the exchange (being rights and liabilities in relation to those transactions)[8];

(5) satisfactory arrangements are made for recording transactions effected on the exchange, and transactions (whether or not effected on the exchange) which are cleared or to be cleared by means of its facilities[9];

(6) appropriate arrangements are made to (a) identify conflicts between the interests of the exchange, its owners and operators and the interests of the persons who make use of its facilities or the interests of the financial markets operated by it; and (b) manage such conflicts so as to avoid adverse consequences for the operation of the financial markets operated by the exchange and for the persons who make use of its facilities[10];

(7) appropriate measures (including the monitoring of transactions effected on the exchange) are adopted to reduce the extent to which the exchange's facilities can be used for a purpose connected with market abuse[11] or financial crime[12], and to facilitate their detection and monitor their incidence[13]; and

(8) where the exchange's facilities include making provision for the safeguarding and administration of assets belonging to users of those facilities, satisfactory arrangements are made for that purpose[14].

The exchange must make arrangements for (i) current bid and offer prices for shares[15]; and (ii) the depth of trading interest in shares at the prices which are advertised through its systems, to be made available to the public on reasonable commercial terms and on a continuous basis during normal trading hours, subject to certain requirements[16].

The exchange must make arrangements for the price, volume and time of transactions executed in shares[17] to be made available to the public as soon as possible after the time of the transaction on reasonable commercial terms, subject to certain requirements[18].

1 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, 'facilities', in relation to a recognised body, means the facilities and services it provides in the course of carrying on exempt activities; and references to the use of the facilities of an exchange are to be construed in accordance with reg 3(2) (see PARA 687): reg 3(1).

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(1).

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(a) (amended by SI 2006/3386). Such access must be in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7B: see PARA 690.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(aa) (added by SI 2006/3386).

5 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(c), 'relevant information' means information which is relevant in determining the current value of the investments: Schedule para 4(3).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(c). For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, 'investments' means investments of a kind specified for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22 (see PARA 85): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1).

7 Ie which comply with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7D: see PARA 690.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(d) (amended by SI 2006/3386).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(e).

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(ea) (added by SI 2006/3386).

11 As to market abuse see PARA 437 et seq.

12 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, 'financial crime' is to be construed in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 6(3), (4) (see PARA 8): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1).

13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(f) (amended by SI 2006/3386).

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4(2)(g).

15 For these purposes, 'shares' means shares admitted to trading on a regulated market: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4A(4) (Schedule para 4A added by SI 2006/3386). 'Regulated market' has the meaning given in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 4.1.18: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386).

16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4A(1) (as added: see note 15). The requirements referred to are those contained in EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch IV.

If an exchange decides to give investment firms and credit institutions required to publish their quotes in shares (1) in accordance with the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 27, or (2) by the Financial Services Authority, access to the arrangements referred to in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4A(1), it must do so on reasonable commercial terms and on a non-discriminatory basis: Schedule para 4A(2) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'investment firm' see PARA 21 note 5. 'Credit institution' means (a) a credit institution authorised under the Banking Consolidation Directive (ie EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1) relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions); or (b) an institution which would satisfy the requirements for authorisation as a credit institution under that directive if it had its registered office (or if it does not have a registered office, its head office) in an EEA state: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386). As to the meaning of EEA state see PARA 315 note 1. As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

The Authority may waive the requirements of Schedule para 4A(1) in the circumstances specified: (i) in the case of shares to be traded on a multilateral trading facility operated by the exchange, in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 29.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch IV; or (ii) in the case of shares to be traded on a regulated market operated by the exchange, in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 44.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch IV:

Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4A(3) (as so added). 'Multilateral trading facility has the meaning given in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 4.1.15: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386).

17 For these purposes, 'shares' means shares admitted to trading on a regulated market: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4B(5) (Schedule para 4B added by SI 2006/3386).

18 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4B(1) (as added: see note 17). The requirements referred to are those contained in EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch IV.

If an exchange decides to give investment firms and credit institutions required to make public details of their transactions in shares (1) in accordance with the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 28; or (2) by the Authority, access to the arrangements referred to in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4B(1), it must do so on reasonable commercial terms and on a non-discriminatory basis: Schedule para 4B(2) (as so added).

The Authority may permit exchanges to defer the publication required by Schedule para 4B(1) in the circumstances specified, and subject to the requirements contained: (a) in the case of shares traded on a multilateral trading facility operated by an exchange, in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 30.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch IV; or (b) in the case of shares traded on a regulated market operated by an exchange, in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 45.2 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch IV: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 4B(3) (as so added).

If the Authority permits exchanges to defer the publication required by Schedule para 4B(1), those exchanges must ensure that the existence of and the terms of the permission are disclosed to users and members of their facilities and to investors: Schedule para 4B(4) (as so added).

689. Promotion and maintenance of standards. In order to qualify for recognition, an exchange must be able and willing to promote and maintain high standards of integrity and fair dealing in the carrying on of regulated activities[1] by persons in the course of using the facilities[2] provided by the exchange[3].

The exchange must be able and willing to co-operate, by the sharing of information or otherwise, with the Financial Services Authority[4], with any other authority, body or person having responsibility in the United Kingdom[5] for the supervision or regulation of any regulated activity or other financial service, or with an overseas regulator[6].

1 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'facilities' see PARA 688 note 1.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 6(1).

4 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

5 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 6(2). The reference in the text to an overseas regulator is a reference to an overseas regulator within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 195: see PARA 457.

690. Rules. In order to qualify for recognition, an exchange must ensure that appropriate procedures are adopted for it to make rules, for keeping its rules under review and for amending them[1]. The procedures must include procedures for consulting users of the exchange's facilities in appropriate cases[2]. The exchange must consult users of its facilities on any arrangements it proposes to make for dealing with penalty income[3] (or on any changes which it proposes to make to those arrangements)[4].

The exchange must make clear and transparent rules concerning the admission of financial instruments[5] to trading on any financial market operated by it[6].

The exchange must make transparent and non-discriminatory rules, based on objective criteria, governing access to, or membership of, its facilities[7].

Where an exchange provides central counterparty, clearing or settlement facilities[8], it must make transparent and non-discriminatory rules, based on objective criteria, governing access to those facilities[9]. The exchange may refuse access to those facilities on legitimate commercial grounds[10].

The rules of the exchange must permit a user or member of a regulated market operated by it to use whatever settlement facility he chooses for a transaction[11].

The rules of the exchange must provide that the exchange must not exercise its power to suspend or remove from trading on a regulated market operated by it any financial instrument which no longer complies with its rules, where such step would be likely to cause significant damage to the interests of investors or the orderly functioning of the financial markets[12].

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7(2).

3 Ie in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(3): see PARA 691.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7(3).

5 'Financial instrument' has the meaning given in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 4.1.17: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(1) (Schedule para 7A added by SI 2006/3386). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A is without prejudice to the generality of Schedule para 4 (see PARA 688): Schedule para 7A(11) (as so added).

The rules must ensure that all financial instruments admitted to trading on a regulated market operated by the exchange are capable of being traded in a fair, orderly and efficient manner (in accordance with EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch V, where applicable): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(2) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'regulated market' see PARA 688 note 15.

The rules must ensure that (1) all transferable securities admitted to trading on a regulated market operated by the exchange are freely negotiable (in accordance with EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) Ch V, where applicable); and (2) all contracts for derivatives admitted to trading on a regulated market operated by the exchange are designed so as to allow for their orderly pricing as well as for the existence of effective settlement conditions: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(3) (as so added). 'Transferable securities' has the meaning given in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 4.1.18: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386). 'Derivatives' has the same meaning as in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(10) (as so added).

The exchange must maintain arrangements to provide sufficient publicly available information (or satisfy itself that sufficient information is publicly available) to enable the users of a multilateral trading facility operated by it to form investment judgments, taking into account both the nature of the users and the types of instrument traded: Schedule para 7A(4) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'multilateral trading facility' see PARA 688 note 16.

The exchange must maintain effective arrangements to verify that issuers of transferable securities admitted to trading on a regulated market operated by it comply with the disclosure obligations: Schedule para 7A(5) (as so added). 'Issuer' has the same meaning as in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(10) (as so added). The 'disclosure obligations' are the initial, ongoing and ad hoc disclosure requirements contained in the relevant articles and given effect (a) in the UK by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VI (ss 72–103) (see PARA 385 et seq) and Part VI rules (within the meaning of s 73A: see PARA 385); or (b) in another EEA state by legislation transposing the relevant articles in that state: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(10) (as so added). 'Relevant articles' means (i) European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2003/6 (OJ L96, 12.4.2003, p 16) on insider dealing and market manipulation arts 6.1–6.4; (ii) European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2003/71 (OJ L345, 31.12.2003, p 64) on the prospectuses to be published when securities are offered to the public or admitted to trading arts 3, 5, 7, 8, 10, 14, 16; (iii) European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/109 (OJ L390, 31.12.2004, p 38) relating to the harmonisation of transparency requirements in relation to information about issuers whose securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market arts 4–6, 14, 16–19, 30; and (iv) Community legislation made under the provisions mentioned in heads (i)–(iii) above: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7A(10) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1.

The exchange must maintain arrangements to assist users of a regulated market operated by it to obtain access to information made public under the disclosure obligations: Schedule para 7A(6) (as so added). The exchange must maintain arrangements regularly to review whether the financial instruments admitted to trading on a regulated market operated by it comply with the admission requirements for those instruments: Schedule para 7A(7) (as so added).

The rules must provide that where an exchange, without obtaining the consent of the issuer, admits to trading on a regulated market operated by it a transferable security which has been admitted to trading on another regulated market, the exchange (A) must inform the issuer of that security as soon as is reasonably practicable: and (B) may not require the issuer of that security to demonstrate compliance with the disclosure obligations: Schedule para 7A(8) (as so added).

The rules must provide that where an exchange, without obtaining the consent of the issuer, admits to trading on a multilateral trading facility operated by it a transferable security which has been admitted to trading on a regulated market, it may not require the issuer of that security to demonstrate compliance with the disclosure obligations: Schedule para 7A(9) (as so added).

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7B(1) (Schedule para 7B added by SI 2006/3386). As to the meaning of 'facilities' see PARA 688 note 1. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7B is without prejudice to the generality of Schedule para 4 (see PARA 688): Schedule para 7B(6) (as so added).

In particular those rules must specify the obligations for users or members of its facilities arising from: (1) the constitution and administration of the exchange; (2) rules relating to transactions on the market; (3) its professional standards for staff of any investment firm or credit institution having access to or membership of a financial market operated by the exchange; (4) conditions established under head (c) below for access to or membership of a financial market operated by the exchange by persons other than investment firms or credit institutions; and (5) the rules and procedures for clearing and settlement of transactions concluded on a financial market operated by the exchange: Schedule para 7B(2) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'investment firm' see PARA 21 note 5. As to the meaning of 'credit institution' see PARA 688 note 16.

Rules of the exchange about access to, or membership of, a financial market operated by it must permit the exchange to give access to or admit to membership (as the case may be) only: (a) an investment firm; (b) a credit institution; or (c) a person who (i) is fit and proper; (ii) has a sufficient level of trading ability and competence; (iii) where applicable, has adequate organisational arrangements; and (iv) has sufficient resources for the role he is to perform, taking account of the exchange's arrangements under Schedule para 4(2)(d) (see PARA 688 head (4)): Schedule para 7B(3) (as so added).

Rules under Schedule para 7B must enable (A) an investment firm authorised under the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 5; or (B) a credit institution authorised under the Banking Consolidation Directive (ie EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1) relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions), by the competent authority of another EEA state (including a branch established in the United Kingdom of such a firm or institution) to have direct or remote access to, or membership of, any financial market operated by the exchange on the same terms as a UK firm: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7B(4) (as so added). 'Competent authority', in relation to an investment firm or credit institution, means the competent authority in relation to that firm or institution for the purposes of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1)): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386). 'Branch' in relation to an investment firm has the meaning given in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1)) art 4.1.26 and in relation to a credit institution has the meaning given in the Banking Consolidation Directive (ie EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1)) art 4.3: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386).

The exchange must make arrangements regularly to provide the Financial Services Authority with a list of the users or members of its facilities: Schedule para 7B(5) (as so added).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7C(1) (Schedule para 7C added by SI 2006/3386). 'Central counterparty', 'clearing' and 'settlement' have the same meanings as in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1)): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1) (definitions added by SI 2006/3386).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7C(2) (as added: see note 8). The rules under Schedule para 7C para 3(2) must enable an investment firm or a credit institution authorised by the competent authority of another EEA state (including a branch established in the United Kingdom of such a firm or institution) to have access to those facilities on the same terms as a UK firm for the purposes of finalising or arranging the finalisation of transactions in financial instruments: Schedule para 7C(3) (as so added). 'UK firm' means an investment firm or credit institution which has a Part IV permission (see PARA 348) to carry on one or more regulated activities: reg 3(1) (definition added by SI 2006/3386). As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7C(4) (as added: see note 8).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7D(1) (Schedule para 7D added by SI 2006/3386). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7D(1) only applies where (1) such links and arrangements exist between the chosen settlement facility and any other settlement facility as are necessary to ensure the efficient and economic settlement of the transaction; and (2) the exchange is satisfied that the smooth and orderly functioning of the financial markets will be maintained: Schedule para 7D(2) (as so added).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 7E (added by SI 2006/3386).

691. Discipline and complaints. In order to qualify for recognition, the exchange must have (1) effective arrangements (which include the monitoring of transactions effected on the exchange) for monitoring and enforcing compliance with its rules, including rules in relation to the provision of clearing services in respect of transactions[1] other than transactions effected on the exchange;[2] (2) effective arrangements for monitoring and enforcing compliance with arrangements made by it in regard to the timely discharge of the rights and liabilities of the parties to transactions effected on the exchange[3]; and (3) effective arrangements for monitoring transactions effected on the exchange in order to identify disorderly trading conditions[4].

The arrangements mentioned above[5] must include procedures for investigating complaints made to the exchange about the conduct of persons in the course of using the exchange's facilities[6] and the fair, independent and impartial resolution of appeals against decisions of the exchange[7].

Where the arrangements mentioned above include provision for requiring the payment of financial penalties, they must include arrangements for ensuring that any amount so paid is applied only in one or more of the following ways:

(a) towards meeting expenses incurred by the exchange in the course of the investigation of the breach in respect of which the penalty is paid, or in the course of any appeal against the decision of the exchange in relation to that breach[8];

(b) for the benefit of users of the exchange's facilities[9];

(c) for charitable purposes[10].

The exchange must have effective arrangements for the investigation and resolution of complaints arising in connection with the performance of, or failure to perform, any of its regulatory functions[11]. The arrangements must include arrangements for a complaint to be fairly and impartially investigated by a person independent of the exchange, and for him to report on the result of his investigation to the exchange and to the complainant[12].

The arrangements must also confer on the independent person mentioned above[13] the power to recommend, if he thinks it appropriate, that the exchange makes a compensatory payment to the complainant[14], remedies the matter complained of[15] or takes both of those steps[16].

1 As to references to dealings and transactions effected on the exchange see PARA 687 note 11.

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(1)(a) (Schedule para 8(1) substituted by SI 2006/3386). As to rules generally see PARA 690.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 2). The arrangements referred to in the text are those mentioned in Schedule para 4(2)(d): see PARA 688 head (4).

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(1)(c) (as substituted: see note 2).

5 Ie arrangements made pursuant to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(1).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(2)(a). As to the meaning of 'facilities' see PARA 688 note 1.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(2)(b).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(3)(a).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(3)(b).

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 8(3)(c).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9(1). As to the meaning of 'regulatory functions', in relation to a recognised body, see PARA 719 note 2; definition applied by reg 3(1). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6.

However, Schedule para 9(1) does not extend to complaints about the content of rules made by the exchange; or complaints about a decision against which the complainant has the right to appeal under procedures of the kind mentioned in Schedule para 8(2)(b) (see the text to note 7): Schedule para 9(2).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9(3). Schedule para 9(3) is not to be taken as preventing the exchange from making arrangements for the initial investigation of a complaint to be conducted by the exchange: Schedule para 9(5).

13 Ie the person mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9(3).

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9(4)(a).

16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9(4).

692. Operation of a multilateral trading facility. An exchange operating a multilateral trading facility[1] must also operate a regulated market[2].

An exchange operating a multilateral trading facility must comply with those requirements[3] which are applicable to a market operator[4] operating such a facility[5].

1 As to the meaning of 'multilateral trading facility' see PARA 688 note 16.

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9A(1) (Schedule para 9A added by SI 2006/3386). As to the meaning of 'regulated market' see PARA 688 note 15.

The requirements of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9A do not apply for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(3)(a) (requirements for overseas investment exchanges and overseas clearing houses) (see PARA 710): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9A(3) (as so added).

3 Ie those requirements of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) Title II Ch I, and European Commission Directive 2006/73 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 26) implementing European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 as regards organisation requirements and operating conditions for investment firms and defined terms.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 9A(2) (as added: see note 2). See note 2.

693. Default rules in respect of market contracts. The exchange must have default rules[1] which, in the event of a member of the exchange being or appearing to be unable to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts[2], enable action to be taken in respect of unsettled market contracts to which he is a party[3].

The rules may authorise the taking of the same or similar action in relation to a member who appears to be likely to become unable to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts[4]. The rules must enable action to be taken in respect of all unsettled market contracts, other than those entered into for the purposes of or in connection with the provision of clearing services for the exchange[5].

1 As to the meaning of 'default rules' see PARA 685 note 7. 'Defaulter' and 'default' are to be construed in accordance with the Companies Act 1989 s 188(2); and references to action taken under the default rules of an exchange or clearing house are to be construed in accordance with s 188(4) (see PARA 510): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1).

2 'Market contract' has the meaning given in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286(4) (see PARA 685 note 7) (with reference, in the case of a recognised investment exchange, to the Companies Act 1989 s 155(2) (see PARA 510) or the Companies (No 2) (Northern Ireland) Order 1990, SI 1990/1504 (NI 10) art 80(2) or, in the case of a recognised clearing house, to the Companies Act 1989 s 155(3) (see PARA 510) or the Companies (No 2) (Northern Ireland) Order 1990, SI 1990/1504 (NI 10) art 80(3)); and references to a party to a market contract are to be construed in accordance with the Companies Act 1989 s 187 (see PARA 509): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 3(1).

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 10(1). Nothing in the Schedule Pt II (paras 10–15) is to be taken as requiring a recognised investment exchange which does not enter into such contracts as are mentioned in the Companies Act 1989 s 155(2)(b) (see PARA 510) to have default rules, or to make any arrangements, relating to such contracts: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 8.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 10(2).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 10(3) (amended by SI 2006/3386).

694. Content of default rules. In relation to certain contracts entered into by a member or designated non-member of the exchange with a person other than the exchange[1], the default rules[2] must provide:

(1) for all rights and liabilities between those party as principal to unsettled market contracts[3] to which the defaulter[4] is party as principal to be discharged and for there to be paid by one party to the other such sum of money (if any) as may be determined in accordance with the rules[5];

(2) for the sums so payable in respect of different contracts between the same parties to be aggregated or set off so as to produce a net sum[6]; and

(3) for the certification by or on behalf of the exchange of the net sum payable or, as the case may be, of the fact that no sum is payable[7].

The rules may make the same or similar provision, in relation to non-members designated in accordance with the relevant procedures[8], as in relation to members of the exchange[9].

The procedures must be designed to secure that: (a) a person is not, or does not remain, designated if failure by him to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts would be unlikely adversely to affect the operation of the market[10]; and (b) a description of persons is not, or does not remain, designated if failure by a person of that description to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts would be unlikely adversely to affect the operation of the market[11].

The exchange must have adequate arrangements for bringing a designation or withdrawal of designation to the attention of the person or description of persons concerned[12] and where a description of persons is designated, or the designation of a description of persons is withdrawn, for ascertaining which persons fall within that description[13].

In relation to contracts entered into by the exchange with its members for the purpose of enabling the rights and liabilities of that member under transactions in investments to be settled[14], the default rules[15] must provide:

(i) for all rights and liabilities of the defaulter under or in respect of unsettled market contracts[16] to be discharged and for there to be paid by or to the defaulter such sum of money (if any) as may be determined in accordance with the rules[17];

(ii) for the sums so payable by or to the defaulter in respect of different contracts to be aggregated or set off so as to produce a net sum[18];

(iii) for that sum, if payable by the defaulter to the exchange, to be set off against any property provided by or on behalf of the defaulter as cover for margin (or the proceeds of realisation of such property) so as to produce a further net sum; and if payable by the exchange to the defaulter, to be aggregated with any property provided by or on behalf of the defaulter as cover for margin (or the proceeds of realisation of such property)[19]; and

(iv) for the certification by or on behalf of the exchange of the sum finally payable or, as the case may be, of the fact that no sum is payable[20].

Where the exchange provides clearing services, the rules of the exchange must provide that in the event of a default, margin provided by the defaulter for his own account is not to be applied to meet a shortfall on a client account[21].

1 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 11(1). The contracts referred to are those falling within the Companies Act 1989 s 155(2)(a): see PARA 510.

8 Ie those procedures mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 11(5), which provides that, if such provision is made, the exchange must have adequate procedures:
   (1) for designating the persons, or descriptions of person, in respect of whom action may be taken (Schedule para 11(5)(a));
   (2) for keeping under review the question which persons or descriptions of person should be or remain so designated (Schedule para 11(5)(b)); and
   (3) for withdrawing such designation (Schedule para 11(5)(c)).

15 See note 2.

16 The reference in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 12(2) to the rights and liabilities of a defaulter under or in respect of an unsettled market contract includes (without prejudice to the generality of that provision) rights and liabilities arising in consequence of action taken under provisions of the rules authorising:
   (1) the effecting by the exchange of corresponding contracts in relation to unsettled market contracts to which the defaulter is party (Schedule para 12(3)(a));
   (2) the transfer of the defaulter's position under an unsettled market contract to another member of the exchange (Schedule para 12(3)(b));
   (3) the exercise by the exchange of any option granted by an unsettled market contract (Schedule para 12(3)(c)).

   'Corresponding contract' means a contract on the same terms (except as to price or premium) as the market contract but under which the person who is the buyer under the market contract agrees to sell and the person who is the seller under the market contract agrees to buy: Schedule para 12(4). The provisions of Schedule para 12(4) apply with any necessary modifications in relation to a market contract which is not an agreement to sell: Schedule para 12(5). The reference in Schedule para 12(2) to the rights and liabilities of a defaulter under or in respect of an unsettled market contract does not include, where he acts as agent, rights or liabilities of his arising out of the relationship of principal and agent: Schedule para 12(6).

21 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 15(1). Schedule para 15(1) is without prejudice to the requirements of any rules relating to clients' money made by the Financial Services Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 138 (see PARA 21) and s 139 (see PARA 25): Schedule para 15(2). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

695. Default rules: notification and co-operation. The exchange must have adequate arrangements for ensuring that: (1) in the case of unsettled market contracts[1] with a defaulter[2] acting as principal, parties to the contract are notified as soon as reasonably practicable of the default and of any decision taken under the rules in relation to contracts to which they are a party[3]; and (2) in the case of unsettled market contracts with a defaulter acting as agent, parties to the contract and the defaulter's principals are notified as soon as reasonably practicable of the default and of the identity of the other parties to the contract[4].

The exchange must be able and willing to co-operate, by the sharing of information and otherwise, with the Secretary of State[5], any relevant office-holder[6], and any other authority or body having responsibility for any matter arising out of, or connected with, the default of a member of the exchange or any designated non-member[7].

(b) Requirements for Clearing Houses

696. Application for or by a clearing house. In the same way as there are specific recognition requirements[1] for investment exchanges[2], there are also specific recognition requirements for clearing houses for or by whom applications have been made for recognition orders[3].

1 As to recognition requirements generally see PARA 685.
2 See PARA 686.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 5. The provisions of the Schedule Pt III (see PARAS 697–700) and Pt IV (see PARAS 702–704) set out the requirements applying to bodies in respect of which a recognition order has been made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1)(b) (see PARA 709) or which have applied for such an order under s 288 (see PARA 707). As to the meaning of 'recognition order' see PARA 684 note 1.
As to the method of satisfying recognition requirements see PARA 705.

697. Financial resources, suitability, systems and controls. In order to qualify for recognition, a clearing house must have financial resources sufficient for the proper performance of its functions as a recognised clearing house[1]. In considering whether this requirement is satisfied, the Financial Services Authority[2] may[3] take into account all the circumstances, including the clearing house's connection with any person, and any activity carried on by the clearing house, whether or not it is an exempt activity[4].

The clearing house must be a fit and proper person to perform the functions of a recognised clearing house[5]. In considering whether this requirement is satisfied, the Authority may[6] take into account all the circumstances, including the clearing house's connection with any person[7].

The clearing house must ensure that the systems and controls used in the performance of its functions are adequate, and appropriate for the scale and nature of its business[8]. This requirement applies in particular to systems and controls concerning:

(1) the transmission of information[9];

(2) the assessment and management of risks to the performance of the clearing house's functions[10];

(3) the operation of its clearing services involving satisfactory arrangements for securing the timely discharge of the rights and liabilities of the parties to transactions in respect of which it provides such services[11]; and

(4) (where relevant) the safeguarding and administration of assets belonging to users of the clearing house's facilities[12].

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 18(2)(d).

698. Safeguards for investors. In order to qualify for recognition, a clearing house must ensure that its facilities[1] are such as to afford proper protection to investors[2]. Without prejudice to the generality of this, the clearing house must ensure that:

(1) access to the clearing house's facilities is subject to criteria designed to protect the orderly functioning of those facilities and the interests of investors[3];

(2) its clearing services involve satisfactory arrangements for securing the timely discharge (whether by performance, compromise or otherwise) of the rights and liabilities of the parties to transactions in respect of which it provides such services (being rights and liabilities in relation to those transactions)[4];

(3) satisfactory arrangements are made for recording transactions which are cleared or to be cleared by means of its facilities[5];

(4) appropriate measures are adopted to reduce the extent to which the clearing house's facilities can be used for a purpose connected with market abuse[6] or financial crime[7], and to facilitate their detection and monitor their incidence[8]; and

(5) where the clearing house's facilities include making provision for the safeguarding and administration of assets belonging to users of those facilities, satisfactory arrangements are made for that purpose[9].

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 19(2)(e).

699. Promotion and maintenance of standards. In order to qualify for recognition, a clearing house must be able and willing to promote and maintain high standards of integrity and fair dealing in the carrying on of regulated activities by persons in the course of using the facilities[1] provided by the clearing house[2].

The clearing house must be able and willing to co-operate, by the sharing of information or otherwise, with the Financial Services Authority[3], with any other authority, body or person having responsibility in the United Kingdom[4] for the supervision or regulation of any regulated activity or other financial service, or with an overseas regulator[5].

The reference in the text to an overseas regulator is a reference to an overseas regulator within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 195: see PARA 457.

700. Rules. In order to qualify for recognition, a clearing house must ensure that appropriate procedures are adopted for it to make rules, for keeping its rules under review and for amending them[1]. The procedures must include procedures for consulting users of the clearing house's facilities[2] in appropriate cases[3]. The clearing house must consult users of its facilities on any arrangements it proposes to make for dealing with penalty income[4] (or on any changes which it proposes to make to those arrangements)[5].

The clearing house must make transparent and non-discriminatory rules, based on objective criteria, governing access to central counterparty, clearing or settlement[6] facilities provided by it[7]. The clearing house may refuse access to those facilities on legitimate commercial grounds[8].

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 21A(1) (Schedule para 21A added by SI 2006/3386). The rules under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 21A(1) must enable an investment firm or a credit institution authorised by the competent authority of another EEA state (including a branch established in the United Kingdom of such a firm or institution) to have access to those facilities on the same terms as a UK firm for the purposes of finalising or arranging the finalisation of transactions in financial instruments: Schedule para 21A(2) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'investment firm' see PARA 21 note 5. As to the meaning of 'credit institution' see PARA 688 note 16. As to the meaning of 'competent authority' see PARA 694 note 7. As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1. As to the meaning of 'branch' see PARA 690 note 7. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. As to the meaning of 'UK firm' see PARA 690 note 9. As to the meaning of 'financial instrument' see PARA 690 note 5.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 21A(3) (as added: see note 7).

701. Discipline and complaints. In order to qualify for recognition, the clearing house must have effective arrangements for monitoring and enforcing compliance with its rules[1]. The arrangements must include procedures for: (1) investigating complaints made to the clearing house about the conduct of persons in the course of using the clearing house's facilities[2]; and (2) the fair, independent and impartial resolution of appeals against decisions of the clearing house[3].

Where the arrangements include provision for requiring the payment of financial penalties, they must include arrangements for ensuring that any amount so paid is applied only in one or more of the following ways:

(a) towards meeting expenses incurred by the clearing house in the course of the investigation of the breach in respect of which the penalty is paid, or in the course of any appeal against the decision of the clearing house in relation to that breach[4];

(b) for the benefit of users of the clearing house's facilities[5];

(c) for charitable purposes[6].

The clearing house must have effective arrangements for the investigation and resolution of complaints arising in connection with the performance of, or failure to perform, any of its regulatory functions[7]. The arrangements must include arrangements for a complaint to be fairly and impartially investigated by a person independent of the clearing house, and for him to report on the result of his investigation to the clearing house and to the complainant[8]. The arrangements must confer on that person[9] the power to recommend, if he thinks it appropriate, that the clearing house makes a compensatory payment to the complainant[10], remedies the matter complained of[11] or takes both of those steps[12].

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 22(3)(b).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 22(3)(c).

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 23(1). However, this does not extend to complaints about the content of rules made by the clearing house (Schedule para 23(2)(a)) or complaints about a decision against which the complainant has the right to appeal under procedures of the kind mentioned in Schedule para 22(2)(b) (see head (2) in the text) (Schedule para 23(2)(b)).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 23(3). The provisions of Schedule para 23(3) are not to be taken as preventing the clearing house from making arrangements for the initial investigation of a complaint to be conducted by the clearing house: Schedule para 23(5).

9 Ie the person mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 23(3).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 23(4).

702. Default rules in respect of market contracts. The clearing house must have default rules[1] which, in the event of a member of the clearing house being or appearing to be unable to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts[2], enable action to be taken to close out his position in relation to all unsettled market contracts to which he is a party[3].

The rules may authorise the taking of the same or similar action where a member appears to be likely to become unable to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts[4].

1 As to the meaning of 'default rules' see PARA 685 note 7.

2 As to the meaning of 'market contract' see PARA 693 note 2.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 24(1). Nothing in the Schedule Pt IV (paras 24–28) is to be taken as requiring a recognised clearing house which does not enter into such contracts as are mentioned in the Companies Act 1989 s 155(3) (see PARA 510) to have default rules, or to make any arrangements, relating to such contracts: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 8.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 24(2).

703. Content of default rules. The default rules[1] must provide:

(1) for all rights and liabilities of the defaulter[2] under or in respect of unsettled market contracts[3] to be discharged and for there to be paid by or to the defaulter such sum of money (if any) as may be determined in accordance with the rules[4];

(2) for the sums so payable by or to the defaulter in respect of different contracts to be aggregated or set off so as to produce a net sum[5];

(3) for that sum, if payable by the defaulter to the clearing house, to be set off against any property provided by or on behalf of the defaulter as cover for margin (or the proceeds of realisation of such property) so as to produce a further net sum[6] and, if payable by the clearing house to the defaulter, to be aggregated with any property provided by or on behalf of the defaulter as cover for margin (or the proceeds of realisation of such property)[7]; and

(4) for the certification by or on behalf of the clearing house of the sum finally payable or, as the case may be, of the fact that no sum is payable[8].

The rules of the clearing house must provide that in the event of a default, margin provided by the defaulter for his own account is not to be applied to meet a shortfall on a client account[9].

1 As to the meaning of 'default rules' see PARA 685 note 7.

2 As to the meanings of 'defaulter' and 'default' see PARA 693 note 1.

3 As to the meaning of 'market contract' see PARA 693 note 2. The reference in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 25(1) to the rights and liabilities of a defaulter under or in respect of an unsettled market contract includes (without prejudice to the generality of that provision) rights and liabilities arising in consequence of action taken under provisions of the rules authorising:

(1) the effecting by the clearing house of corresponding contracts in relation to unsettled market contracts to which the defaulter is party (Schedule para 25(2)(a));

(2) the transfer of the defaulter's position under an unsettled market contract to another member of the clearing house (Schedule para 25(2)(b));

(3) the exercise by the clearing house of any option granted by an unsettled market contract (Schedule para 25(2)(c)).

'Corresponding contract' means a contract on the same terms (except as to price or premium) as the market contract but under which the person who is the buyer under the market contract agrees to sell and the person who is the seller under the market contract agrees to buy: Schedule para 25(3). The provisions of Schedule para 25(3) apply with any necessary modifications in relation to a market contract which is not an agreement to sell: Schedule para 25(4). The reference in Schedule para 25(1) to the rights and liabilities of a defaulter under or in respect of an unsettled market contract does not include, where he acts as agent, rights or liabilities of his arising out of the relationship of principal and agent: Schedule para 25(5).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, Schedule para 28(1). The provisions of Schedule para 28 are without prejudice to the requirements of any rules relating to clients' money made by the Financial Services Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 138 (see PARA 21) and s 139 (see PARA 25): Schedule para 28(2). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

704. Default rules: notification and co-operation. The clearing house must have adequate arrangements for ensuring that parties to unsettled market contracts[1] with a defaulter[2] are notified as soon as reasonably practicable of the default and of any decision taken under the rules in relation to contracts to which they are a party[3].

The clearing house must be able and willing to co-operate, by the sharing of information and otherwise, with the Secretary of State[4], any relevant office-holder[5], and any other authority or body having responsibility for any matter arising out of or connected with the default of a member of the clearing house[6].

1 As to the meaning of 'market contract' see PARA 693 note 2.
2 As to the meanings of 'defaulter' and 'default' see PARA 693 note 1.

(c) Satisfying Recognition Requirements

705. Method of satisfying recognition requirements. In considering whether a recognised body[1] or applicant[2] satisfies recognition requirements[3] applying to it under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001[4], the Financial Services Authority[5] may take into account all relevant circumstances including the constitution of the person concerned and its regulatory provisions and practices[6].

Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions described above[7], a recognised body or applicant may satisfy recognition requirements applying to it by making arrangements for functions to be performed on its behalf by any other person[8].

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, reg 6(2). Where a recognised body or applicant makes arrangements of the kind mentioned in reg 6(2), the arrangements do not affect the responsibility imposed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 on the recognised body or applicant to satisfy recognition requirements applying to it under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Recognition Requirements for Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/995, but it is in addition a recognition requirement applying to the recognised body or applicant that the person who performs (or is to perform) the functions is a fit and proper person who is able and willing to perform them: reg 6(3).

(C) Applications for Recognition

706. Application for recognition by an investment exchange. Any body corporate[1] or unincorporated association may apply to the Financial Services Authority[2] for an order declaring it to be a recognised investment exchange[3] for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[4].

The application[5] must be made in such manner as the Authority may direct and must be accompanied by:

(1) a copy of the applicant's[6] rules[7];
(2) a copy of any guidance issued by the applicant[8];
(3) the required particulars[9]; and
(4) such other information as the Authority may reasonably require for the purpose of determining the application[10].

1 As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 86 note 11.
2 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

3 As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287(1).
5 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII (ss 285–313), 'application' means an application for a recognition order made under s 287 or under s 288 (see PARA 707): s 313(1). As to the meaning of 'recognition order' see PARA 684 note 1.
6 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII, 'applicant' means a body corporate or unincorporated association which has applied for a recognition order: s 313(1).
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287(2)(a).
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287(2)(b).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287(2)(c). The required particulars are:
(1) particulars of any arrangements which the applicant has made, or proposes to make, for the provision of clearing services in respect of transactions effected on the exchange (s 287(3)(a));
(2) if the applicant proposes to provide clearing services in respect of transactions other than those effected on the exchange, particulars of the criteria which the applicant will apply when determining to whom it will provide those services (s 287(3)(b));
(3) a programme of operations which includes the types of business the applicant proposes to undertake and the applicant's proposed organisational structure (s 287(3)(c) (s 287(3)(c)–(e), (4) added by SI 2007/126);
(4) such particulars of the persons who effectively direct the business and operations of the exchange as the Authority may reasonably require (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287(3)(d) (as so added));
(5) such particulars of the ownership of the exchange, and in particular of the identity and scale of interests of the persons who are in a position to exercise significant influence over the management of the exchange, whether directly or indirectly, as the Authority may reasonably require (s 287(3)(e) (as so added)).
Heads (3)–(5) above do not apply to an application by an overseas applicant: s 287(4) (as so added). For the purposes of Pt XVIII, 'overseas applicant' means a body corporate or association which has neither its head office nor registered office in the United Kingdom and in relation to which a recognition order is in force: s 313(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287(2)(d).

707. Application for recognition by a clearing house. Any body corporate[1] or unincorporated association may apply to the Financial Services Authority[2] for an order declaring it to be a recognised clearing house[3] for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[4].

The application[5] must be made in such manner as the Authority may direct and must be accompanied by:

(1) a copy of the applicant's[6] rules[7];
(2) a copy of any guidance issued by the applicant[8];
(3) the required particulars[9]; and
(4) such other information as the Authority may reasonably require for the purpose of determining the application[10].

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 288(2)(b).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 288(2)(c). The required particulars are:
(1) if the applicant makes, or proposes to make, clearing arrangements with a recognised investment exchange, particulars of those arrangements (s 288(3)(a));
(2) if the applicant proposes to provide clearing services for persons other than recognised investment exchanges, particulars of the criteria which it will apply when determining to whom it will provide those services (s 288(3)(b)).
As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 288(2)(d).

708. Requirement for further information. At any time after receiving an application[1] and before determining it, the Financial Services Authority[2] may require the applicant[3] to provide such further information as it reasonably considers necessary to enable it to determine the application[4].

Information which the Authority requires in connection with an application must be provided in such form, or verified in such manner, as the Authority may direct[5]. Different directions may be given, or requirements imposed, by the Authority with respect to different applications[6].

1 As to the meaning of 'application' see PARA 706 note 5.
2 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 289(2).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 289(3).

709. Recognition orders. If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[1] that the applicant[2] satisfies the recognition requirements[3] applicable in its case, the Authority may make a recognition order[4] declaring the applicant to be: (1) a recognised investment exchange[5]; (2) a recognised clearing house[6].

The Treasury's[7] approval of the making of a recognition order is required[8]. In considering an application[9], the Authority may have regard to any information which it considers is relevant to the application[10]. A recognition order must specify a date on which it is to take effect[11].

The Authority must not make a recognition order if it appears to the Authority that an existing or proposed regulatory provision of the applicant in connection with the applicant's business as an investment exchange or the provision by the applicant of clearing services, imposes or will impose an excessive requirement on the persons affected (directly or indirectly) by it[12].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'applicant' see PARA 706 note 6.

3 As to recognition requirements generally see PARA 685. See also notes 5, 12.

4 As to the meaning of 'recognition order' see PARA 684 note 1.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1)(a). The application is made under s 287: see PARA 706. As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.

In the case of an application for an order declaring the applicant to be a recognised investment exchange, the reference in s 290(1) to the recognition requirements applicable in its case includes a reference to requirements contained in any directly applicable Community regulation made under the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1A) (s 290(1A)–(1C) added by SI 2007/126). In the case mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1A), the application must be determined by the Authority before the end of the period of six months beginning with the date on which it receives the completed application: s 290(1B) (as so added). Section 290(1B) does not apply in the case of an application by an overseas applicant: s 290(1C) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'overseas applicant' see PARA 706 note 9.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1)(b). The application is made under s 288: see PARA 707. As to the meaning of 'recognised clearing house' see PARA 684 note 6. See note 5.

7 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(2). As to the requirement for approval see s 307; and PARA 733.

9 As to the meaning of 'application' see PARA 706 note 5.

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(3).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(4).

Section 298 (see PARA 716) has effect in relation to a decision to refuse to make a recognition order as it has effect in relation to a decision to revoke such an order (s 290(5)(a)) and as if references to a recognised body were references to the applicant (s 290(5)(b)). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6. Section 290(5) does not apply in a case in which the Treasury has failed to give its approval under s 307 (see PARA 733): s 290(6).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290A(1) (s 290A added by the Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses Act 2006 s 4).

The reference in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 290(1) (making of recognition order) (see the text to notes 1–6) to satisfying the applicable recognition requirements is read accordingly: s 290A(2) (as so added).

Expressions used in s 290A(1) that are defined for the purposes of s 300A (power of Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision) (see PARA 721) have the same meaning as in that provision: s 290A(3) (as so added). The provisions of s 300A(3), (4) (determination whether regulatory provision excessive) (see PARA 721) apply for the purposes of s 290A as for the purposes of s 300A: s 290A(4) (as so added).

Section 298 (see PARA 716) has effect in relation to a decision under s 290A to refuse a recognition order (1) as it has effect in relation to a decision to revoke such an order; and (2) as if references to a recognised body were references to the applicant: s 290A(5) (as so added). Section 290A does not apply to an application for recognition as an overseas investment exchange or overseas clearing house: s 290A(6) (as so added). For the purposes of Pt XVIII (ss 285–313), 'overseas investment exchange' means a body corporate or association which has neither its head office nor its registered office in the United Kingdom and in relation to which a recognition order is in force: s 313(1). As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 86 note 11. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. 'Overseas clearing house' means a body corporate or association which has neither its head office nor its registered office in the United Kingdom and in relation to which a recognition order is in force: s 313(1).

710. Overseas investment exchanges and overseas clearing houses. An application[1] by an overseas applicant[2] must contain the address of a place in the United Kingdom[3] for the service on the applicant[4] of notices or other documents[5] required or authorised to be served on it under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[6].

If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[7] that an overseas applicant satisfies the requirements mentioned below[8], it may make a recognition order declaring the applicant to be: (1) a recognised investment exchange[9]; (2) a recognised clearing house[10].

The requirements are that:

(a) investors are afforded protection equivalent to that which they would be afforded if the body concerned were required to comply with certain recognition requirements[11];

(b) there are adequate procedures for dealing with a person who is unable, or likely to become unable, to meet his obligations in respect of one or more market contracts[12] connected with the investment exchange or clearing house[13];

(c) the applicant is able and willing to co-operate with the Authority by the sharing of information and in other ways[14];

(d) adequate arrangements exist for co-operation between the Authority and those responsible for the supervision of the applicant in the country or territory in which the applicant's head office is situated[15].

1 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287 (see PARA 706) or s 288 (see PARA 707).

2 As to the meaning of 'overseas applicant' see PARA 706 note 9.

3 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

4 As to the meaning of 'applicant' see PARA 706 note 6.

5 As to the meaning of 'document' see PARA 10 note 10.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(1).

7 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

8 Ie the requirements of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(3): see heads (a)–(d) in the text.

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(2)(a). As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.

In relation to an overseas applicant and a body or association declared to be a recognised investment exchange or recognised clearing house by a recognition order made by virtue of s 292(2):

(1) the reference in s 313(2) (see PARA 685) to recognition requirements is to be read as a reference to matters corresponding to the matters in respect of which provision is made in the recognition requirements (s 292(5)(a));

(2) s 296(1) (see PARA 714) and s 297(2) (see PARA 715) have effect as if the requirements mentioned in s 296(1)(a) and s 297(2)(a) were those of heads (a), (b), and (c) in the text (s 292(5)(b));

(3) s 297(2) has effect as if the grounds on which a recognition order may be revoked under that provision included the ground that in the opinion of the Authority arrangements of the kind mentioned in head (d) in the text no longer exist (s 292(5)(c)).

As to recognition requirements generally see PARA 685.

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(2)(b). As to the meaning of 'recognised clearing house' see PARA 684 note 6. See note 9.

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(3)(a) (amended by SI 2006/2975). The reference is to recognition requirements, other than any such requirements which are expressed in regulations under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 286 (see PARA 685) not to apply for the purposes of s 292(3)(a).

12 As to the meaning of 'market contract' see PARA 693 note 2.
13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(3)(b).
14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(3)(c).
15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292(3)(d). In considering whether it is satisfied as to the requirements mentioned in heads (a) and (b) in the text, the Authority must have regard to the relevant law and practice of the country or territory in which the applicant's head office is situated (s 292(4)(a)) and the rules and practices of the applicant (s 292(4)(b)).

C. SUPERVISION

711. Notification requirements. The Financial Services Authority[1] may make rules[2] requiring a recognised body[3] to give it: (1) notice of such events relating to the body as may be specified[4]; and (2) such information in respect of those events as may be specified[5].

The rules may also require a recognised body to give the Authority, at such times or in respect of such periods as may be specified, such information relating to the body as may be specified[6]. An obligation imposed by the rules extends only to a notice or information which the Authority may reasonably require for the exercise of its functions under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[7]. The rules may require information to be given in a specified form and to be verified in a specified manner[8].

If a recognised body alters or revokes any of its rules or guidance[9] or makes new rules or issues new guidance[10], it must give written notice to the Authority without delay[11].

If a recognised investment exchange[12] makes a change in the arrangements it makes for the provision of clearing services in respect of transactions effected on the exchange[13] or in the criteria which it applies when determining to whom it will provide clearing services[14], it must give written notice to the Authority without delay[15]. If a recognised clearing house[16] makes a change in the recognised investment exchanges for whom it provides clearing services[17] or in the criteria which it applies when determining to whom (other than recognised investment exchanges) it will provide clearing services[18], it must give written notice to the Authority without delay[19].

A recognised investment exchange must as soon as practicable after a recognition order[20] is made in respect of it publish such particulars of the ownership of the exchange as the Authority may reasonably require[21]. If an ownership transfer[22] takes place in relation to a recognised investment exchange, the exchange must as soon as practicable after becoming aware of the transfer publish such particulars relating to the transfer as the Authority may reasonably require[23]. A recognised investment exchange must publish such particulars of any decision it makes to suspend or remove a financial instrument from trading on a regulated market[24] operated by it as the Authority may reasonably require[25]. The Authority may determine the manner of publication under the above provisions[26] and the timing of such publication[27].

The Authority may require a recognised investment exchange to give the Authority such information as it reasonably requires in order to satisfy itself that the exchange is complying with any directly applicable Community regulation made under the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive[28].

The particulars published under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292A(1) must include particulars of the identity and scale of interests of the persons who are in a position to exercise significant influence over the management of the exchange, whether directly or indirectly: s 292A(2) (as so added). Section 292A does not apply to an overseas investment exchange: s 292A(7) (as so added).
22 'Ownership transfer', in relation to an exchange, means a transfer of ownership which gives rise to a change in the persons who are in a position to exercise significant influence over the management of the exchange, whether directly or indirectly: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 292A(3) (as added: see note 21). See note 21.

712. Reports by overseas investment exchanges and overseas clearing houses.

At least once a year, every overseas investment exchange[1] and overseas clearing house[2] must provide the Financial Services Authority[3] with a report[4]. The report must contain a statement as to whether any events have occurred which are likely to affect the Authority's assessment of whether it is satisfied as to certain requirements[5] or to have any effect on competition[6].

The report must also contain such information as may be specified in rules made by the Authority[7]. The investment exchange or clearing house must provide the Treasury[8] and the Office of Fair Trading[9] with a copy of the report[10].

1 As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12.
2 As to the meaning of 'overseas clearing house' see PARA 709 note 12.

713. Modification or waiver of rules relating to notification and reports. The Financial Services Authority[1] may, on the application or with the consent of a recognised body[2], direct that certain rules[3] are not to apply to the body[4] or are to apply to the body with such modifications as may be specified in the direction[5].

An application must be made in such manner as the Authority may direct[6].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

3 Ie rules made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 293 (see PARA 711) or s 295 (see PARA 712).

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 294(1)(a).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 294(1)(b). Section 294(4)–(6) applies to a direction given under s 294(1): s 294(3).

The Authority may not give a direction unless it is satisfied that: (1) compliance by the recognised body with the rules, or with the rules as unmodified, would be unduly burdensome or would not achieve the purpose for which the rules were made (s 294(4)(a)); and (2) the direction would not result in undue risk to persons whose interests the rules are intended to protect (s 294(4)(b)). A direction may be given subject to conditions: s 294(5). The Authority may revoke a direction (s 294(6)(a)) or vary it on the application, or with the consent, of the recognised body to which it relates (s 294(6)(b)).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 294(2).

714. The Financial Services Authority's power to give directions. If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[1] that a recognised body[2] has failed, or is likely to fail, to satisfy the recognition requirements[3] or has failed to comply with any other obligation imposed on it by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[4], it may direct the body to take specified steps for the purpose of securing the body's compliance with (1) the recognition requirements[5]; or (2) any obligation of the kind in question[6].

The above[7] also applies in the case of a recognised body which is a recognised investment exchange[8] if it appears to the Authority that the body has failed, or is likely to fail, to comply with any obligation imposed on it by any directly applicable Community regulation made under the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive[9]. In the case of a recognised investment exchange other than an overseas investment exchange[10], the steps referred to above may include: (a) the granting to the Authority of access to the premises of the exchange for the purpose of inspecting those premises; or any documents on the premises which appear to the Authority to be relevant for the purpose[11]; (b) the suspension of the carrying on of any regulated activity[12] by the exchange for the period specified in the direction[13].

A direction under these provisions is enforceable, on the application of the Authority, by an injunction[14]. The fact that a rule made by a recognised body has been altered in response to a direction given by the Authority does not prevent it from being subsequently altered or revoked by the recognised body[15].

15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 296(4). As to rules of a clearing house and rules of an investment exchange see PARA 685 note 7.

715. Power of the Financial Services Authority to revoke recognition. A recognition order[1] may be revoked by an order made by the Financial Services Authority[2] at the request, or with the consent, of the recognised body[3] concerned[4].

If it appears to the Authority that a recognised body (1) is failing, or has failed, to satisfy the recognition requirements[5]; or (2) is failing, or has failed, to comply with any other obligation imposed on it by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[6], it may make an order revoking the recognition order for that body even though the body does not wish the order to be made[7].

If it appears to the Authority that a recognised body which is a recognised investment exchange[8] (a) has not carried on the business of an investment exchange during the period of 12 months beginning with the day on which the recognition order took effect in relation to it[9]; (b) has not carried on the business of an investment exchange at any time during the period of six months ending with the relevant day[10]; or (c) has failed, or is likely to fail, to comply with any obligation imposed on it by a directly applicable Community regulation made under the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive[11], it may make an order revoking the recognition order for that body even though the body does not wish the order to be made[12].

Such an order (a 'revocation order') must specify the date on which it is to take effect[13]. A revocation order may contain such transitional provisions as the Authority thinks necessary or expedient[14].

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(2A)(a) (s 297(2A)–(2C) added by SI 2007/126). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(2A) does not apply to an overseas investment exchange: s 297(2C) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12.
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(2A)(b) (as added: see note 9). The 'relevant day', for the purposes of s 297(2A)(b), is the day on which the power to make an order under s 297(2A) is exercised: s 297(2B) (as so added). See note 9.
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(2A)(c) (as added: see note 9). The reference is to European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments. See note 9.
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(2A) (as added: see note 9). See note 9.
13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(3). 'Revocation order' has the meaning described in the text: ss 297, 313(1). In the case of a revocation order made under s 297(2) or (2A), the specified date must not be earlier than the end of the period of three months beginning with the day on which the order is made: s 297(4) (amended by SI 2007/126).
14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 297(5).

716. Procedure for directions and revocation orders. Before giving a direction[1] or making a revocation order[2], the Financial Services Authority[3] must:

(1) give written notice of its intention to do so to the recognised body[4] concerned[5];
(2) take such steps as it considers reasonably practicable to bring the notice to the attention of members (if any) of that body[6]; and
(3) publish the notice in such manner as it thinks appropriate for bringing it to the attention of other persons who are, in its opinion, likely to be affected[7].

A notice[8] must state why the Authority intends to give the direction or make the order; and draw attention to the right to make representations[9]. Before the end of the period for making representations[10] the recognised body[11], any member of that body[12], and any other person who is likely to be affected by the proposed direction or revocation order[13], may make representations to the Authority[14].

When the Authority has decided whether to give a direction[15] or to make the proposed revocation order, it must: (a) give the recognised body written notice of its decision[16]; and (b) if it has decided to give a direction or make an order, take such steps as it considers reasonably practicable for bringing its decision to the attention of members of the body or of other persons who are, in the Authority's opinion, likely to be affected[17].

If the Authority considers it essential to do so, it may give a direction[18] without following the procedure described above[19] or, if the Authority has begun to follow that procedure, regardless of whether the period for making representations has expired[20].

If the Authority has, in relation to a particular matter, followed the procedure set out in s 298(1)–(5), it need not follow it again if, in relation to that matter, it decides to take action other than that specified in its notice under s 298(1) (see the text and notes 1–7): s 298(8).

717. Complaints about recognised bodies. The Financial Services Authority[1] must make arrangements for the investigation of any relevant complaint[2] about a recognised body[3].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

2 'Relevant complaint' means a complaint which the Authority considers is relevant to the question of whether the body concerned should remain a recognised body: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 299(2). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 299(1).

718. Disciplinary proceedings before the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal. The Treasury[1] has power, if it is satisfied that the condition mentioned below[2] is satisfied, to make an order conferring functions on the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[3] with respect to disciplinary proceedings[4] of one or more investment exchanges in relation to which a recognition order[5] is in force or of such investment exchanges generally[6] or of one or more clearing houses in relation to which a recognition order[7] is in force or of such clearing houses generally[8].

The condition is that it is desirable to exercise the power described above[9] with a view to ensuring that: (1) decisions taken in disciplinary proceedings with respect to which functions are to be conferred on the Tribunal are consistent with decisions of the Tribunal in cases arising under Part VIII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[10] and decisions taken in other disciplinary proceedings with respect to which the Tribunal has functions as a result of an order made by the Treasury[11]; or (2) the disciplinary proceedings are in accordance with the Convention rights[12].

An order may modify or exclude any provision made by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 with respect to proceedings before the Tribunal[13].

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
2 Ie mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300(2).
3 As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.
4 'Disciplinary proceedings' means proceedings under the rules of an investment exchange or clearing house in relation to market abuse by persons subject to the rules: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300(4). As to rules of an investment exchange and rules of a clearing house see PARA 685 note 7. As to the meaning of 'market abuse' see PARA 437.

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300(2)(a)(ii). The order referred to in the text is an order made under s 300.
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300(2)(b). 'Convention rights' has the meaning given in the Human Rights Act 1998 s 1 (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300(5).
13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300(3).

719. Liability in relation to recognised body's regulatory functions. A recognised body[1] and its officers and staff are not liable in damages for anything done or omitted in the discharge of the recognised body's regulatory functions[2] unless it is shown that the act or omission was in bad faith[3].

1 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6.
2 'Regulatory functions' means the functions of the recognised body so far as relating to, or to matters arising out of, the obligations to which the body is subject under or by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: s 291(3).
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 291(1). However, s 291(1) does not prevent an award of damages made in respect of an act or omission on the ground that the act or omission was unlawful as a result of the Human Rights Act 1998 s 6(1) (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 291(2).

720. Supervision of certain contracts. The Secretary of State[1] and the Treasury[2], acting jointly, may by regulations provide for certain provisions relating to safeguarding financial markets on an insolvency[3] to apply to relevant contracts as they apply to contracts connected with a recognised body[4]. 'Relevant contracts' means contracts of a prescribed[5] description in relation to which settlement arrangements are provided by a person for the time being included in a list (the 'list') maintained by the Financial Services Authority for these purposes[6].

The approval of the Treasury is required for the conditions set by the Authority for admission to the list[7] and the arrangements for admission to, and removal from, the list[8].

The Authority must publish the list as for the time being in force[9] and provide a certified copy of it to any person who wishes to refer to it in legal proceedings[10]. A certified copy of the list is evidence of the contents of the list[11]. A copy of the list which purports to be certified by or on behalf of the Authority is to be taken to have been duly certified unless the contrary is shown[12].

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301(1). As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6. Regulations may be made under s 301 only if the Secretary of State and the Treasury are satisfied, having regard to the extent to which the relevant contracts concerned are contracts of a kind dealt in by persons supervised by the Financial Services Authority, that it is appropriate for the arrangements mentioned in s 301(2) to be supervised by the Authority: s 301(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made. As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1. As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.
5 'Prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Treasury: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 417(1). See note 4.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301(4)(a).
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301(4)(b). If the Treasury withdraws an approval given by it under s 301(4), all regulations made under s 301 and then in force are to be treated as suspended: s 301(5). However, if the Authority changes the conditions or arrangements (or both) (s 301(6)(a)) and the Treasury give a fresh approval under s 301(4) (s 301(6)(b)), the suspension of the regulations ends on such date as the Treasury may, in giving the fresh approval, specify (s 301(6)).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301(9). Regulations under s 301 may, in relation to a person included in the list: (1) apply (with such exceptions, additions and modifications as appear to the Secretary of State and the Treasury to be necessary or expedient) such provisions of, or made under, the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 as they consider appropriate (s 301(10)(a)); (2) provide for the provisions of the Companies Act 1989 Pt VII (see PARA 509 et seq) and the Companies (No 2) (Northern Ireland) Order 1990 Pt V to apply (with such exceptions, additions or modifications as appear to the Secretary of State and the Treasury to be necessary or expedient) (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301(10)(b)). See note 4.

D. DISALLOWANCE OF EXCESSIVE REGULATORY PROVISION

721. Power of the Financial Services Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision. Where a recognised body[1] proposes to make any regulatory provision[2] in connection with its business as an investment exchange or the provision by it of clearing services[3], if it appears to the Financial Services Authority[4] (1) that the proposed provision will impose a requirement[5] on persons affected (directly or indirectly) by it[6]; and (2) that the requirement is excessive[7], the Authority may direct that the proposed provision must not be made[8]. A requirement is excessive if (a) it is not required under Community law or any enactment or rule of law in the United Kingdom[9]; and (b) either it is not justified as pursuing a reasonable regulatory objective, or it is disproportionate to the end to be achieved[10]. In considering whether a requirement is excessive the Authority must have regard to all the relevant circumstances, including: (i) the effect of existing legal and other requirements[11]; (ii) the global character of financial services and markets and the international mobility of activity[12]; (iii) the desirability of facilitating innovation[13]; and (iv) the impact of the proposed provision on market confidence[14]. Any provision made in contravention of a direction under the above provisions is of no effect[15].

For the purposes of the above provisions a variation of a proposal is treated as a new proposal[16].

1 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6.
2 'Regulatory provision' means any rule, guidance, arrangements, policy or practice, and references to making provision must be read accordingly as including, as the case may require, issuing guidance, entering into arrangements or adopting a policy or practice: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300E(1) (s 300E added by Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses Act 2006 s 2).
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(1) (s 300A added by the Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses Act 2006 s 1). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 300A–300D do not apply to an overseas investment exchange or overseas clearing house: s 300E(3) (as added: see note 2). As to the meanings of 'overseas investment exchange' and 'overseas clearing house' see PARA 709 note 12.
4 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
5 For these purposes, 'requirement' includes any obligation or burden: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(5) (as added: see note 3).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(2)(a) (as added: see note 3).
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(2)(b) (as added: see note 3).
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(2) (as added: see note 3).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(3)(a) (as added: see note 3). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' se PARA 2 note 3.
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(3)(b) (as added: see note 3).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(4)(a) (as added: see note 3).
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(4)(b) (as added: see note 3).
13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(4)(c) (as added: see note 3).
14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(4)(d) (as added: see note 3).
15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300A(6).
16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300E(2) (as added: see note 2).

722. Duty to notify proposal to make regulatory provision. A recognised body[1] that proposes to make any regulatory provision[2] must give written notice of the proposal to the Financial Services Authority[3] without delay[4]. The Authority may by rules[5] (1) specify descriptions of regulatory provision in relation to which, or circumstances in which, the above duty[6] does not apply[7]; or (2) provide that the duty applies only to specified descriptions of regulatory provision or in specified circumstances[8]. The Authority may also by rules[9] (a) make provision as to the form and contents of the notice required[10]; and (b) require the body to provide such information relating to the proposal as may be specified in the rules or as the Authority may reasonably require[11].

For the purposes of the above provisions a variation of a proposal is treated as a new proposal[12].

1 As to the meaning of 'recognised body' see PARA 685 note 6.
2 As to the meaning of 'regulatory provision' see PARA 721 note 2.
3 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300B(1) (s 300B added by the Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses Act 2006 s 2). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 300A–300D do not apply to an overseas investment exchange or overseas clearing house: s 300E(3) (s 300E added by the Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses Act 2006 s 2). 12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300E(2) (as added: see note 4).

723. Restriction on making provision before the Financial Services Authority decides whether to act. Where notice of a proposal to make regulatory provision[1] is required to be given to the Financial Services Authority[2], the provision must not be made (1) before that notice is given[3]; or (2) subject to the following provisions[4], before the end of the initial period[5]. If before the end of the initial period the Authority notifies the body that it is calling in the proposal, specified provisions[6] apply as to when the provision may be made[7]. If (a) before the end of the initial period the Authority notifies the body that it is not calling in the proposal[8]; or (b) the initial period ends without the Authority having notified the body that it is calling in the proposal[9], the body may then make the proposed provision[10]. Any provision made in contravention of the above provisions is of no effect[11].

For the purposes of the above provisions a variation of a proposal is treated as a new proposal[12].

The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 300A–300D do not apply to an overseas investment exchange or overseas clearing house: s 300E(3) (s 300E added by the Investment Exchanges and Clearing Houses Act 2006 s 2). 6 Ie the provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300D: see PARA 724.
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300C(3) (as added: see note 3).
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300C(4)(a) (as added: see note 3).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300C(4)(b) (as added: see note 3).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 300E(2) (as added: see note 3).

724. Consideration by the Financial Services Authority whether to disallow proposed provision. Where the Financial Services Authority[1] notifies a recognised body[2] that it is calling in a proposal to make regulatory provision[3], the Authority must publish a notice (1) giving details of the proposed provision[4]; (2) stating that it has called in the proposal in order to consider whether to disallow it[5]; and (3) specifying a period during which representations with respect to that question may be made to it[6]. The Authority may extend the period for making representations[7].

The Authority must notify the body of its decision whether to disallow the provision not later than 30 days after the end of the period for making representations, and must publish the decision and the reasons for it[8]. The body must not make the provision unless and until (a) the Authority notifies it of its decision not to disallow it[9]; or (b) the 30-day period[10] ends without the Authority having notified any decision[11].

If the Authority notifies the body of its decision to disallow the provision and that decision is questioned in legal proceedings (i) the body must not make the provision until those proceedings, and any proceedings on appeal, are finally determined[12]; (ii) if the Authority's decision is quashed and the matter is remitted to it for reconsideration, the court may give directions as to the period within which the Authority is to complete its reconsideration[13]; and (iii) the body must not make the provision until (A) the Authority notifies it of its decision on reconsideration not to disallow the provision[14]; or (B) the period specified by the court ends without the Authority having notified any decision[15].

For the purposes of the above provisions a variation of a proposal is treated as a new proposal[16].

E. CONTROL OVER RECOGNISED INVESTMENT EXCHANGES

725. Acquiring or increasing control. If a step which a person proposes to take would result in his acquiring[1] (1) control over a recognised investment exchange[2]; (2) an additional[3] kind of control[4] over an exchange; or (3) an increase[5] in a relevant kind of control which he already has[6] over an exchange, he must notify the Financial Services Authority[7] of his proposal[8].

A person who, without himself taking any such step, acquires any such control or additional or increased control must notify the Authority before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the day on which he first becomes aware that he has acquired it[9]. A person who is under the duty to notify the Authority imposed by heads (1) to (3) above[10] must also give notice to the Authority on acquiring, or increasing, the control in question[11].

Such a notice[12] is referred to[13] as a 'notice of control'[14].

1 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII Ch IA (ss 301A–301G), a person (the 'acquirer') acquires control over a recognised investment exchange ('E') on first falling within any of the cases set out below: s 301B(1) (ss 301A, 301B, 301G added by SI 2007/126). As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.

The cases referred to above are where the acquirer:

(1) holds 20% or more of the shares in E (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301B(2)(a) (as so added));
(2) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of E by virtue of his shareholding in E (s 301B(2)(b) (as so added));
(3) holds 20% or more shares in a parent undertaking ('P') of E (s 301B(2)(c) (as so added));
(4) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of P by virtue of his shareholding in P (s 301B(2)(d) (as so added));
(5) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, 20% or more of the voting power in E (s 301B(2)(e) (as so added));
(6) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of E by virtue of his voting power in E (s 301B(2)(f) (as so added));
(7) is entitled to exercise, or to control the exercise of, 20% or more of the voting power in P (s 301B(2)(g) (as so added)); or
(8) is able to exercise significant influence over the management of P by virtue of his voting power in P (s 301B(2)(h) (as so added)).

In s 301B(2) 'acquirer' means (a) the acquirer; (b) any of his associates; or (c) the acquirer and any of his associates: s 301B(3) (as so added). As to the meanings of 'associate', 'shares' and 'voting power' see PARA 591 note 16; definitions applied by s 310G (as so added). 'Controller', in relation to a recognised investment exchange, means a person who falls within any of the cases in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301B(2) (see heads (1)–(8) above): s 301G (as so added). As to the meaning of 'parent undertaking' see PARA 351 note 32.

In Pt XVIII Ch IA (other than s 301B) 'acquiring control' or 'having control' includes: (i) acquiring or having an additional kind of control; or (ii) acquiring an increase in a relevant kind of control, or having increased control of a relevant kind: s 301B(7) (as so added). See also notes 4, 5.

2 See note 1.

3 As to additional control see note 1.

4 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII Ch IA, each of the following is to be regarded as a kind of control:

(1) control arising as a result of the holding of shares in E (s 301B(4)(a) (as added: see note 1));
(2) control arising as a result of the holding of shares in P (s 301B(4)(b) (as so added));
(3) control arising as a result of the entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting power in E (s 301B(4)(c) (as so added));
(4) control arising as a result of the entitlement to exercise, or control the exercise of, voting power in P (s 301B(4)(d) (as so added)).

5 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII Ch IA, a controller of E increases his control over E if:

(1) the percentage of shares held by the controller in E increases by the step mentioned in s 301B(6) (see below) (s 301B(5)(a) (as added: see note 1));
(2) the percentage of shares held by the controller in P increases by the step mentioned in s 301B(6) (see below) (s 301(5)(b) (as so added));
(3) the percentage of voting power which the controller is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, in E increases by the step mentioned in s 301B(6) (see below) (s 301(5)(c) (as so added));
(4) the percentage of voting power which the controller is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, in P increases by the step mentioned in s 301B(6) (see below) (s 301(5)(d) (as so added)); or
(5) the controller becomes a parent undertaking of E (s 301(5)(e) (as so added)).

The step referred to above is from 20% or more (but less than 50%) to 50% or more: s 301B(6) (as so added).

6 As to having control see note 1.

7 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

As to the power of the Authority to disallow excessive regulatory provision by recognised investment exchanges and clearing houses see PARA 721 et seq.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301A(1) (as added: see note 1). Nothing in Pt XVIII Ch IA applies to an overseas investment exchange: s 301A(6) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12.

13 Ie in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII Ch IA.
14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 301A(4), 310G (as added: see note 1). Section 182 (see PARA 377) applies to a notice of control under Pt XVIII Ch IA as it applies to a notice of control under Pt XII (ss 178–192) (see PARA 377 et seq): s 301A(5) (as so added).

726. Duty of the Financial Services Authority in relation to notice of control. The Financial Services Authority[1] must, before the end of the period of three months beginning with the date on which it receives a notice of control[2], determine whether (1) to approve of the person concerned having the control[3] to which the notice relates[4]; or (2) to give a warning notice[5]. If the Authority decides to approve of the person concerned having the control to which the notice relates it must notify that person of its approval in writing without delay[6].

If the Authority fails to comply with making the above determination within the three month period[7] it is to be treated as having given its approval and notified the person concerned at the end of the period so fixed[8].

The Authority's approval remains effective only if the person to whom it relates acquires the control[9] in question:

(a) before the end of such period as may be specified in the notice of approval[10]; or

(b) if no period is specified, before the end of the period of one year beginning with the date (i) of the notice of approval[11]; (ii) on which the Authority is treated as having given approval[12]; or (iii) of a decision on a reference to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[13] which results in the person concerned receiving approval[14].

The Authority may give a decision notice[15] unless it is satisfied that the approval requirement[16] is met[17]. If the Authority proposes to give the person concerned a decision notice[18], it must give him a warning notice[19]. A person to whom a decision notice is given[20] may refer the matter to the Tribunal[21].

15 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301C(5). As to decision notices see PARA 770.
16 The approval requirement is that the acquisition of control by the person who gave the notice of control does not pose a threat to the sound and prudent management of any financial market operated by the recognised investment exchange: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301C(6) (as added: see note 4). As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.

21 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301C(7) (as added: see note 4).

727. Objection to existing control. If the Financial Services Authority[1] is not satisfied that the approval requirement[2] is met, it may give a decision notice[3] to a person if he has failed to comply with a duty to notify[4]. In regard to certain such failures[5], the Authority may (instead of giving such a notice[6]) approve the acquisition of control[7] in question by the person concerned as if he had given it a notice of control[8].

The Authority may also give a decision notice[9] to a person who is a controller[10] of a recognised investment exchange[11] if the Authority becomes aware of matters as a result of which it is satisfied that the approval requirement is not met with respect to the controller[12].

If the Authority proposes to give a decision notice in the above two cases[13] to a person, it must give him a warning notice[14] before the end of the period of three months beginning (1) in the first case[15], with the date on which it became aware of the failure to comply with the duty in question[16]; (2) in the second case[17], with the date on which it became aware of the matters in question[18].

A person to whom a decision notice is given[19] may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[20].

728. Improperly acquired shares. The powers[1] considered below are exercisable if a person has acquired, or has continued to hold, any shares in contravention of a decision notice[2].

The Financial Services Authority[3] may by notice in writing given to the person concerned (a 'restriction notice') direct that any such shares which are specified in the notice are, until further notice, subject to one or more of the following restrictions:

(1) a transfer of (or agreement to transfer) those shares, or in the case of unissued shares any transfer of (or agreement to transfer) the right to be issued with them, is void[4];

(2) no voting rights are to be exercisable in respect of the shares[5];

(3) no further shares are to be issued in right of them or in pursuance of any offer made to their holder[6];

(4) except in a liquidation, no payment is to be made of any sums due from the body corporate[7] on the shares, whether in respect of capital or otherwise[8].

The High Court may, on the application of the Authority, order the sale of any shares[9] and, if they are for the time being subject to any such restriction[10], that they are to cease to be subject to that restriction[11].

No such order may be made[12] (a) until the end of the period within which a reference may be made to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[13] in respect of the decision notice in question[14]; and (b) if a reference is made, until the matter has been determined or the reference withdrawn[15]. If such an order has been made[16], the court may, on the application of the Authority, make such further order relating to the sale or transfer of the shares as it thinks fit[17].

If shares are sold in pursuance of such an order[18], the proceeds of sale, less the costs of the sale, must be paid into court for the benefit of the persons beneficially interested in them; and any such person may apply to the court for the whole or part of the proceeds to be paid to him[19].

A copy of the restriction notice must be given to (i) the recognised investment exchange to whose shares it relates[20]; and (ii) if it relates to shares held by an associate of that exchange, that associate[21].

1 Ie the powers conferred by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301E.
Section 301E applies:
(1) in the case of an acquirer falling within s 301A(1) (see PARA 725), to all the shares (a) in the recognised investment exchange which the acquirer has acquired; (b) which are held by him or an associate of his; and (c) which were not so held immediately before he became a person having control over the exchange (s 301E(7)(a) (s 301E added by SI 2007/126));
(2) in the case of an acquirer falling within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 301A(2) (see PARA 725 note 1), to all the shares held by him or an associate of his at the time when he first became aware that he had acquired control over the exchange (s 301E(7)(b) (as so added)); and
(3) to all the shares in an undertaking ('C') (a) which are held by the acquirer or an associate of his; and (b) which were not so held before he became a person with control in relation to the exchange, where C is the undertaking in which shares were acquired by the acquirer (or an associate of his) and, as a result, he became a person with control in relation to that exchange (s 301E(7)(c) (as so added)).

729. Offences in regard to acquisition of control. A person who fails to comply with certain duties to notify the Financial Services Authority[1] imposed on him[2] is in each case guilty of an offence[3].

If a person who has given a notice of control[4] to the Authority carries out the proposal to which the notice relates, he is guilty of an offence if (1) the period of three months beginning with the date on which the Authority received the notice is still running[5]; and (2) the Authority has not responded to the notice by either giving its approval or giving him a warning notice[6].

A person to whom the Authority has given a warning notice[7] is guilty of an offence if he carries out the proposal to which the notice relates before the Authority has decided whether to give him a decision notice[8].

A person guilty of the above offences[9] is liable on summary conviction to a fine[10].

A person to whom a decision notice[11] has been given is guilty of an offence if he acquires[12] or retains the control to which the notice applies at a time when the notice is still in force[13]. A person guilty of such an offence[14] is liable on summary conviction to a fine, and on conviction on indictment to imprisonment or a fine or both[15].

It is a defence for a person charged with the first of the offences in regard to failure to notify the Authority[16] to show that he had, at the time of the alleged offence, no knowledge of the act or circumstances by virtue of which the duty to notify the Authority arose[17].

If a person (a) was under such a duty to notify the Authority[18] but had no knowledge of the act or circumstances by virtue of which that duty arose[19]; but (b) subsequently becomes aware of that act or those circumstances[20], he must notify the Authority before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the day on which he first became so aware[21]. Such a person[22] is guilty of an offence and liable, on summary conviction, to a fine[23].

F. COMPETITION SCRUTINY

(A) Fair Trading

730. Reports. The Financial Services Authority[1] must send to the Treasury[2] and to the Office of Fair Trading[3] a copy of any regulatory provisions[4] with which it is provided on an application for recognition[5]. The Authority must send to the Office of Fair Trading such information in its possession as a result of the application for recognition as it considers will assist it in discharging its functions in connection with the application[6].

The Office of Fair Trading must issue a report as to whether: (1) a regulatory provision of which a copy has been sent to it[7] has a significantly adverse effect on competition[8]; or (2) a combination of regulatory provisions so copied to it have such an effect[9]. If the Office of Fair Trading's conclusion is that one or more provisions have a significantly adverse effect on competition, it must state its reasons for that conclusion[10]. The Office of Fair Trading must keep under review the regulatory provisions and practices of recognised bodies[11].

If at any time the Office of Fair Trading considers that a regulatory provision or practice has a significantly adverse effect on competition[12] or regulatory provisions or practices, or a combination of regulating provisions and practices have such an effect[13], it must make a report[14]. If at any time the Office of Fair Trading considers that a regulatory provision or practice does not have a significantly adverse effect on competition[15] or regulatory provisions or practices, or a combination of regulatory provisions and practices do not have any such effect[16], it may make a report to that effect[17].

For the purposes of the law of defamation, absolute privilege attaches to any such report of the Office of Fair Trading[18].

1 As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

2 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 As to the Office of Fair Trading see TRADE, INDUSTRY AND INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS vol 47 (2001 Reissue) PARA 504 et seq.

4 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII Ch II (ss 302–310) and Ch III (ss 311, 312), 'regulatory provisions' means: (1) the rules of an investment exchange or a clearing house; (2) any guidance issued by an investment exchange or clearing house; (3) in the case of an investment exchange, the arrangements and criteria mentioned in s 287(3)(a), (b) (see PARA 706); (4) in the case of a clearing house, the arrangements and criteria mentioned in s 288(3) (see PARA 707): s 302(1) (definition amended by SI 2007/126). As to rules of a clearing house and rules of an investment exchange see PARA 685 note 7.

References in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII (ss 285–313) to guidance issued by an investment exchange are references to guidance issued, or any recommendation made, in writing or other legible form and intended to have continuing effect, by the investment exchange to all or any class of its members or users (s 313(3)(a)) or persons seeking to become members of the investment exchange or to use its facilities (s 313(3)(b)), with respect to any of the matters mentioned in s 313(2)(a)–(c) (see PARA 685) (s 313(3)).

References in Pt XVIII to guidance issued by a clearing house are to guidance issued, or any recommendation made, in writing or other legible form and intended to have continuing effect, by the clearing house to all or any class of its members (s 313(4)(a)) or persons using or seeking to use its services (s 313(4)(b)), with respect to the provision by it or its members of clearing services (s 313(4)).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(1) (s 303(1)–(5) amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 Sch 25 para 40(1), (10)). As to the application for recognition see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 287 (see PARA 706) or s 288 (see PARA 707).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(2) (as amended: see note 5).

7 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(1).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(3)(a) (as amended: see note 5). For the purposes of Pt XVIII Ch II, regulatory provisions or practices have a significantly adverse effect on competition if: (1) they have, or are intended or likely to have, that effect (s 302(2)(a)); or (2) the effect that they have, or are intended or likely to have, is to require or encourage behaviour which has, or is intended or likely to have, a significantly adverse effect on competition (s 302(2)(b)).

'Practices' means: (a) in relation to a recognised investment exchange, the practices of the exchange in its capacity as such; and (b) in relation to a recognised clearing house, the practices of the clearing house in respect of its clearing arrangements: s 302(1). As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1; and as to the meaning of 'recognised clearing house' see PARA 684 note 6.

If regulatory provisions or practices have, or are intended or likely to have, the effect of requiring or encouraging exploitation of the strength of a market position they are to be taken, for the purposes of Pt XVIII Ch II, to have an adverse effect on competition: s 302(3). In determining under Pt XVIII Ch II whether any regulatory provisions have, or are intended or likely to have, a particular effect, it may be assumed that persons to whom the provisions concerned are addressed will act in accordance with them: s 302(4).

In the case of an application for recognition under s 287 (see PARA 706), the Office of Fair Trading must issue its report under s 303(3) before the end of the period of 12 weeks beginning with the date on which it receives the copy sent to it under s 303(1): s 303(6) (s 303(6), (7) added by SI 2007/126). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(6) does not apply if the application is made by an overseas investment exchange: s 303(7) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12.

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(3)(b) (as amended: see note 5). See note 8. When the Office of Fair Trading issues a report under s 303(3), it must send a copy of it to the Authority, the Competition Commission and the Treasury: s 303(5) (as so amended). As to the Competition Commission see TRADE, INDUSTRY AND INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS vol 47 (2001 Reissue) PARA 111.

13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 304(2)(b) (as amended: see note 11).

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 304(2) (as amended: see note 11). A report under s 304(2) must contain details of the adverse effect on competition: s 304(4). If the Office of Fair Trading makes a report under s 304(2), it must send a copy of it to the Treasury, to the Competition Commission and to the Authority (s 304(5)(a) (as so amended)) and publish it in the way appearing to it to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public (s 304(5)(b) (as so amended)). See further note 17.

16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 304(3)(b) (as amended: see note 11).

17 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 304(3) (as amended: see note 11). Before publishing a report under s 304, the Office of Fair Trading must, so far as practicable, exclude any matter which relates to the private affairs of a particular individual the publication of which, in the opinion of the Office, would or might seriously and prejudicially affect its interests: s 304(7) (as so amended). Before publishing such a report, the Office of Fair Trading must exclude any matter which relates to the affairs of a particular body the publication of which, in the opinion of the Office, would or might seriously and prejudicially affect its interests: s 304(8) (as so amended). The provisions of s 304(7), (8) do not apply to the copy of a report which the Office of Fair Trading is required to send to the Treasury, the Competition Commission and the Authority under s 304(5)(a) (see note 14) or s 304(6)(a) (see below): s 304(9) (as so amended).

If the Office of Fair Trading makes a report under s 304(3), it must send a copy of it to the Treasury, to the Competition Commission and to the Authority (s 304(6)(a) (as so amended)) and the Office may publish it (s 304(6)(b) (as so amended)).

18 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 304(10) (as amended: see note 11).

731. Investigations. For the purpose of investigating any matter[1], the Office of Fair Trading[2] may exercise the powers conferred on it, which are described below[3].

The Office of Fair Trading may by notice in writing require any person to produce to it or to a person appointed by it for the purpose, at a time and place specified in the notice, any document[4] which is specified or described in the notice[5] and is a document in that person's custody or under his control[6].

The Office of Fair Trading may by notice in writing: (1) require any person carrying on any business to provide it with such information as may be specified or described in the notice[7]; and (2) specify the time within which, and the manner and form in which, any such information is to be provided[8].

If a person (the 'defaulter') refuses, or otherwise fails, to comply with a notice under these provisions, the Office of Fair Trading may certify that fact in writing to the High Court and the court may inquire into the case[9]. If, after hearing any witness who may be produced against or on behalf of the defaulter and any statement which may be offered in defence, the court is satisfied that the defaulter did not have a reasonable excuse for refusing or otherwise failing to comply with the notice, the court may deal with the defaulter as if he were in contempt[10].

(B) The Competition Commission

732. Investigation and reports by the Competition Commission. The Competition Commission[1] must investigate the matter which is the subject of the report by the Office of Fair Trading[2] if the Office sends to the Competition Commission a report[3] or if the Office asks the Commission to consider a report[4]. The Commission must then make its own report on the matter unless it considers that, as a result of a change of circumstances, no useful purpose would be served by a report[5].

Such a report must state the Commission's conclusion as to whether: (1) the regulatory provision or practice[6] which is the subject of the report has a significantly adverse effect on competition[7]; or (2) the regulatory provisions or practices or combination of regulatory provisions and practices which are the subject of the report have such an effect[8].

A report stating the Commission's conclusion that there is a significantly adverse effect on competition must also state whether the Commission considers that that effect is justified[9] and, if it states that the Commission considers that it is not justified, state its conclusion as to what action, if any, the Treasury ought to direct the Financial Services Authority to take[10].

Whenever the Commission is considering, for these purposes, whether a particular adverse effect on competition is justified, the Commission must ensure, so far as that is reasonably possible, that the conclusion it reaches is compatible with the obligations imposed on the recognised body[11] concerned by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[12]. Such a report must contain such an account of the Commission's reasons for its conclusions as is expedient, in the opinion of the Commission, for facilitating proper understanding of them[13]. If the Commission makes such a report it must send a copy to the Treasury, the Authority and the Office of Fair Trading[14].

1 As to the Competition Commission see TRADE, INDUSTRY AND INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS vol 47 (2001 Reissue) PARA 111.

3 Ie issued by him under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(3) (see PARA 730) which concludes that one or more regulatory provisions have a significantly adverse effect on competition, or made by him under s 304(2) (see PARA 730). As to the meaning of 'regulatory provisions', and as to regulatory provisions having a significantly adverse effect on competition, see PARA 730.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 306(1)–(3) (s 306(1)–(3), (12) amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 Sch 25 para 40(1), (13)). The report last referred to in the text is to one issued by the Office of Fair Trading under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 303(3) (see PARA 730) which concludes that one or more regulatory provisions do not have a significantly adverse effect on competition, or made by it under s 304(3) (see PARA 730).

If the case relates to an application for recognition under s 287 (see PARA 706), other than an application by an overseas applicant and s 306(2)(a) or 306(3)(a) applies (i e if the Office of Fair Trading has asked the Commission to consider such a report under s 303(3)), the Commission must (1) make a report under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 306, or a statement under s 306(5) (see note 5), before the end of the period of 12 weeks beginning with the date on which it receives a copy of the Office's report under s 303(3); and (2) if it makes a statement under s 306(5), send a copy to the Financial Services Authority and the Treasury: s 306(13), (14) (added by SI 2007/126). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

The provisions of Sch 14 (except Sch 14 para 2(b)) (see PARA 40) apply for the purposes of s 306 as they apply for the purposes of s 162 (see PARA 40): s 306(11).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 306(4). If the Commission decides in accordance with s 306(4) not to make a report, it must make a statement setting out the change of circumstances which resulted in that decision: s 306(5). See also note 4.

(C) The Treasury

733. Power of the Treasury to refuse approval. If, on an application[1] for a recognition order[2]: (1) the Office of Fair Trading[3] makes a report[4] but does not ask the Competition Commission[5] to consider it[6]; (2) the Competition Commission concludes that the applicant's[7] regulatory provisions[8] do not have a significantly adverse effect on competition[9] or, that if those provisions do have that effect, the effect is justified[10], the Treasury[11] may refuse to approve the making of the recognition order only if it considers that the exceptional circumstances of the case make it inappropriate for it to give its approval[12].

If, on an application for a recognition order, the Competition Commission concludes: (a) that the applicant's regulatory provisions have a significantly adverse effect on competition[13]; and (b) that that effect is not justified[14], the Treasury must refuse to approve the making of the recognition order unless it considers that the exceptional circumstances of the case make it inappropriate for it to refuse its approval[15].

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 307(3)(b).
15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 307(4). In the case of an application for recognition under s 287 (see PARA 706), other than an application by an overseas applicant, the Treasury must decide whether to approve the application before the end of the period of ten days beginning with (1) in a case falling within s 306(2)(a) or (3)(a) (see PARA 732), the date on which they receive a copy of the report under s 306, if no such report was made, of the statement under s 306(5) (see PARA 732 note 5); (2) in any other case, the date on which they receive a copy of the report from the Office of Fair Trading under s 303 (see PARA 730): s 307(5), (6) (added by SI 2007/126).

734. Power of the Treasury to give directions. The provisions described below[1] apply if the Competition Commission[2] makes a report[3] (other than a report on an application for a recognition order[4]) which states the Commission's conclusion that there is a significantly adverse effect on competition[5].

If the Commission's conclusion, as stated in the report, is that the adverse effect on competition is not justified, the Treasury[6] must give a remedial direction[7] to the Financial Services Authority[8]. If the Commission's conclusion, as stated in its report, is that the adverse effect on competition is justified[9] but the Treasury considers that the exceptional circumstances of the case require it to act[10], the Treasury may give a direction to the Authority requiring it to take such action as it considers to be necessary in the light of the exceptional circumstances of the case[11] and as may be specified in the direction[12].

If[13] the Treasury declines to act[14], it must make a statement to that effect, giving its reasons[15]. If the Treasury gives a direction[16], it must make a statement giving details of the direction[17].

The Treasury must: (1) publish any statement made in the way appearing to it best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[18]; and (2) lay a copy of it before Parliament[19].

6 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
7 'Remedial direction' means a direction requiring the Financial Services Authority: (1) to revoke the recognition order for the body concerned; or (2) to give such directions to the body concerned as may be specified in it: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 308(8). In considering the action to be specified in a remedial direction, the Treasury must have regard to any conclusion of the Commission included in the report because of s 306(7)(b) (see PARA 732): s 308(4).
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 308(2). As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Recognised Investment Exchanges and Recognised Clearing Houses (REC). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 308(2) does not apply if the Treasury considers that, as a result of action taken by the Authority or the recognised body concerned in response to the Commission's report, it is unnecessary for it to give a direction (s 308(3)(a)) or that the exceptional circumstances of the case make it inappropriate or unnecessary for it to do so (s 308(3)(b)).

12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 308(6)(b). If the action specified in a remedial direction is the giving by the Authority of a direction, the direction to be given must be compatible with the recognition requirements applicable to the recognised body in relation to which it is given (s 308(7)(a)), and s 296(3), (4) applies to it as if it were a direction given under s 296 (see PARA 714) (s 308(7)(b)).

19 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 309(3)(b).

735. Procedure on exercise of powers by the Treasury. If the Treasury[1] is considering the exercise of certain of its powers[2], the Treasury must: (1) take such steps as it considers appropriate to allow the exchange or clearing house concerned, and any other person appearing to the Treasury to be affected, an opportunity to make representations about any report made by the Office of Fair Trading[3] or by the Competition Commission[4] as to whether, and if so how, the Treasury should exercise its powers[5]; and (2) have regard to any such representations[6].

(D) Disapplication of Provisions of the Competition Act 1998

736. Disapplication of the Chapter I prohibition. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XVIII Ch III[1] disapplies the general domestic competition law as it affects matters covered by the Act.

The prohibition on the restriction of competition affecting trade in the United Kingdom[2] imposed by the Competition Act 1998 (referred to as the 'Chapter I prohibition'[3]) does not apply to an agreement for the constitution of a recognised body[4] to the extent to which the agreement relates to the regulatory provisions[5] of that body[6].

If the conditions below[7] are satisfied, the Chapter I prohibition does not apply to an agreement for the constitution of an investment exchange which is not a recognised investment exchange[8] or a clearing house which is not a recognised clearing house[9], to the extent to which the agreement relates to the regulatory provisions of that body[10]. The conditions are that: (1) the body has applied for a recognition order[11] in accordance with the provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[12]; and (2) the application has not been determined[13].

The Chapter I prohibition does not apply to a recognised body's regulatory provisions[14], nor does it apply to a decision made by a recognised body to the extent to which the decision relates to any of that body's regulatory provisions or practices[15]. The prohibition does not apply to practices of a recognised body[16]. The Chapter I prohibition does not apply to an agreement the parties to which consist of or include a recognised body[17] or a person who is subject to the rules of a recognised body[18], to the extent to which the agreement consists of provisions the inclusion of which is required or encouraged by any of the body's regulatory provisions or practices[19].

If a recognised body's recognition order is revoked, the provisions described above[20] have effect as if that body had continued to be recognised until the end of the period of six months beginning with the day on which the revocation took effect[21].

Expressions used in s 311 which are also used in the Competition Act 1998 Pt I (ss 1–60) are to be interpreted in the same way as for the purposes of the Competition Act 1998 Pt I: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 311(10).

737. Disapplication of the Chapter II prohibition. The prohibition on the abuse of a dominant position affecting trade in the United Kingdom[1] imposed by the Competition Act 1998 (referred to as the 'Chapter II prohibition'[2]) does not apply to:

(1) practices[3] of a recognised body[4];
(2) the adoption or enforcement of such a body's regulatory provisions[5];
(3) any conduct which is engaged in by such a body or by a person who is subject to the rules of such a body to the extent to which it is encouraged or required by the regulatory provisions of the body[6].

G. PASSPORT RIGHTS

(A) EEA Market Operators in the United Kingdom

738. Exercise of passport rights by EEA market operator. An EEA market operator[1] may, in pursuance of the right under the applicable provision[2], make arrangements in the United Kingdom to facilitate access to, or use of, a specified[3] regulated market or specified multilateral trading facility operated by it if (1) the operator has given its home state regulator[4] notice of its intention to make such arrangements[5]; and (2) the home state regulator has given the Financial Services Authority[6] notice of the operator's intention[7].

In making such arrangements[8], the operator is exempt from the general prohibition[9] as respects any regulated activity[10] which is carried on as a part of its business of operating the market or facility in question, or in connection with, or for the purposes of, that business[11].

1 'EEA market operator' means a person who is a market operator (within the meaning of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 4.1.13) whose home state is an EEA state other than the United Kingdom: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312D (ss 312A, 312D added by SI 2007/126). 'Home state', in relation to an EEA market operator, means the EEA state in which it has its registered office, or if it has no registered office, its head office: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312D (as so added). As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

2 'Applicable provision' means (1) in the case of arrangements relating to a multilateral trading facility, the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 31.5; and (2) in the case of arrangements relating to a regulated market, the first sub-paragraph of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 42.6: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312D (as added: see note 1). 'Multilateral trading facility' has the meaning given in the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 4.1.15: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 313(1) (definition added by SI 2007/126). As to the meaning of 'regulated market' see PARA 711 note 24. The exercise of EEA rights is known as 'passporting' or the exercise of 'passport' rights. As to the meaning of 'EEA right' see PARA 315 note 3.

3 'Specified' means specified in the notice referred to in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312A(1)(a) (see head (1) in the text): s 312A(3) (as added: see note 1).

4 'Home state regulator' means the competent authority (within the meaning of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 4.1.22) of the EEA state which is the home state in relation to the EEA market operator concerned: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312D (as added: see note 1).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312A(1)(a) (as added: see note 1). Section 312A does not apply to an overseas investment exchange: s 312A(4) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12.

6 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312A(1)(b) (as added: see note 1). See note 5.

8 Ie arrangements under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312A(1).

9 As to the general prohibition see PARA 80. As to the general exemption of recognised investment exchanges and recognised clearing houses see PARA 684.

10 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312A(2) (as added: see note 1). See note 5.

739. Removal of passport rights from EEA market operator. The Financial Services Authority[1] may prohibit an EEA market operator[2] from making or, as the case may be, continuing arrangements in the United Kingdom[3], in pursuance of the applicable provision[4], to facilitate access to, or use of, a regulated market[5] or multilateral trading facility[6] operated by the operator if (1) the Authority has clear and demonstrable grounds for believing that the operator has contravened a relevant requirement[7]; and (2) the Authority has first complied with the requirements set out below[8] in subsections (3) to (9).

The first requirement is that the Authority must notify the operator and its home state regulator of its finding under head (1) above[9].

The second requirements is that the Authority may not exercise the power under heads (1) and (2) above[10] unless satisfied (a) either that the home state regulator has failed or refused to take measures for the purpose[11]; or that the measures taken by the home state regulator have proved inadequate for that purpose[12]; and (b) that the operator is acting in a manner which is clearly prejudicial to the interests of investors in the United Kingdom or the orderly functioning of the financial markets[13]. If the Authority is so satisfied[14], it must give written notice to the operator, and the home state regulator, of its intention to exercise the power[15].

The third requirement is that if, having considered any representations[16] made by the operator, the Authority decides to exercise the power[17], it must (i) notify the operator in writing that it will be prohibited from making or, as the case may be, continuing the arrangements[18] from the date specified in the notice[19]; and (ii) notify the home state regulator of the action to be taken in relation to the operator[20].

If the Authority exercises the power under heads (1) and (2) above[21] it must at the earliest opportunity notify the European Commission of the action taken in relation to the operator[22]. The exemption from the general prohibition conferred on an operator[23] ceases to apply if the Authority exercises the power[24] in relation to the operator[25].

The right to make the above arrangements[26] may be reinstated in relation to the operator (together with the above exemption[27]) if the Authority is satisfied that the contravention which led to the Authority exercising the power under heads (1) and (2) above has been remedied[28].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
2 As to the meaning of 'EEA market operator' see PARA 738 note 1.
3 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.
4 As to the meaning of 'applicable provision' see PARA 738 note 2.
5 As to the meaning of 'regulated market' see PARA 711 note 24.
6 As to the meaning of 'multilateral trading facility' see PARA 738 note 2.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(1)(a) (s 312B added by SI 2007/126). A requirement is relevant if it is imposed: (1) by the operator's home state regulator in the implementation of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) or any Community legislation made under that directive; (2) by provision implementing that directive, or any Community legislation made under it, in the operator's home state; or (3) by any directly applicable Community regulation made under that directive: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(2) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'home state regulator' see PARA 738 note 4. As to the meaning of 'home state' see PARA 738 note 1.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(1)(b) (as added: see note 7). The requirements referred to are those in s 312B(3)–(9).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(3) (as added: see note 7). The notice to the home state regulator under s 312B(3) must: (1) request that the home state regulator take all appropriate measures for the purpose of ensuring that the operator puts an end to the contravention; and (2) state that the Authority proposes to exercise the power under s 312B(1) (see heads (1), (2) in the text) if the operator continues the contravention: s 312B(4) (as so added).

10 Ie the power under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(1).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(5)(a)(i) (as added: see note 7). The measures referred to are those mentioned in s 312B(4)(a): see note 9 head (2).
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(5)(a)(ii) (as added: see note 7).
13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(5)(b) (as added: see note 7).
14 Ie as mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(5).
15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(6) (as added: see note 7). The power referred to is that under s 312B(1).

A notice under s 312B(6) must (1) state why the Authority intends to exercise its power under s 312B(1); and (2) in the case of the notice to the operator, inform the operator that it may make representations to the Authority before the end of the representation period: s 312B(7) (as so added). The representation period is (a) the period of two months beginning with the date on which the notice is given to the operator; or (b) such longer period as the Authority may allow in a particular case: s 312B(8) (as so added).

16 As to representations see note 15.
17 Ie the power under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(1).
18 Ie the arrangements mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312B(1).

(B) Recognised Investment Exchanges operating in Other EEA States

740. Exercise of passport rights by recognised investment exchange. A recognised investment exchange[1] may, in pursuance of the right under the applicable provision[2], make arrangements in an EEA state[3] (other than the United Kingdom[4]) to facilitate access to, or use of, a regulated market[5] or multilateral trading facility[6] operated by the exchange (the 'relevant arrangements')[7].

The exchange must give the Authority written notice of its intention to make the relevant arrangements which (1) describes the arrangements[8]; and (2) identifies the EEA state in which it intends to make them[9]. The Authority must, within one month of receiving such a notice[10], send a copy of it to the host state regulator[11]. The exchange may not make the relevant arrangements until the Authority has complied with this obligation to send a copy of the notice to the host state regulator[12].

If the Authority receives a request for information[13] from the host state regulator[14], the Authority must, as soon as reasonably practicable, comply with the request[15].

1 As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1.
2 As to the meaning of 'applicable provision' see PARA 738 note 2.
3 As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1.
4 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(1) (s 312C added by SI 2007/126). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(1) is subject to s 312C(4): see the text and note 12. Section 321C does not apply to an overseas investment exchange: s 312C(8) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12.
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(2)(a) (as added: see note 7). See note 7.
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(2)(b) (as added: see note 7). See note 7.

10 Ie a notice under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(2).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(3) (as added: see note 7). 'Host state regulator' means the competent authority (within the meaning of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 4.1.22) of the EEA state in which the exchange intends to make, or has made, the relevant arrangements: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(7) (as so added). See note 7.
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(4) (as added: see note 7). The reference is to compliance with s 312C(3). See note 7.
13 Ie (1) under the second sub-paragraph of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 31.6 (in the case of relevant arrangements relating to a multilateral trading facility); or (2) under the third sub-paragraph of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 42.6 (in the case of relevant arrangements relating to a regulated market): see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(5); and note 14.

15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 312C(6) (as added: see note 7). See note 7.

(iv) Lloyd's

741. In general. Lloyd's is a society, incorporated by statute, which provides the facilities for the Lloyd's insurance underwriting market to carry on business[1]. Although supervised by the Financial Services Authority[2], the Council of Lloyd's retains the capacity to make byelaws regulating the market and has responsibility for its functioning[3].

1 As to Lloyd's generally see PARA 77; and INSURANCE.
2 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to the regulation of Lloyd's see PARA 742 et seq. In particular, the Financial Services Authority may make a direction applying certain provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to members of Lloyd's (see ss 316, 317; and PARA 743), and may give directions to the Council of Lloyd's, to the Society, or to both (see s 318; and PARA 745).
3 See the Lloyd's Act 1982; and INSURANCE. The Financial Services Authority must keep itself informed about the way in which the Council of Lloyd's supervises and regulates the Lloyd's market and the way in which regulated activities are being carried out: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 314; and PARA 742.

742. The general duty of the Financial Services Authority. The Financial Services Authority[1] must keep itself informed about: (1) the way in which the Council of Lloyd's[2] supervises and regulates the market at Lloyd's; and (2) the way in which regulated activities[3] are being carried on in that market[4]. The Authority must keep under review the desirability of exercising: (a) any of its powers under Part XIX of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[5]; (b) any powers which it has in relation to the Society of Lloyd's[6].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to Lloyd's generally see PARA 77; and INSURANCE.
3 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 314(1).
5 Ie the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XIX (ss 314–324).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 314(2). As to the powers referred to in the text see s 315; and PARA 744.

A term used in Pt XIX which is defined in the Lloyd's Act 1982 has the same meaning as in the Lloyd's Act 1982: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 324(2).

743. Application of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. The general prohibition[1] or (if the general prohibition is not applied under these provisions[2]) a core provision[3] applies to the carrying on of an insurance market activity[4] by: (1) a member of the Society of Lloyd's; or (2) the members of the Society taken together, only if the Financial Services Authority[5] so directs[6]. In deciding whether to give a direction[7], the Authority must have particular regard to: (a) the interests of policyholders[8] and potential policyholders; (b) any failure by the Society to satisfy an obligation to which it is subject as a result of a provision of the law of another EEA state[9] which gives effect to any of the Insurance Directives[10], and is applicable to an activity carried on in that state by a person to whom these provisions apply; (c) the need to ensure the effective exercise of the functions which the Authority has in relation to the Society[11]. A direction must be in writing[12]. A direction applying the general prohibition may apply it in relation to different classes of person[13]. An insurance market direction: (i) must specify each core provision, class of person and kind of activity to which it applies; (ii) may apply different provisions in relation to different classes of person and different kinds of activity[14]. A direction has effect from the date specified in it, which may not be earlier than the date on which it is made[15]. A direction must be published in the way appearing to the Authority to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[16]. The Authority may charge a reasonable fee for providing a person with a copy of the direction[17]. The Authority must, without delay, give the Treasury[18] a copy of any direction which it gives[19].

1 As to the general prohibition see PARA 80.
2 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316.
3 'Core provision' means a provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 mentioned in s 317: s 316(3). The core provisions are Pt V (ss 56–71) (see PARA 364 et seq), Pt X (ss 138–164) (see PARA 21 et seq), Pt XI (ss 165–177) (see PARA 447 et seq), Pt XII (ss 178–192) (see PARA 377 et seq), Pt XIV (ss 205–211) (see PARA 465), Pt XV (ss 212–224) (see PARA 575 et seq), Pt XVI (ss 225–234A) (see PARA 583 et seq), Pt XXII (ss 340–346) (see PARA 764 et seq), Pt XXIV (ss 355–379) (see PARA 490 et seq), ss 384–386 (see PARA 474), and Pt XXVI (ss 387–396) (see PARA 769 et seq): s 317(1). References in an applied core provision to an authorised person are (where necessary) to be read as references to a person in the class to which the insurance market direction (see note 6) applies: s 317(2). As to authorised persons see PARA 314. An insurance market direction may provide that a core provision is to have effect, in relation to persons to whom the provision is applied by the direction, with modifications: s 317(3).
4 'Insurance market activity' means a regulated activity relating to contracts of insurance written at Lloyd's: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316(3). As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq. As to the meaning of 'contracts of insurance' see PARA 351 note 13. As to Lloyd's generally see PARA 77; and INSURANCE.
5 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316(1). A direction given under s 316(1) which applies a core provision is referred to in Pt XIX (ss 314–324) as an 'insurance market direction': s 316(2).
7 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316(1).
8 As to the meaning of 'policyholder' see PARA 591 note 15.
9 As to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1.
10 As to the meaning of 'Insurance Directives' see PARA 86 note 6.
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316(4). The Authority has functions in relation to the Society as a result of s 315: see PARA 744.

18 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
19 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316(11).

744. Authorisation and permission in relation to the Society of Lloyd's. The Society of Lloyd's[1] is an authorised person[2]. The Society has permission to carry on a regulated activity[3] of any of the following kinds: (1) arranging deals[4] in contracts of insurance[5] written at Lloyd's (the 'basic market activity'); (2) arranging deals in participation in Lloyd's syndicates[6] (the 'secondary market activity'); and (3) an activity carried on in connection with, or for the purposes of, the basic or secondary market activity[7]. The power conferred on the Financial Services Authority[8] to vary or cancel a permission[9] may be exercised at any time[10]. The Society is not subject to any requirement of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 concerning the registered office of a body corporate[11].

1 As to Lloyd's generally see PARA 77; and INSURANCE.
2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 315(1). As to authorised persons see PARA 314.
3 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.
4 'Arranging deals', in relation to the investments to which the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XIX (ss 314–324) applies, means the investment described in Sch 2 para 3 (see PARA 84): s 324(1).
5 As to the meaning of 'contracts of insurance' see PARA 351 note 13.
6 'Participation in Lloyd's syndicates', in relation to the secondary market activity, means the investment described in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 2 para 21(1) (see PARA 85): s 324(1).
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 315(2). For the purposes of Pt IV (ss 40–55) (permission to carry on regulated activities) (see PARA 348 et seq), the Society's permission is to be treated as if it had been given on an application for permission under Pt IV: s 315(3).
8 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

10 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 315(4).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 315(5). As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 86 note 11.

745. Exercise of powers through the Council of Lloyd's. The Financial Services Authority[1] may give a direction[2] to the Council of Lloyd's[3] or to the Society of Lloyd's (acting through the Council) or to both[4]. The direction is given to the body concerned: (1) in relation to the exercise of its powers generally with a view to achieving, or in support of, a specified[5] objective; or (2) in relation to the exercise of a specified power which it has, whether in a specified manner or with a view to achieving, or in support of, a specified objective[6]. A direction does not, at any time, prevent the exercise by the Authority of any of its powers[7]. A direction must be in writing[8], and must be published in the way appearing to the Authority to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[9]. The Authority may charge a reasonable fee for providing a person with a copy of the direction[10]. The Authority must, without delay, give the Treasury[11] a copy of any direction which it gives[12].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 318(1).
3 As to Lloyd's generally see PARA 77; and INSURANCE.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 318(1). A direction under s 318(1) may be given: (1) instead of giving a direction under s 316(1) (see PARA 743); or (2) if the Authority considers it necessary or expedient to do so, at the same time as, or following, the giving of such a direction: s 318(4). A direction may also be given under s 318(1) in respect of underwriting agents as if they were among the persons mentioned in s 316(1) (see PARA 743): s 318(5).

5 'Specified' means specified in the direction: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 318(3).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 318(2).
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 318(6).

11 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 318(9).

746. Consultation. Before giving a direction[1], the Financial Services Authority[2] must publish a draft of the proposed direction[3]. The draft must be accompanied by: (1) a cost benefit analysis[4]; and (2) notice that representations about the proposed direction may be made to the Authority within a specified time[5]. Before giving the proposed direction, the Authority must have regard to any representations made to it in accordance with head (2) above[6]. If the Authority gives the proposed direction it must publish an account, in general terms, of: (a) the representations made to it in accordance with head (2) above; and (b) its response to them[7]. If the direction differs from the published draft in a way which is, in the opinion of the Authority, significant: (i) the Authority must[8] publish details of the difference; and (ii) those details must be accompanied by a cost benefit analysis[9]. The provisions described above[10] do not apply if the Authority considers that the delay involved in complying with them would be prejudicial to the interests of consumers[11]. When the Authority is required to publish a document[12], it must do so in the way appearing to it to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[13].

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 319(2)(a). 'Cost benefit analysis' means an estimate of the costs together with an analysis of the benefits that will arise: (1) if the proposed direction is given; or (2) if s 319(5)(b) (see head (ii) in the text) applies, from the direction that has been given: s 319(10). Neither s 319(2)(a) (see head (1) in the text) nor s 319(5)(b) (see head (ii) in the text) applies if the Authority considers: (a) that, making the appropriate comparison, there will be no increase in costs; or (b) that, making that comparison, there will be an increase in costs but the increase will be of minimal significance: s 319(7). 'Appropriate comparison' means: (i) in relation to s 319(2)(a) (see head (1) in the text), a comparison between the overall position if the direction is given and the overall position if it is not given; (ii) in relation to s 319(5)(b) (see head (ii) in the text), a comparison between the overall position after the giving of the direction and the overall position before it was given: s 319(11).

747. Former underwriting members. A former underwriting member[1] may carry out each contract of insurance[2] that he has underwritten at Lloyd's whether or not he is an authorised person[3]. If he is an authorised person, any Part IV permission[4] that he has does not extend to his activities in carrying out any of those contracts[5]. The Financial Services Authority[6] may impose on a former underwriting member such requirements as appear to it to be appropriate for the purpose of protecting policyholders[7] against the risk that he may not be able to meet his liabilities[8]. A person on whom a requirement is imposed may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[9].

A requirement[10] takes effect: (1) immediately, if the notice given by the Authority[11] states that that is the case; (2) in any other case, on such date as may be specified in that notice[12]. If the Authority proposes to impose a requirement on a former underwriting member ('A')[13], or imposes such a requirement on him which takes effect immediately, it must give him written notice[14]. The notice must: (a) give details of the requirement; (b) state the Authority's reasons for imposing it; (c) inform A that he may make representations to the Authority within such period as may be specified in the notice (whether or not he has referred the matter to the Tribunal); (d) inform him of the date on which the requirement took effect or will take effect; and (e) inform him of his right to refer the matter to the Tribunal[15]. If, having considered any representations made by A, the Authority decides to impose the proposed requirement, or if it decides, where the requirement has been imposed, not to revoke it, the Authority must give him written notice[16]. If the Authority decides not to impose a proposed requirement, or to revoke a requirement that has been imposed, it must give A written notice[17]. If the Authority decides to grant an application by A for the variation or revocation of a requirement, it must give him written notice of its decision[18]. If the Authority proposes to refuse an application by A for the variation or revocation of a requirement, it must give him a warning notice[19]. If the Authority, having considered any representations made in response to the warning notice, decides to refuse the application, it must give A a decision notice[20]. If the Authority decides to refuse an application for a variation or revocation of the requirement, the applicant may refer the matter to the Tribunal[21]. If a notice informs a person of his right to refer a matter to the Tribunal, it must give an indication of the procedure on such a reference[22].

The Authority may make rules imposing such requirements on persons to whom the rules apply as appear to it to be appropriate for protecting policyholders against the risk that those persons may not be able to meet their liabilities[23]. The rules may apply to former underwriting members generally or to a class of former underwriting member specified in them[24].

1 'Former underwriting member' means a person ceasing to be an underwriting member of the Society of Lloyd's on, or at any time after, 24 December 1996: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 324(1). As to Lloyd's generally see PARA 77; and INSURANCE.

748. Transfer schemes. The Treasury[1] may by order provide for the application of any provision of Part VII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[2] (with or without modification) in relation to schemes for the transfer of the whole or any part of the business carried on by one or more members of the Society of Lloyd's[3] or former underwriting members[4].

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 323. As to the meaning of 'former underwriting member' see PARA 747 note 1. As to orders made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.

The Treasury has ordered that the following provisions, that is to say: (1) s 104 (see PARA 591), ss 107–114 (see PARAS 593–599); (2) any regulations made under s 108 (see PARA 593); and (3) Sch 12 Pt I (see PARA 595), are to apply in relation to schemes for the transfer of the whole or any part of the business carried on by one or more members of the Society or former underwriting members (the 'members concerned') in the same way as they apply in relation to insurance business transfer schemes, but only if certain conditions are satisfied: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Transfers of Business Done at Lloyd's) Order 2001, SI 2001/3626, art 3. The conditions are: (a) that the scheme results in the business transferred being carried on from an establishment of the transferee in an EEA state; (b) that the Council of Lloyd's has by resolution authorised one person to act, in connection with the transfer for the members concerned, as transferor; and (c) that a copy of the resolution has been given to the Authority: art 4.

The provisions which apply by virtue of heads (1) and (2) above do so as if: (i) any reference to the authorised person concerned were a reference to the members concerned; and (ii) anything done in connection with the transfer by the person authorised in accordance with head (a) above had been done by the members concerned for whom he acted: art 5(1). In the application of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 12 Pt I to the members concerned, the conditions in Sch 12 para 1(2)(a), (3)(a), (4)(a) (see PARA 595) are treated as satisfied: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Control of Transfers of Business Done at Lloyd's) Order 2001, SI 2001/3626, art 5(2).

(v) Provision of Financial Services by Members of the Professions

749. Designation of professional bodies. The Treasury[1] may by order designate professional bodies for the purposes of Part XX of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[2]. The Treasury may designate a body only if it is satisfied that: (1) the basic condition; and (2) one or more of the additional conditions, are met in relation to it[3].

The basic condition is that the body has rules applicable to the carrying on by members[4] of the profession in relation to which it is established of regulated activities[5] which, if the body were to be designated, would be exempt regulated activities[6]. The additional conditions are that:

(a) the body has power under any enactment[7] to regulate the practice of the profession[8];

(b) being a member of the profession is a requirement under any enactment for the exercise of particular functions or the holding of a particular office[9];

(c) the body has been recognised[10] for the purpose of any enactment other than the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and the recognition has not been withdrawn[11];

(d) the body is established in an EEA state[12] other than the United Kingdom[13] and in that state: (i) the body has power corresponding to that mentioned in head (a) above; (ii) there is a requirement in relation to the body corresponding to that mentioned in head (b) above; or (iii) the body is recognised in a manner corresponding to that mentioned in head (c) above[14].

The following bodies have been designated for the purposes of Part XX of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000:

(A) the Law Society[15];
(B) the Law Society of Scotland[16];
(C) the Law Society of Northern Ireland[17];
(D) the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales[18];
(E) the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland[19];
(F) the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland[20];
(G) the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants[21];
(H) the Institute of Actuaries[22];
(I) the Council for Licensed Conveyancers[23];
(J) the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors[24].

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(1). A body designated under s 326(1) is referred to in Pt XX (ss 325–333) as a designated professional body: s 326(2). As to the bodies designated see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Designated Professional Bodies) Order 2001, SI 2001/1226; and heads (A)–(J) in the text. As to orders made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.

An order containing a provision to which, if the order is made, s 429(7) (see below) will apply is not to be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 429(6). Section 429(7) applies to a provision contained in an order if it is the first to be made in the exercise of the power conferred by s 326(1) or it removes a body from those for the time being designated under s 326(1): s 429(7)(a).

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(3).

4 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XX (ss 325–333), 'members', in relation to a profession, means persons who are entitled to practise the profession in question and, in practising it, are subject to the rules of the body designated in relation to that profession, whether or not they are members of that body: s 325(2).

5 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(4). For the purposes of Pt XX, 'exempt regulated activities' means regulated activities which may, as a result of Pt XX, be carried on by members of a profession which is supervised and regulated by a designated professional body without breaching the general prohibition: s 325(2). As to the general prohibition see PARA 80.

7 'Enactment' includes an Act of the Scottish Parliament, Northern Ireland legislation, and subordinate legislation (whether made under an Act, an Act of the Scottish Parliament or Northern Ireland legislation): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(6).
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(5)(a).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(5)(b).
10 'Recognised' means recognised by: (1) a Minister of the Crown; (2) the Scottish Ministers; (3) a Northern Ireland Minister; (4) a Northern Ireland department or its head: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 326(7). As to the meaning of 'Minister of the Crown' see PARA 67 note 1.

24 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Designated Professional Bodies) Order 2001, SI 2001/1226, art 2(j) (added by SI 2006/58).

750. The general duty of the Financial Services Authority. The Financial Services Authority[1] must keep itself informed about: (1) the way in which designated professional bodies[2] supervise and regulate the carrying on of exempt regulated activities[3] by members of the professions in relation to which they are established; (2) the way in which such members are carrying on exempt regulated activities[4]. The Authority must keep under review the desirability of exercising any of its powers under Part XX of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[5]. Each designated professional body must co-operate with the Authority, by the sharing of information and in other ways, in order to enable the Authority to perform its functions under Part XX[6].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Professional Firms (PROF). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

751. Exemption from the general prohibition. The general prohibition[1] does not apply to the carrying on of a regulated activity[2] by a person ('P') if: (1) the following conditions[3] are satisfied; and (2) there is not in force a direction[4] or an order[5] which prevents this provision from applying to the carrying on of that activity by him[6]. The conditions are that:

(a) P must be a member[7] of a profession or must be controlled or managed by one or more such members[8];

(b) P must not receive from a person other than his client[9] any pecuniary reward or other advantage, for which he does not account to his client, arising out of his carrying on of any of the activities[10];

(c) the manner of the provision by P of any service in the course of carrying on the activities must be incidental to the provision by him of professional services[11];

(d) P must not carry on, or hold himself out as carrying on, a regulated activity[12] other than: (i) one which rules made by the professional body[13] allow him to carry on; or (ii) one in relation to which he is an exempt person[14];

(e) the activities must not be of a description, or relate to an investment of a description, specified in an order made by the Treasury[15] for these purposes[16];

(f) the activities must be the only regulated activities[17] carried on by P (other than regulated activities in relation to which he is an exempt person)[18].

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(2).
9 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt XX (ss 325–333), 'clients' means: (1) persons who use, have used or are or may be contemplating using, any of the services provided by a member of a profession in the course of carrying on exempt regulated activities; (2) persons who have rights or interests which are derived from, or otherwise attributable to, the use of any such services by other persons; or (3) persons who have rights or interests which may be adversely affected by the use of any such services by persons acting on their behalf or in a fiduciary capacity in relation to them: s 328(8). As to the meaning of 'exempt regulated activities' see PARA 749 note 6.
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(3).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(4). 'Professional services' means services: (1) which do not constitute carrying on a regulated activity; and (2) the provision of which is supervised and regulated by a designated professional body: s 327(8). As to the designated professional bodies see PARA 749.
12 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(5), (7), references to a 'regulated activity' and 'regulated activities' do not include:
   (1) any activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 10(1) or art 10(2) (see PARA 100), where P is a member of the Society (art 13(1)(a)(i)), and by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316 (application of the Act to Lloyd's underwriting) (see PARA 743), the general prohibition does not apply to the carrying on by P of that activity (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 13(1)(a)(ii)); or
   (2) any activity of the kind specified by art 10(2), where P is a former underwriting member (art 13(1)(b)(i)) and the contract of insurance in question is one underwritten by P at Lloyd's (art 13(1)(b)(ii)).

   As to the meanings of 'member of the Society' and 'former underwriting member' see the Lloyd's Act 1982 (see INSURANCE vol 25 (2003 Reissue) PARAS 24, 25); definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 13(2).

15 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(6). An order containing a provision to which, if the order is made, s 429(7) (see below) will apply is not to be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 429(6). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 429(7) applies to a provision contained in an order if it is the first to be made in the exercise of the power conferred by s 327(6) or it adds a description of regulated activity or investment to those for the time being specified for the purposes of s 327(6): s 429(7)(b). As to orders made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see PARA 67 note 1.

The activities specified for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(6) are those mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, arts 4–8 (see below): art 3.

The activity mentioned in art 4 is an activity of the kind specified by any of the following provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544: art 5 (accepting deposits) (see PARA 89), art 9B (issuing electronic money) (see PARA 96), art 10 (effecting and carrying out contracts of insurance) (see PARA 100), art 14 (dealing in investments as principal) (see PARA 112), art 51 (establishing etc a collective investment scheme) (see PARA 171), art 52 (establishing etc a pension scheme) (see PARA 187), art 52B (providing basic advice on stakeholder products) (see PARA 188), art 57 (managing the underwriting capacity of a Lloyd's syndicate) (see PARA 198), art 59 (funeral plan contracts) (see PARA 200): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 4 (amended by SI 2001/3650; SI 2002/682; SI 2004/2737; SI 2006/1969).

The activity mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 4A is an activity kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 21 (dealing in investments as agent) (see PARA 126) or art 25 (arranging deals in investments) (see PARA 139) in so far as it relates to a transaction for the sale or purchase of rights under a contract of insurance, and is carried on by a person who is not included in the record of insurance intermediaries: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 4A (added by SI 2003/1476).

The activity mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 5 is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 37 (managing investments) (see PARA 152) in so far as it consists of buying or subscribing for a security or contractually based investment: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 5(1) (amended by SI 2003/1476). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 5(1) does not apply: (1) if all routine or day to day decisions, so far as relating to that activity, are taken by an authorised person with permission to carry on that activity or by a person who is an exempt person in relation to such an activity; or (2) to an activity undertaken in accordance with the advice of an authorised person with permission to give advice in relation to such an activity or a person who is an exempt person in relation to the giving of such advice: art 5(2). As to the meaning of 'contractually based investment' see PARA 112 note 4; definition applied by art 2(1).

The activity mentioned in art 5A is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 39A (assisting in the administration and performance of a contract of insurance) (see PARA 104) if it is carried on by a person who is not included in the record of insurance intermediaries: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 5A (added by SI 2003/1476). As to the meaning of 'contract of insurance' see PARA 90 note 3; definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 2(1) (definition added by SI 2003/1476). 'Record of insurance intermediaries' means the record maintained by the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 347 (the public record) (see PARA 475) by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 93 (recorded insurance intermediaries) (see PARA 476): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 2(1).

The activity mentioned in art 6 is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53 (advising on investments) (see PARA 174) where the advice in question falls within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6(2), 6(3) or art 6(5) (see below): art 6(1) (amended by SI 2003/1476). Subject to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6(4), advice falls within art 6(2) in so far as: (a) it is given to an individual (or his agent) other than where the individual acts: (i) in connection with the carrying on of a business of any kind by himself or by an undertaking of which he is, or would become as a result of the transaction to which the advice relates, a controller; or (ii) in his capacity as a trustee of an occupational pension scheme; (b) it consists of a recommendation to buy or subscribe for a particular security or contractually based investment; and (c) the transaction to which the advice relates would be made: (i) with a person acting in the course of carrying on the business of buying, selling, subscribing for or underwriting the security or contractually based investment, whether as principal or agent; (ii) on an investment exchange or any other market to which that investment is admitted for dealing; or (iii) in response to an invitation to subscribe for such an investment which is, or is to be, admitted for dealing on an investment exchange or any other market: art 6(2) (amended by SI 2003/1476). Subject to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6(4), advice falls within art 6(3) in so far as it consists of a recommendation to a member of a personal pension scheme (or his agent) to dispose of any rights or interests which the member has in or under the scheme: art 6(3). Advice does not fall within art 6(2) or art 6(3) if it indorses a corresponding recommendation given to the individual (or, as the case may be, the member) by an authorised person with permission to give advice in relation to the proposed transaction or a person who is an exempt person in relation to the giving of such advice: art 6(4). Advice falls within art 6(5) in so far it relates to a transaction for the sale or purchase of rights under a contract of insurance; and it is given by a person who is not included in the record of insurance intermediaries: art 6(5) (added by SI 2003/1476). 'Occupational pension scheme' and 'personal pension scheme' have the meanings given by the Pension Schemes Act 1993 s 1 (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARAS 710, 741): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 2(1).

The activity mentioned in art 6A is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53A (advising on regulated mortgage contracts) (see PARA 174) where the advice in question falls within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6A(2): art 6A(1) (art 6A added by SI 2003/1475). Subject to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6A(3), advice falls within art 6A(2) in so far as it consists of a recommendation, given to an individual, to enter as borrower into a regulated mortgage contract with a particular person; and in entering into a regulated mortgage contract that person would be carrying on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 61(1) (regulated mortgage contracts) (see PARA 203): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6A(2) (as so added). Advice does not fall within art 6A(2) if it endorses a corresponding recommendation given to the individual by an authorised person with permission to carry on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53A (see PARA 174) or a person who is an exempt person in relation to an activity of that kind: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6A(3) (as so added).

The activity mentioned in art 6B is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 61(1) or (2) (regulated mortgage contracts) (see PARA 203): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6B(1) (art 6B added as art 6A by SI 2001/3650; and renumbered by SI 2003/1475). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6B(1) does not apply to an activity carried on by a person in his capacity as a trustee or personal representative where the borrower under the regulated mortgage contract in question is a beneficiary under the trust, will or intestacy: art 6B(2) (as so added and renumbered).

The activity mentioned in art 6C is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53B (advising on regulated home reversion plans) (see PARA 174) where the advice in question falls within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001,

SI 2001/1227, art 6C(2): art 6C(1) (art 6C added by SI 2006/2383). Subject to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6C(3), advice falls within art 6C(2) in so far as it consists of a recommendation, given to an individual to enter as reversion seller or plan provider into a regulated home reversion plan with a particular person; and in entering into a regulated home reversion plan that person would be carrying on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 63B(1) (regulated home reversion plans) (see PARA 209): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6C(2) (as so added). Advice does not fall within art 6C(2) if it endorses a corresponding recommendation given to the individual by an authorised person with permission to carry on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53B (see PARA 174) or a person who is an exempt person in relation to an activity of that kind: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6C(3) (as so added). As to the meanings of 'reversion seller' and 'plan provider' see PARA 209; definitions applied by art 2(1) (definitions added by SI 2006/2383).

The activity mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6D is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 63B(1) or (2) (regulated home reversion plans) (see PARA 209): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6D(1) (art 6D added by SI 2006/2383). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6D(1) does not apply to an activity carried on by a person in his capacity as a trustee or personal representative where the reversion seller under the regulated home reversion plan in question is a beneficiary under the trust, will or intestacy: art 6D(2) (as so added).

The activity mentioned in art 6E is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53C (advising on regulated home purchase plans) (see PARA 174) where the advice in question falls within the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6E(2): art 6E(1) (art 6E added by SI 2006/2383). Subject to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6E(3), advice falls within art 6E(2) in so far as it consists of a recommendation, given to an individual to enter as home purchaser into a regulated home purchase plan with a particular person; and in entering into a regulated home purchase plan that person would be carrying on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 63F(1) (regulated home purchase plans) (see PARA 215): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6E(2) (as so added). Advice does not fall within art 6E(2) if it endorses a corresponding recommendation given to the individual by an authorised person with permission to carry on an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 53C (see PARA 174) or a person who is an exempt person in relation to an activity of that kind: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6E(3) (as so added). As to the meanings of 'home purchaser' and 'regulated home purchase plan' see PARA 215; definitions applied by art 2(1) (definitions added by SI 2006/2383).

The activity mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6F is an activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 63F(1) or (2) (regulated home purchase plans) (see PARA 215): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6F(1) (art 6F added by SI 2006/2383). The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 6F(1) does not apply to an activity carried on by a person in his capacity as a trustee or personal representative where the home purchaser under the regulated home purchase plan in question is a beneficiary under the trust, will or intestacy: art 6F(2) (as so added).

The activity mentioned in art 7 is advising a person to become a member of a particular Lloyd's syndicate: art 7(1). As to the meaning of 'syndicate' see PARA 198 note 2; definition applied by art 2(1). Article 7(1) does not apply to advice which indorses that of an authorised person with permission to give such advice or a person who is an exempt person in relation to the giving of such advice: art 7(2).

The activity mentioned in art 8 is agreeing to carry on any of the activities mentioned in arts 4–7 other than the activities mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 5, art 9B, and arts 10, 51, 52: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Professions) (Non-Exempt Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/1227, art 8 (amended by SI 2002/682).

18 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(7).

752. Directions in relation to the general prohibition. The Financial Services Authority[1] may direct that the statutory provision relating to the exemption from the general prohibition[2] is not to apply to the extent specified in the direction[3]. Such a direction: (1) must be in writing; (2) may be given in relation to different classes of person or different descriptions of regulated activity[4]. A direction must be published in the way appearing to the Authority to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[5]. The Authority may charge a reasonable fee for providing a person with a copy of the direction[6]. The Authority must, without delay, give the Treasury[7] a copy of any direction[8].

The Authority may exercise its power to make a direction[9] only if it is satisfied either (a) that it is desirable in order to protect the interests of clients[10]; or (b) that it is necessary to do so in order to comply with a Community obligation imposed by the Insurance Mediation Directive[11]. In considering whether it is satisfied of the matter specified in head (a) above, the Authority must have regard amongst other things to the effectiveness of any arrangements made by any designated professional body[12]:

(i) for securing compliance with rules[13];

(ii) for dealing with complaints against its members in relation to the carrying on by them of exempt regulated activities[14];

(iii) in order to offer redress to clients who suffer, or claim to have suffered, loss as a result of misconduct by its members in their carrying on of exempt regulated activities[15];

(iv) for co-operating with the Authority[16].

If a member of a profession is carrying on an exempt regulated activity in his capacity as a trustee, the persons who are, have been or may be beneficiaries of the trust are to be treated as persons who use, have used or are or may be contemplating using services provided by that person in his carrying on of that activity: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 328(9). As to the meaning of 'exempt regulated activity' see PARA 749 note 6.

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 328(6)(b) (as substituted: see note 10). The reference is to European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/92 (OJ L9, 15.1.2003, p 3) on insurance mediation.

15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 328(7)(c).

16 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 328(7)(d). The designated professional bodies must co-operate with the Authority under s 325(4): see PARA 750.

753. Orders in relation to the general prohibition. If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[1] that a person to whom the general prohibition[2] does not apply[3] is not a fit and proper person to carry on regulated activities[4], then the Authority may make an order disapplying the exemption from the general prohibition[5] in relation to that person to the extent specified[6] in the order[7]. The Authority may, on the application of the person named in such an order, vary or revoke it[8]. If a partnership[9] is named in an order, the order is not affected by any change in its membership[10]. If a partnership named in an order is dissolved, the order continues to have effect in relation to any partnership which succeeds to the business of the dissolved partnership[11].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Professional Firms (PROF). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

2 As to the general prohibition see PARA 80.

5 Ie the exemption set out in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 327(1): see PARA 751.

6 'Specified' means specified in the order: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 329(4).

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 329(1), (2).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 329(3).

9 As to the meaning of 'partnership' see PARA 86 note 11.

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 329(5).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 329(6). For the purposes of s 329(6), a partnership is to be regarded as succeeding to the business of another partnership only if: (1) the members of the resulting partnership are substantially the same as those of the former partnership; and (2) succession is to the whole or substantially the whole of the business of the former partnership: s 329(7).

754. Consultation. Before giving a direction[1], the Financial Services Authority[2] must publish a draft of the proposed direction[3]. The draft must be accompanied by: (1) a cost benefit analysis[4]; and (2) notice that representations about the proposed direction may be made to the Authority within a specified time[5]. Before giving the proposed direction, the Authority must have regard to any representations made to it in accordance with head (2) above[6]. If the Authority gives the proposed direction, it must publish an account, in general terms, of the representations made to it in accordance with head (2) above and its response to them[7]. If the direction differs from the draft in a way which is, in the opinion of the Authority, significant: (a) the Authority must[8] publish details of the difference; and (b) those details must be accompanied by a cost benefit analysis[9]. The provisions described above[10] do not apply if the Authority considers that the delay involved in complying with them would prejudice the interests of consumers[11]. When the Authority is required to publish a document[12], it must do so in the way appearing to it to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[13].

1 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 328(1): see PARA 752.

2 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Professional Firms (PROF). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 330(1). The Authority may charge a reasonable fee for providing a person with a copy of a draft published under s 330(1): s 330(8).
4 'Cost benefit analysis' means an estimate of the costs together with an analysis of the benefits that will arise: (1) if the proposed direction is given; or (2) if head (b) in the text applies, from the direction that has been given: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 330(10). Neither head (1) in the text nor head (b) in the text applies if the Authority considers: (a) that, making the appropriate comparison, there will be no increase in costs; or (b) that, making that comparison, there will be an increase in costs but the increase will be of minimal significance: s 330(7). 'Appropriate comparison' means: (i) in relation to head (1) in the text, a comparison between the overall position if the direction is given and the overall position if it is not given; (ii) in relation to head (b) in the text, a comparison between the overall position after the giving of the direction and the overall position before it was given: s 330(11).

13 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 330(9).

755. Procedure on making or varying orders. If the Financial Services Authority[1] proposes to make an order[2], it must give the person concerned a warning notice[3]. The warning notice must set out the terms of the proposed order[4]. If the Authority decides to make an order[5], it must give the person concerned a decision notice[6]. The decision notice must: (1) name the person to whom the order applies; (2) set out the terms of the order; and (3) be given to the person named in the order[7]. Where an application for the variation or revocation of an order is made[8]: (a) if the Authority decides to grant the application, it must give the applicant written notice of its decision[9]; (b) if the Authority proposes to refuse the application, it must give the applicant a warning notice[10]; (c) if the Authority decides to refuse the application, it must give the applicant a decision notice[11].

A person against whom the Authority has decided to make an order[12], or whose application for the variation or revocation of such an order the Authority has decided to refuse, may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[13].

The Authority may not make an order[14] unless: (i) the period within which the decision to make the order may be referred to the Tribunal has expired and no such reference has been made; or (ii) if such a reference has been made, the reference has been determined[15].

756. Rules in relation to persons to whom the general prohibition does not apply. The Financial Services Authority[1] may make rules[2] applicable to persons to whom the general prohibition[3] does not apply[4]. This power is to be exercised for the purpose of ensuring that clients[5] are aware that such persons are not authorised persons[6]. A designated professional body[7] must make rules: (1) applicable to members[8] of the profession in relation to which it is established who are not authorised persons[9]; and (2) governing the carrying on by those members of regulated activities[10] (other than regulated activities in relation to which they are exempt persons)[11].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Specialist Sourcebooks, Professional Firms (PROF). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

8 As to the meaning of 'members' see PARA 749 note 4.
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 332(3)(a). Rules made in compliance with s 332(3) must be designed to secure that, in providing a particular professional service to a particular client, the member carries on only regulated activities which arise out of, or are complementary to, the provision by him of that service to that client: s 332(4). Rules made by a designated professional body under s 332(3) require the approval of the Authority: s 332(5).
10 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq. For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 332(3)(b), the reference to 'regulated activities' does not include:
   (1) any activity of the kind specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 10(1) or art 10(2) (see PARA 100), where P is a member of the Society (art 13(1)(a)(i)) and, by virtue of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 316 (application of the Act to Lloyd's underwriting) (see PARA 743), the general prohibition does not apply to the carrying on by P of that activity (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 13(1)(a)(ii)); or
   (2) any activity of the kind specified by art 10(2), where P is a former underwriting member (art 13(1)(b)(i)) and the contract of insurance in question is one underwritten by P at Lloyd's (art 13(1)(b)(ii)).

   As to the meanings of 'member of the Society' and 'former underwriting member' see the Lloyd's Act 1982 (see INSURANCE vol 25 (2003 Reissue) PARAS 24, 25); definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 13(2).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 332(3)(b). As to the meaning of 'exempt person' see PARA 80 note 4. See note 9.

757. False claims to be a person to whom the general prohibition does not apply. A person who: (1) describes himself (in whatever terms) as a person to whom the general prohibition[1] does not apply, in relation to a particular regulated activity[2], as a result of Part XX of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[3]; or (2) behaves, or otherwise holds himself out, in a manner which indicates (or which is reasonably likely to be understood as indicating) that he is such a person, is guilty of an offence if he is not such a person[4]. In proceedings for such an offence, it is a defence for the accused to show that he took all reasonable precautions and exercised all due diligence to avoid committing the offence[5]. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment or a fine or both[6]. However, where the conduct constituting the offence involved or included the public display of any material, the maximum fine for the offence is the fine multiplied by the number of days for which the display continued[7].

1 As to the general prohibition see PARA 80.
2 As to regulated activities see PARA 84 et seq.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 333(3). Such a person is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale, or both: see s 333(3). As to the standard scale see PARA 27 note 21.
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 333(4). The reference is to level 5 on the standard scale so multiplied.

(vi) Mutual Societies and Industrial and Provident Societies

758. The Friendly Societies Commission. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 enabled the Treasury[1] to provide: (1) for any functions of the Friendly Societies Commission[2] to be transferred to the Financial Services Authority[3]; (2) for any functions of the Friendly Societies Commission not transferred to the Authority to be transferred to the Treasury[4]. It also gave the Treasury power to abolish the Friendly Societies Commission[5].

5 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 334(2). The Friendly Societies Commission ceases to exist in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Mutual Societies) Order 2001, SI 2001/2617, art 10.

As to the removal of certain restrictions on the ability of incorporated friendly societies to form subsidiaries and control corporate bodies and connected amendments see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 18 Pt II.

759. The Registry of Friendly Societies. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 enabled the Treasury[1] to provide for any functions of: (1) the Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies[2], or of an assistant registrar of friendly societies for the central registration area; (2) the central office of the registry of friendly societies; and (3) the assistant registrar of friendly societies for Scotland, to be transferred to the Financial Services Authority[3]. It enabled the Treasury to provide for any of those functions not transferred to the Authority to be transferred to the Treasury[4]. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 also gave the Treasury power to abolish: (a) the office of Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies; (b) the office of assistant registrar of friendly societies for the central registration area; (c) the central office; or (d) the office of assistant registrar of friendly societies for Scotland[5].

763. Provisions that may be included in orders. The additional powers conferred[1] on a person making an order under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 include power for the Treasury[2], when making an order in relation to mutual societies[3] transferring functions, to include provision[4]:

(1) for the transfer of any functions of a member of the body, or servant or agent of the body or person, whose functions are transferred by the order[5];
(2) for the transfer of any property, rights or liabilities held, enjoyed or incurred by any person in connection with transferred functions[6];
(3) for the carrying on and completion by or under the authority of the person to whom functions are transferred of any proceedings, investigations or other matters commenced, before the order takes effect, by or under the authority of the person from whom the functions are transferred[7];
(4) amending any enactment relating to transferred functions in connection with their exercise by, or under the authority of, the person to whom they are transferred[8];
(5) for the substitution of the person to whom functions are transferred for the person from whom they are transferred, in any instrument, contract or legal proceedings made or begun before the order takes effect[9].

The additional powers conferred[10] on a person making an order under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 include power for the Treasury, when making an order dissolving a mutual society[11], to include provision[12]:

(a) for the transfer of any property, rights or liabilities held, enjoyed or incurred by any person in connection with the office or body which ceases to have effect as a result of the order[13];
(b) for the carrying on and completion by or under the authority of such person as may be specified in the order of any proceedings, investigations or other matters commenced, before the order takes effect, by or under the authority of the person whose office, or the body which, ceases to exist as a result of the order[14];
(c) amending any enactment which makes provision with respect to that office or body[15];

(d) for the substitution of the Financial Services Authority[16], the Treasury or such other body as may be specified in the order in any instrument, contract or legal proceedings made or begun before the order takes effect[17].

On or after the making of an order[18] (the 'original order'), the Treasury may by order make any incidental, supplemental, consequential or transitional provision which it had power to include in the original order[19].

A certificate issued by the Treasury that property vested in a person immediately before an order under Part XXI of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[20] took effect has been transferred as a result of the order is conclusive evidence of the transfer[21].

(10) ACTUARIES AND AUDITORS

764. Appointment, resignation, etc. Rules[1] may require an authorised person[2], or an authorised person falling within a specified[3] class: (1) to appoint an auditor[4]; or (2) to appoint an actuary[5], if he is not already under an obligation to do so imposed by another enactment[6]. Rules may require an authorised person, or an authorised person falling within a specified class, to produce periodic financial reports and to have them reported on by an auditor or an actuary[7]. Rules may impose such other duties on auditors of, or actuaries acting for, authorised persons as may be specified[8]. An auditor or actuary appointed as a result of rules[9], or on whom duties are imposed by rules[10], must act in accordance with such provision as may be made by the rules, and has such powers in connection with the discharge of his functions as may be provided by the rules[11].

An auditor or actuary[12] must without delay notify the Financial Services Authority if he: (a) is removed from office by an authorised person[13]; (b) resigns before the expiry of his term of office with such a person[14]; or (c) is not re-appointed by such a person[15]. If he ceases to be an auditor of, or actuary acting for, such a person, he must without delay notify the Authority of any matter connected with his so ceasing which he thinks ought to be drawn to the Authority's attention, or notify it that there is no such matter[16].

1 As to the meaning of 'rule' see PARA 23 note 2. 'Auditors and actuaries rules' means rules made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 340: s 417(1).
2 As to authorised persons see PARA 314.
3 Ie specified in rules: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 340(7).
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 340(1)(a). For the purposes of s 340(1)–(3), 'auditor' or 'actuary' means an auditor, or actuary, who satisfies such requirements as to qualifications, experience and other matters (if any) as may be specified: s 340(6).

Rules under s 340(1) may make provision: (1) specifying the manner in which and time within which an auditor or actuary is to be appointed; (2) requiring the Financial Services Authority to be notified of an appointment; (3) enabling the Authority to make an appointment if no appointment has been made or notified; (4) as to remuneration; (5) as to the term of office, removal and resignation of an auditor or actuary: s 340(4). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Chs 3–4. 15 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 344(2)(c).

765. Access to information. An appointed[1] auditor of, or an appointed actuary acting for, an authorised person[2]: (1) has a right of access at all times to the authorised person's books, accounts and vouchers[3]; and (2) is entitled to require from the authorised person's officers such information and explanations as he reasonably considers necessary for the performance of his duties as auditor or actuary[4].

1 'Appointed' means appointed under or as a result of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: s 341(2). As to the appointment of auditors and actuaries see PARA 764. See also the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Chs 3–4. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to authorised persons see PARA 314.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 341(1)(a).
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 341(1)(b).

766. Disclosure of information to the Financial Services Authority. An auditor[1] or actuary[2] does not contravene any duty to which he is subject merely because he gives to the Financial Services Authority[3]: (1) information on a matter of which he has, or had, become aware in his capacity as auditor of, or actuary acting for, an authorised person or a person who has close links with an authorised person[4]; or (2) his opinion on such a matter, if he is acting in good faith and he reasonably believes that the information or opinion is relevant to any functions of the Authority[5].

The Treasury[6] may make regulations prescribing circumstances in which an auditor or actuary must communicate matters to the Authority[7]. It is the duty of an auditor or actuary to whom any such regulations apply to communicate a matter to the Authority in the circumstances prescribed by the regulations[8]. The matters to be communicated to the Authority in accordance with the regulations may include matters relating to persons other than the authorised person concerned[9].

1 These provisions apply: (1) to a person who is, or has been, an auditor of an authorised person appointed under or as a result of a statutory provision; and (2) to a person who: (a) is, or has been, an auditor of an authorised person appointed under or as a result of a statutory provision; and (b) is, or has been, an auditor of a person ('CL') who has close links with the authorised person: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(1), 343(1). As to authorised persons see PARA 314.

CL has close links with the authorised person concerned ('A') if CL is: (i) a parent undertaking of A; (ii) a subsidiary undertaking of A; (iii) a parent undertaking of a subsidiary undertaking of A; or (iv) a subsidiary undertaking of a parent undertaking of A: s 343(8). As to the meanings of 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' see PARA 351 note 32. 'Subsidiary undertaking' includes all the instances mentioned in EC Seventh Council Directive 83/349 based on the article 54(3)(g) of the Treaty on Consolidated Accounts (OJ L193, 18.7.83, p 1) art 1(1), (2) in which an entity may be a subsidiary of an undertaking: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 343(9).

2 These provisions apply: (1) to a person who is, or has been, an actuary acting for an authorised person and appointed under or as a result of a statutory provision; and (2) to a person who: (a) is, or has been, an actuary acting for an authorised person and appointed under or as a result of a statutory provision; and (b) is, or has been, an actuary acting for a person ('CL') who has close links with the authorised person: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(2), 343(2).
3 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Chs 3–4. As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(3)(a), 343(3)(a). Sections 342(3), 343(3) apply whether or not the auditor or actuary is responding to a request from the Authority: ss 342(4), 343(4).
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(3)(b), 343(3)(b). See note 4.
6 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(5), 343(5). Regulations have been made which provide that an auditor to whom s 342 or s 343 applies must communicate to the Authority information on, or his opinion on, matters mentioned in head (2) in the text in the following circumstances (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Auditors) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2587, reg 2(1)):

(1) the auditor reasonably believes that, as regards the person concerned there is or has been, or may be or may have been, a contravention of any relevant requirement that applies to the person concerned, and that contravention may be of material significance to the Authority in determining whether to exercise, in relation to the person concerned, any functions conferred on the Authority by or under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 other than Pt VI (ss 72–103) (official listing) (see PARA 385 et seq) (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Auditors) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2587, reg 2(2)(a));

(2) the auditor reasonably believes that the information on, or his opinion on, those matters may be of material significance to the Authority in determining whether the person concerned satisfies and will continue to satisfy the threshold conditions (reg 2(2)(b));

(3) the auditor reasonably believes that the person concerned is not, may not be or may cease to be a going concern (reg 2(2)(c));

(4) the auditor is precluded from stating in his report that the annual accounts or, where they are required to be made by any of the following provisions, other financial reports of the person concerned: (a) have been properly prepared in accordance with the Companies Act 2006 or, where applicable, give a true and fair view of the matters referred to in s 495(3) (formerly the Companies Act 1985 s 235(2)) (see COMPANIES); (b) have been prepared so as to conform with the requirements of the Building Societies Act 1986 Pt VIII (ss 71–81B) and the regulations made under it or, where applicable, give a true and fair view of the matters referred to in s 78(4) or s 78(7) (see PARA 2003); (c) have been prepared so as to conform with the Friendly Societies Act 1992 and the regulations made under it or, where applicable, give a true and fair view of the matters referred to in s 73(5A)–(5D) (see PARA 2343); (d) have been prepared so as to conform with the requirements of the Friendly and Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1968 or, where applicable, give a true and fair view of the matters referred to in s 9(2), (3) (see PARA 2515); or (e) have been prepared so as to conform with the requirements of rules made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 where the auditor is, by rules made under s 340 (see PARA 764), required to make such a statement (see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Auditors) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2587, reg 2(2)(d)); or

'Person concerned' means in relation to an auditor of an authorised person, that authorised person; in relation to an auditor of a person who has close links (within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 343: see note 1) with an authorised person, that authorised person: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Auditors) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2587, reg 1(2). 'Relevant requirement' means: a requirement which is imposed by or under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 other than Pt VI (listing) (see PARA 385 et seq) and which relates to authorisation under the Act (whether by way of permission under Pt IV (ss 40–55) (see PARA 348 et seq) or otherwise) or to the carrying on of any regulated activity; or a requirement which is imposed by or under any other Act and whose contravention constitutes an offence which the Authority has power to prosecute under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Auditors) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/2587, reg 1(2). As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 generally see PARA 67 note 1.

Regulations have also been made which apply to any person who is, or has been, an actuary acting for an authorised person ('A') and who is or was appointed under or as a result of rules made by the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 340 (see PARA 764) or appointed under or as a result of any other statutory provision and subject to duties imposed by such rules (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 2(1)). Such an actuary and also an actuary acting for a person with close links with A (within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 343(8): see note 1) must communicate to the Authority information on, or his opinion on, matters mentioned in head (2) of the text in the following circumstances (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 2(2), (3)):

(i) as regards A the actuary reasonably believes that (A) there is or has been, or may be or may have been, a contravention of any relevant requirement that applies to A; and (B) that contravention may be of material significance to the Authority in determining whether to exercise, in relation to A, any functions conferred on the Authority by or under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 other than Pt VI

(official listing) (see PARA 385 et seq) (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 2(4)(a));

(ii) the actuary reasonably believes that the information on, or his opinion on, those matters may be of material significance to the Authority in determining whether A satisfies and will continue to satisfy the threshold conditions (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 2(4)(b));

(iii) the actuary reasonably believes that, where applicable, there is a significant risk that assets representing a fund or funds maintained by A in respect of contracts of long-term insurance effected or carried out by him are or may be, or may become, insufficient to meet his liabilities attributable to such contracts (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 2(4)(c)); or

(iv) the actuary reasonably believes that, where applicable, there is a significant risk that A did not, does not or is unable to, or will not, may not or may become unable to, take into account in a reasonable and proportionate manner the interests of the policyholders of contracts of long-term insurance effected or carried out by him, and for these purposes the actuary may take into account: (A) the manner in which A exercises his discretion in relation to the operation of the fund or funds maintained by A in respect of contracts of long-term insurance effected or carried out by him, including the distribution and use of surplus assets; (B) the methodology used to determine bonuses; (C) the manner in which A takes into account the interests of different classes of policyholder; (D) the application of fixed or discretionary charges or benefits payable under such contracts; (E) representations made by A to policyholders or potential policyholders; and (F) any obligation (however phrased) imposed on A under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to treat policyholders fairly (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 2(4)(d), (5)).

'Relevant requirement' means a requirement which is imposed by or under any provision of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 other than Pt VI (official listing) (see PARA 385 et seq); or a requirement which is imposed by or under any other Act and whose contravention constitutes an offence which the Authority has power to prosecute under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 1(2). 'Contract of long-term insurance' has the same meaning as in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544 (see PARA 90 note 3): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Communications by Actuaries) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1294, reg 1(2).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(6), 343(6).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(7), 343(7).

767. Disqualification for failure to comply with a duty. If it appears to the Financial Services Authority[1] that an auditor or actuary[2] has failed to comply with a duty imposed on him under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, it may disqualify him from being the auditor of, or (as the case may be) from acting as an actuary for, any authorised person or any particular class of authorised person[3]. If the Authority proposes to disqualify a person in this way it must give him a warning notice[4]. If it decides to disqualify him it must give him a decision notice[5]. The Authority may remove any disqualification if satisfied that the disqualified person will in future comply with the duty in question[6]. A person who has been disqualified may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[7].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Supervision Manual (SUP) Chs 3–4, Decision Procedure and Penalties Manual (DEPP). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.

2 Ie an auditor or actuary of an authorised person appointed under or as a result of a statutory provision: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 342(1), (2), 345(1). As to authorised persons see PARA 314.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 345(1). An auditor may also be disqualified for breaching trust scheme rules: see s 249; and PARA 616.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 345(2). As to warning notices see PARA 769.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 345(3). As to decision notices see PARA 770.
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 345(4).
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 345(5). As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.

768. Penalty for provision of false or misleading information. An authorised person[1] who knowingly or recklessly gives an auditor or actuary appointed under or as a result of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[2] information which is false or misleading in a material particular is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment or a fine or both[3].

2 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 346(3). As to the appointment of auditors and actuaries see PARA 764.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 346(1). The authorised person is liable (1) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or both; (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine, or both: see s 346(1). As to the statutory maximum see PARA 56 note 24.

Section 346(1) applies equally to an officer, controller or manager of an authorised person: s 346(2). As to the meaning of 'controller' see PARA 591 note 16. As to the meaning of 'manager' see PARA 86 note 11.

(11) MISCELLANEOUS PROCEDURAL AND OTHER MATTERS

(i) Procedure for Notices given by the Financial Services Authority

769. Warning notices. A warning notice must:

(1) state the action which the Financial Services Authority[1] proposes to take[2];
(2) be in writing[3];
(3) give reasons for the proposed action[4];
(4) state whether the statutory provision relating to access to Authority material[5] applies[6]; and
(5) if that provision applies, describe its effect and state whether any secondary material exists to which the person concerned must be allowed access under it[7].

The warning notice must specify a reasonable period (which may not be less than 28 days) within which the person to whom it is given may make representations to the Authority[8]. The Authority may extend the period specified in the notice[9]. The Authority must then decide, within a reasonable period, whether to give the person concerned a decision notice[10].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Decision Procedure and Penalties Manual (DEPP). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 387(1)(a).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 387(3).
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 387(4). As to decision notices see PARA 770.

770. Decision notices. A decision notice must:

(1) be in writing[1];

(2) give the Financial Services Authority's[2] reasons for the decision to take the action to which the notice relates[3];

(3) state whether the statutory provision relating to access to Authority material[4] applies[5];

(4) if that provision applies, describe its effect and state whether any secondary material exists to which the person concerned must be allowed access under it[6]; and

(5) give an indication of: (a) any right to have the matter referred to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[7] which is given by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000; and (b) the procedure on such a reference[8].

If the decision notice was preceded by a warning notice[9], the action to which the decision notice relates must be action under the same Part of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 as the action proposed in the warning notice[10]. The Authority may, before it takes the action to which a decision notice (the 'original notice') relates, give the person concerned a further decision notice which relates to different action in respect of the same matter[11].

9 As to warning notices see PARA 769.
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 388(2).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 388(3). The Authority may give a further decision notice as a result of s 388(3) only if the person to whom the original notice was given consents: s 388(4). If the person to whom a decision notice is given under s 388(3) had the right to refer the matter to which the original decision notice related to the Tribunal, he has that right as respects the decision notice under s 388(3): s 388(5).

771. Notices of discontinuance. If the Financial Services Authority[1] decides not to take: (1) the action proposed in a warning notice[2]; or (2) the action to which a decision notice relates[3], it must give a notice of discontinuance to the person to whom the warning notice or decision notice was given[4]. This does not apply if the discontinuance of the proceedings concerned results in the granting of an application made by the person to whom the warning or decision notice was given[5]. A notice of discontinuance must identify the proceedings which are being discontinued[6].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Decision Procedure and Penalties Manual (DEPP). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 389(1)(a). As to warning notices see PARA 769.

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 389(2).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 389(3).

772. Final notices. If the Financial Services Authority[1] has given a person a decision notice[2] and the matter was not referred to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[3] within the 28-day period[4], the Authority must, on taking the action to which the decision notice relates, give the person concerned and any person to whom the decision notice was copied a final notice[5]. If the Authority has given a person a decision notice and the matter was referred to the Tribunal, the Authority must, on taking action in accordance with any directions given by the Tribunal or the court[6], give that person and any person to whom the decision notice was copied a final notice[7].

A final notice about a statement must set out the terms of the statement and give details of the manner in which, and the date on which, the statement will be published[8]. A final notice about an order must set out the terms of the order and state the date from which the order has effect[9]. A final notice about a penalty must state the amount of the penalty, state the manner in which, and the period within which[10], the penalty is to be paid and give details of the way in which the penalty will be recovered if it is not paid by the date stated in the notice[11]. A final notice about a requirement to make a payment or distribution[12] must state the persons to whom, the manner in which and the period within which[13], it must be made[14]. In any other case, the final notice must give details of the action being taken and state the date on which the action is to be taken[15].

If all or any of the amount of a penalty payable under a final notice is outstanding at the end of the period stated, the Authority may recover the outstanding amount as a debt due to it[16]. If all or any of a required payment or distribution has not been made at the end of a period stated in a final notice, the obligation to make the payment is enforceable, on the application of the Authority, by injunction[17].

773. Supervisory notice. The Financial Services Authority[1] may give a supervisory notice in the following circumstances[2]. The circumstances are that the Authority proposes:

(1) to vary a permission to carry on regulated activities[3];
(2) to discontinue or suspend the listing of securities on its own initiative[4];

(3) to discontinue or suspend the listing of securities on the application of the issuer[5];

(4) to suspend trading in a financial instrument[6];

(5) to suspend or prohibit an offer to the public or the admission to trading on a regulated market[7];

(6) to exercise its power of intervention[8];

(7) to give a direction in relation to an authorised unit trust scheme[9];

(8) to give a direction in relation to a recognised overseas scheme[10];

(9) to impose a requirement on a former underwriting member of Lloyd's[11].

774. Publication. Neither the Financial Services Authority[1] nor a person to whom a warning notice[2] or decision notice[3] is given or copied may publish the notice or any details concerning it[4].

A notice of discontinuance[5] must state that, if the person to whom the notice is given consents, the Authority may publish such information as it considers appropriate about the matter to which the discontinued proceedings related[6]. A copy of a notice of discontinuance must be accompanied by a statement that, if the person to whom the notice is copied consents, the Authority may publish such information as it considers appropriate about the matter to which the discontinued proceedings related, so far as relevant to that person[7].

The Authority must publish such information about the matter to which a final notice[8] relates as it considers appropriate[9].

When a supervisory notice[10] takes effect, the Authority must publish such information about the matter to which the notice relates as it considers appropriate[11].

The Authority may not publish information if publication of it would, in its opinion, be unfair to the person with respect to whom the action was taken or prejudicial to the interests of consumers[12]. Information is to be published in such manner as the Authority considers appropriate[13].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Regulatory Processes, Decision Procedure and Penalties Manual (DEPP). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 As to warning notices see PARA 769.
3 As to decision notices see PARA 770.

10 As to the meaning of 'supervisory notice' see PARA 773 note 2; definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 391(10).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 391(5). For the purposes of determining when a supervisory notice takes effect, a matter to which the notice relates is open to review if: (1) the period during which any person may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal is still running; (2) the matter has been referred to the Tribunal but has not been dealt with; (3) the matter has been referred to the Tribunal and dealt with but the period during which an appeal may be brought against the Tribunal's decision is still running; or (4) such an appeal has been brought but has not been determined: s 391(8). As to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal see PARA 43 et seq.
12 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 391(6). 'Consumers' means persons who are consumers for the purposes of s 138 (see PARA 21 note 5): s 391(11).

775. Third party rights. If any of the reasons contained in a warning notice[1] relates to a matter which identifies a person (the 'third party') other than the person to whom the notice is given, and, in the opinion of the Financial Services Authority[2], is prejudicial to the third party, a copy of the notice must be given to the third party[3]. A copy does not need to be given to the third party if the Authority: (1) has given him a separate warning notice in relation to the same matter[4]; or (2) gives him such a notice at the same time as it gives the warning notice which identifies him[5]. The notice copied to a third party[6] must specify a reasonable period (which may not be less than 28 days) within which he may make representations to the Authority[7].

If any of the reasons contained in a decision notice[8] relates to a matter which identifies a person (the 'third party') other than the person to whom the decision notice is given, and in the opinion of the Authority, is prejudicial to the third party, a copy of the notice must be given to the third party[9]. A copy does not need to be given to the third party if the Authority: (a) has given him a separate decision notice in relation to the same matter[10]; or (b) gives him such a notice at the same time as it gives the decision notice which identifies him[11]. If the person to whom a decision notice is given has a right to refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[12], then:

(i) a person to whom a copy of the notice is given under these provisions may refer to the Tribunal the decision in question[13], or any opinion expressed by the Authority in relation to him[14];

(ii) the copy must be accompanied by an indication of the third party's right to make a reference to the Tribunal[15] and of the procedure on such a reference[16];

(iii) a person who alleges that a copy of the notice should have been given to him, but was not, may refer to the Tribunal the alleged failure and the decision in question[17], or any opinion expressed by the Authority in relation to him[18].

The statutory provision relating to access to Authority material[19] applies to a third party as it applies to the person to whom the notice was given, in so far as the material which the Authority must disclose[20] relates to the matter which identifies the third party[21].

Any person to whom a warning notice or decision notice was copied under the provisions described above must be given a copy of a notice of discontinuance[22] applicable to the proceedings to which the warning notice or decision notice related[23].

1 As to warning notices see PARA 769. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 393 applies to a warning notice given in accordance with s 54(1) (see PARA 357), s 57(1) (see PARA 365), s 63(3) (see PARA 371), s 67(1) (see PARA 374), s 88(4)(b) (see PARA 426), s 89(2) (see PARA 426), s 92(1) (see PARA 429), s 126(1) (see PARA 442), s 207(1) (see PARA 468), s 255(1) (see PARA 613), s 280(1) (see PARA 679), s 331(1) (see PARA 755), s 345(2) (see PARA 767) (whether as a result of s 345(1) or s 249(1) (see PARA 616)), s 385(1) (see PARA 474) or s 412B(4) or (8) (see PARA 783): s 392(a) (amended by SI 2007/126).

The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 393 applies to a decision notice given in accordance with s 54(2) (see PARA 357), s 57(3) (see PARA 365), s 63(4) (see PARA 371), s 67(4) (see PARA 374), s 88(6)(b) (see PARA 426), s 89(3) (see PARA 426), s 92(4) (see PARA 429), s 127(1) (see PARA 442), s 208(1) (see PARA 469), s 255(2) (see PARA 613), s 280(2) (see PARA 679), s 331(3) (see PARA 755), s 345(3) (see PARA 767) (whether as a result of s 345(1) or s 249(1) (see PARA 616)), s 386(1) (see PARA 474) or s 412B(5) or (9) (see PARA 783): s 392(b) (amended by SI 2007/126).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 393(4). If the decision notice was preceded by a warning notice, a copy of the decision notice must (unless it has been given under s 393(4)) be given to each person to whom the warning notice was copied: s 393(5). Section 393(4) does not require a copy of the notice to be given to a third party if the Authority considers it impracticable to do so: s 393(7).

22 As to notices of discontinuance see PARA 771.

23 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 393(14).

776. Access to material. If the Financial Services Authority[1] gives a person ('A') a notice[2], it must: (1) allow him access to the material on which it relied in taking the decision which gave rise to the obligation to give the notice[3]; (2) allow him access to any secondary material[4] which, in the opinion of the Authority, might undermine that decision[5]. However, the Authority does not have to allow A access to material if the material is excluded material[6] or if it: (a) relates to a case involving a person other than A[7]; and (b) was taken into account by the Authority in A's case only for purposes of comparison with other cases[8].

The Authority may refuse A access to particular material which it would otherwise have to allow him access to if, in its opinion, allowing him access to the material: (i) would not be in the public interest[9]; or (ii) would not be fair, having regard to the likely significance of the material to A in relation to the matter in respect of which he has been given a notice, and the potential prejudice to the commercial interests of a person other than A which would be caused by the material's disclosure[10].

2 The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394 applies to a warning notice given in accordance with s 54(1) (see PARA 357), s 57(1) (see PARA 365), s 63(3) (see PARA 371), s 67(1) (see PARA 374), s 88(4)(b) (see PARA 426), s 89(2) (see PARA 426), s 92(1) (see PARA 429), s 126(1) (see PARA 442), s 207(1) (see PARA 468), s 255(1) (see PARA 613), s 280(1) (see PARA 679), s 331(1) (see PARA 755), s 345(2) (see PARA 767) (whether as a result of s 345(1) or s 249(1) (see PARA 616)), s 385(1) (see PARA 474) or s 412B(4) or (8) (see PARA 783): s 392(a) (amended by SI 2007/126). As to warning notices see PARA 769. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394 also applies to a decision notice given in accordance with s 54(2) (see PARA 357), s 57(3) (see PARA 365), s 63(4) (see PARA 371), s 67(4) (see PARA 374), s 88(6)(b) (see PARA 426), s 89(3) (see PARA 426), s 92(4) (see PARA 429), s 127(1) (see PARA 442), s 208(1) (see PARA 469), s 255(2) (see PARA 613), s 280(2) (see PARA 679), s 331(3) (see PARA 755), s 345(3) (see PARA 767) (whether as a result of s 345(1) or s 249(1) (see PARA 616)), s 386(1) (see PARA 474) or s 412B(5) or (9) (see PARA 783): s 392(b) (amended by SI 2007/126). As to decision notices see PARA 770.

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(1)(a).

4 'Secondary material' means material, other than material falling within head (1) in the text which: (1) was considered by the Authority in reaching the decision mentioned in that head; or (2) was obtained by the Authority in connection with the matter to which the notice relates but which was not considered by it in reaching that decision: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(6).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(1)(b).

6 'Excluded material' means material which: (1) is material the disclosure of which for the purposes of or in connection with any legal proceedings is prohibited by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 s 17 (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 519); or (2) is a protected item (as defined in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 413 (see PARA 784)): s 394(7) (amended by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 Sch 4 para 11). See note 7.

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(2)(a). If the Authority does not allow A access to material because it is excluded material consisting of a protected item, it must give A written notice of: (1) the existence of the protected item; and (2) the Authority's decision not to allow him access to it: s 394(4).

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(2)(b). See note 7.

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(3)(a). If the Authority refuses under s 394(3) to allow A access to material, it must give him written notice of: (1) the refusal; and (2) the reasons for it: s 394(5).

10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 394(3)(b). See note 9.

777. Procedure for Financial Services Authority notices. The Financial Services Authority[1] must determine the procedure that it proposes to follow in relation to the giving of: (1) supervisory notices[2]; and (2) warning notices[3] and decision notices[4]. That procedure must be designed to secure, among other things, that the decision which gives rise to the obligation to give any such notice is taken by a person not directly involved in establishing the evidence on which that decision is based[5]. However, the procedure may permit a decision which gives rise to an obligation to give a supervisory notice to be taken by a person other than a person mentioned above[6] if: (a) the Authority considers that, in the particular case, it is necessary in order to protect the interests of consumers[7]; and (b) the person taking the decision is of a level of seniority laid down by the procedure[8].

The Authority must issue a statement of the procedure[9]. The statement must be published in the way appearing to the Authority to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[10]. The Authority may charge a reasonable fee for providing a person with a copy of the statement[11]. The Authority must, without delay, give the Treasury a copy of any statement which it issues under these provisions[12].

When giving a supervisory notice, or a warning notice or decision notice, the Authority must follow its stated procedure[13]. If the Authority changes the procedure in a material way, it must publish a revised statement[14]. The Authority's failure in a particular case to follow its procedure as set out in the latest published statement does not affect the validity of a notice given in that case[15].

Before issuing a statement of procedure[16], the Authority must publish a draft of the proposed statement in the way appearing to the Authority to be best calculated to bring it to the attention of the public[17]. The draft must be accompanied by notice that representations about the proposal may be made to the Authority within a specified time[18]. Before issuing the proposed statement of procedure, the Authority must have regard to any representations made to it[19]. If the Authority issues the proposed statement of procedure it must publish an account, in general terms, of: (i) the representations made to it[20]; and (ii) its response to them[21]. If the statement of procedure differs from the published draft in a way which is, in the opinion of the Authority, significant, the Authority must publish details of the difference[22]. These requirements[23] also apply to a proposal to revise a statement of policy[24].

(ii) Miscellaneous Matters

A. REVIEW OF PAST BUSINESS

778. Schemes for reviewing past business. If the Treasury[1] is satisfied that there is evidence suggesting: (1) that there has been a widespread or regular failure[2] on the part of authorised persons[3] to comply with rules[4] relating to a particular kind of activity; and (2) that, as a result, private persons[5] have suffered (or will suffer) loss in respect of which authorised persons are (or will be) liable to make payments ('compensation payments'), the Treasury may make a scheme order[6]. A scheme order authorises the Financial Services Authority[7] to establish and operate a scheme for: (a) determining the nature and extent of the failure[8]; (b) establishing the liability of authorised persons to make compensation payments[9]; and (c) determining the amounts payable by way of compensation payments[10]. An authorised scheme[11] must be made so as to comply with specified[12] requirements[13]. A scheme order may be made only if: (i) the Authority has given the Treasury a report about the alleged failure and asked it to make a scheme order[14]; (ii) the report contains details of the scheme which the Authority proposes to make[15]; and (iii) the Treasury is satisfied that the proposed scheme is an appropriate way of dealing with the failure[16]. A scheme order may provide for specified provisions of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to apply in relation to any provision of, or determination made under, the resulting authorised scheme subject to such modifications (if any) as may be specified[17]. For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, failure on the part of an authorised person to comply with any provision of an authorised scheme is to be treated (subject to any provision made by the scheme order concerned) as a failure on his part to comply with rules[18]. The Treasury may prescribe circumstances in which loss suffered by a person ('A') acting in a fiduciary or other prescribed capacity is to be treated, for the purposes of an authorised scheme, as suffered by a private person in relation to whom A was acting in that capacity[19].

No order is to be made under the provisions described above[20] unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House[21].

3 As to authorised persons see PARA 314.
4 As to the meaning of 'rule' see PARA 23 note 2.
5 'Private person' has such meaning as may be prescribed: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 404(10). 'Prescribed' means prescribed in regulations made by the Treasury: s 417(1). At the date at which this volume states the law no such regulations had been made.

B. IMPLEMENTATION OF FOREIGN DECISIONS AND INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS

779. Third countries. For the purpose of implementing a third country decision[1], the Treasury[2] may direct the Financial Services Authority[3] to: (1) refuse an application for permission to carry on regulated activities[4] made by a body incorporated in, or formed under the law of, any part of the United Kingdom[5]; (2) defer its decision on such an application either indefinitely or for such period as may be specified in the direction[6]; (3) give a notice of objection to a person who has served a notice of control[7] to the effect that he proposes to acquire a 50 per cent stake[8] in a UK authorised person[9]; or (4) give a notice of objection to a person who has acquired a 50 per cent stake in a UK authorised person without having served the required notice of control[10]. A direction may also be given in relation to: (a) any person falling within a class specified in the direction; (b) future applications, notices of control or acquisitions[11]. The Treasury may revoke a direction at any time[12], but revocation does not affect anything done in accordance with the direction before it was revoked[13].

If a third country decision[14] has been taken, the Treasury may make a determination[15] in relation to an EFTA firm[16] which is a subsidiary undertaking[17] of a parent undertaking[18] which is governed by the law of the country to which the decision relates[19]. A determination may also be made in relation to any firm falling within a class specified in the determination[20]. The Treasury may withdraw a determination at any time[21], but withdrawal does not affect anything done in accordance with the determination before it was withdrawn[22]. If the Treasury makes a determination in respect of a particular firm, or withdraws such a determination, it must give written notice to that firm[23]. The Treasury must publish notice of any determination (or the withdrawal of any determination) in such a way as it thinks most suitable for bringing the determination (or withdrawal) to the attention of those likely to be affected by it, and on, or as soon as practicable after, the date of the determination (or withdrawal)[24].

The Treasury may by order modify certain provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 in relation to firms which have their head office in Gibraltar or are otherwise connected with Gibraltar[25].

1 'Third country decision' means a decision of the EC Council or the European Commission under: (1) the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 15(3); (2) the First Non-Life Insurance Directive (ie EEC Directive 73/239 (OJ L228, 16.8.73, p 3) on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of direct insurance other than life assurance) art 29b(4); or (3) the Life Assurance Consolidation Directive (ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12. 2002, p 1) concerning life assurance) art 59(4): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 405(5) (amended by SI 2004/3379: SI 2006/3221; SI 2007/126).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 405(1)(a). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. If the Authority refuses an application for permission as a result of a direction under s 405(1)(a), then: (1) s 52(7)–(9) (determination of applications) (see PARA 350) does not apply in relation to the refusal; but (2) the Authority must notify the applicant of the refusal and the reasons for it: s 407(1).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 405(1)(b). If the Authority defers its decision on an application for permission as a result of a direction under s 405(1)(b), then: (1) the time limit for determining the application mentioned in s 52(1) or (2) (determination of applications) (see PARA 350) stops running on the day of the deferral and starts running again (if at all) on the day the period specified in the direction (if any) ends or the day the direction is revoked; and (2) the Authority must notify the applicant of the deferral and the reasons for it: s 407(2).

7 As to the meaning of 'notice of control' see PARA 377 note 3.

8 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 405, a person (the 'acquirer') acquires a 50% stake in a UK authorised person ('A') on first falling within any of the cases mentioned in s 406(2) (see below): s 406(1). Those cases are where the acquirer: (1) holds 50% or more of the shares in A; (2) holds 50% or more of the shares in a parent undertaking ('P') of A; (3) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, 50% or more of the voting power in A; or (4) is entitled to exercise, or control the exercise of, 50% or more of the voting power in P: s 406(2). For the purposes of s 406(2), 'acquirer' means: (a) the acquirer; (b) any of the acquirer's associates; or (c) the acquirer and any of his associates: s 406(3). As to the meaning of 'UK authorised person' see PARA 358 note 3. As to the meaning of 'parent undertaking' see PARA 351 note 32. As to the meanings of 'associate', 'shares' and 'voting power' see PARA 591 note 16.

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 405(1)(c). If the Authority gives a notice of objection to a person as a result of a direction under s 405(1)(c) or s 405(1)(d) (see the text and note 10), then: (1) s 189 (improperly acquired shares) (see PARA 384) and s 191 (offences) (see PARA 377) have effect as if the notice was a notice of objection within the meaning of Pt XII (ss 178–192) (see PARA 383 note 9); and (2) the Authority must state in the notice the reasons for it: s 407(3).

15 'Determination' means a determination that the firm concerned does not qualify for authorisation under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 3 (see PARAS 314–318, 323–329) even if it satisfies the conditions in Sch 3 para 13 or Sch 3 para 14 (see PARA 315): s 408(2).

16 'EFTA firm' means a firm, institution or undertaking which: (1) is an EEA firm as a result of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 3 para 5(a), (b) or (d) (see PARA 315); and (2) is incorporated in, or formed under the law of, an EEA state which is not a member state: s 408(8). As to the meaning of 'EEA firm' see PARA 315 note 1; and as to the meaning of 'EEA state' see PARA 315 note 1.

24 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 408(7).

25 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 409. The Treasury may by order: (1) modify Sch 3 (see PARA 315 et seq) so as to provide for Gibraltar firms of a description specified in the order to qualify for authorisation under that Schedule in circumstances specified in the order; (2) modify Sch 3 so as to make provision in relation to the exercise by UK firms of rights under the law of Gibraltar which correspond to EEA rights; (3) modify Sch 4 (treaty rights) (see PARA 319) so as to provide for Gibraltar firms of a description specified in the order to qualify for authorisation under that Schedule in circumstances specified in the order; (4) modify s 264 (see PARA 672) so as to make provision in relation to collective investment schemes constituted under the law of Gibraltar; (5) provide for the Financial Services Authority to be able to give notice under s 264(2) on grounds relating to the law of Gibraltar; (6) provide for the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to apply to a Gibraltar recognised scheme as if the scheme were a scheme recognised under s 264: s 409(1), (5). 'Gibraltar firm' means a firm which has its head office in Gibraltar or is otherwise connected with Gibraltar: s 409(3). As to the meaning of 'UK firm' see PARA 323 note 4; and as to the meaning of 'EEA right' see PARA 315 note 3; definitions applied by s 409(6). As to the meaning of 'collective investment scheme' see PARA 603. 'Gibraltar recognised scheme' means a collective investment scheme: (a) constituted in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom; and (b) recognised in Gibraltar under provisions which appear to the Treasury to give effect to the provisions of a relevant Community instrument: s 409(4). The fact that a firm may qualify for authorisation under Sch 3 as a result of an order under s 409(1) does not prevent it from applying for a Part IV permission: s 409(2). As to the meaning of 'Part IV permission' see PARA 348.

As to the order that has been made under s 409 see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Gibraltar) Order 2001, SI 2001/3084, which contains provisions relating to the exercise of deemed passport rights by Gibraltar-based firms (see art 2 (amended by SI 2005/1; SI 2006/1805; SI 2007/2932; SI 2007/3254)); EEA firms satisfying conditions under Gibraltar law (see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Gibraltar) Order 2001, SI 2001/3084, art 3 (amended by SI 2007/3254); and the exercise by UK firms of deemed passport rights in Gibraltar (see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Gibraltar) Order 2001, SI 2001/3084, art 4 (amended by SI 2006/3221)). As to orders under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 generally see PARA 67 note 1.

780. International obligations. If it appears to the Treasury[1] that any action proposed to be taken by a relevant person[2] would be incompatible with European Community obligations or any other international obligations of the United Kingdom[3], they may direct that person not to take that action[4]. If it appears to the Treasury that any action which a relevant person has power to take is required for the purpose of implementing any such obligations, it may direct that person to take that action[5]. A direction: (1) may include such supplemental or incidental requirements as the Treasury considers necessary or expedient[6]; and (2) is enforceable, on an application made by the Treasury, by injunction[7].

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 'Relevant person' means: (1) the Financial Services Authority (see PARAS 4, 6 et seq); (2) any person exercising functions conferred by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VI (ss 72–103) (see PARA 385 et seq) on the competent authority; (3) any recognised investment exchange (other than one which is an overseas investment exchange); (4) any recognised clearing house (other than one which is an overseas clearing house); (5) a person included in the list maintained under s 301 (see PARA 720); or (6) the scheme operator of the ombudsman scheme:

s 410(4). As to the competent authority see PARA 385. As to the meaning of 'recognised investment exchange' see PARA 684 note 1. As to the meaning of 'overseas investment exchange' see PARA 709 note 12. As to the meaning of 'recognised clearing house' see PARA 684 note 6. As to the meaning of 'overseas clearing house' see PARA 709 note 12. As to the scheme operator and the ombudsman scheme see PARA 575.

3 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 410(1).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 410(2).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 410(3)(a).

7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 410(3)(b). As to injunctions see generally INJUNCTIONS.

C. ENFORCEABILITY OF GAMING CONTRACTS

781. Gaming contracts. A contract is not void or unenforceable because of provisions of any applicable gaming legislation[1] if: (1) it is entered into by either or each party by way of business[2]; (2) the entering into or performance of it by either party constitutes an activity of a specified[3] kind or one which falls within a specified class of activity[4]; and (3) it relates to an investment[5] of a specified kind or one which falls within a specified class of investment[6].

1 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(1) (amended by the Gaming Act 2005 Sch 17). See the Betting, Gaming, Lotteries and Amusements (Northern Ireland) Order 1985, SI 1985/1204 (NI 11), art 170 which is the only provision remaining in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(1).

2 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(2)(a).

3 Ie specified in an order made by the Treasury: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(6). The activities specified are any activity of the kind: (1) specified by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544, art 14 or art 21 (dealing in investments as principal or agent) (see PARAS 112, 126); (2) specified by art 64 (agreeing to carry on specified kinds of activity) (see PARA 221), so far as relevant to either of those provisions; or (3) which would be so specified apart from any exclusion from any of those provisions made by the order: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Gaming Contracts) Order 2001, SI 2001/2510, art 2(1). As to orders under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 generally see PARA 67 note 1. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(2)(b).

5 'Investment' includes any asset, right or interest: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(5).

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412(2)(c). The specified class is the class of investment consisting of securities and contractually based investments (within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Regulated Activities) Order 2001, SI 2001/544 (see PARA 88 et seq)): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Gaming Contracts) Order 2001, SI 2001/2510, art 2(2).

The provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Sch 2 Pt II (investments) (see PARA 85) apply for the purposes of s 412(2)(c), with the references to s 22 being read as references to s 412(2)(c): s 412(3). Nothing in Sch 2 Pt II, as applied by s 412(3), limits the power conferred by s 312(2)(c): s 412(4).

D. TRADE-MATCHING AND REPORTING SYSTEMS

782. Approval and monitoring of trade-matching and reporting systems. The Financial Services Authority[1] must approve a relevant system[2] if, on an application[3] by the operator of the system, it is satisfied that the arrangements established by the system for reporting transactions comply with the relevant Regulation[4]. If, at any time after approving a relevant system[5], the Authority is not so satisfied, it may suspend or withdraw the approval[6].

The operator of an approved relevant system must make reports to the Authority at specified[7] intervals containing specified information relating to the system, the reports made by the system[8] and the transactions to which those reports relate[9]. The Authority may by written notice require the operator of an approved relevant system to provide such additional information as may be specified in the notice, by such reasonable time as may be so specified, about any of the matters mentioned above[10].

The Authority must keep under review the arrangements established by an approved relevant system for reporting transactions for the purpose of ensuring that the arrangements comply with the relevant Regulation[11].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
2 In the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 412A, 412B 'relevant system' means a trade-matching or reporting system of a kind described in EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) art 12: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(9) (s 412A added by SI 2007/126). A relevant system is an approved relevant system if it is approved by the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(2) (see the text to note 4) for the purposes of the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) on markets in financial instruments) art 25.5; and references in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 412A, 412B to an 'approved relevant system' are to be read accordingly: s 412A(1) (as so added).
3 The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 51(3), (4) (see PARA 349) applies to an application under s 412A as it applies to an application under Pt IV (ss 40–55) (see PARA 348 et seq): Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(3) (as added: see note 2).
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(2) (as added: see note 2). The reference is to the EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1) art 12(1).
5 Ie under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(2).
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(4) (as added: see note 2).
7 Ie specified by the Authority: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(6) (as added: see note 2).
8 Ie in accordance with the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (i e European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1)) art 25 and EC Commission Regulation 1287/2006 (OJ L241, 2.9.2006, p 1).
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(6) (as added: see note 2).
10 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(7) (as added: see note 2). The reference is to the matters mentioned in s 412A(6): see the text to notes 7–9. The recipient of a notice under s 412A(7) must provide the information by the time specified in the notice: s 412A(8) (as so added).
11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 412A(5) (as added: see note 2). For the purposes of s 412A(5), the Authority must have regard to information provided to it under s 412A(6), (7) (see the text to notes 7–10): see s 412A(5) (as so added).

783. Procedure for approval and suspension or withdrawal of approval. If the Financial Services Authority[1] approves[2] a relevant system[3], it must give the operator of the system written notice specifying the date from which the approval has effect[4].

If the Authority proposes to refuse to approve a relevant system, it must give the operator of the system a warning notice[5]. If the Authority decides to refuse to approve a relevant system, it must give the operator of the system a decision notice[6]. If the Authority proposes to suspend or withdraw its approval in relation to an approved relevant system[7], it must give the operator of the system a warning notice[8]. If the Authority decides to suspend or withdraw its approval in relation to an approved relevant system, it must give the operator of the system a decision notice specifying the date from which the suspension or withdrawal is to take effect[9].

If the Authority has suspended its approval in relation to an approved relevant system, and the operator of the system has applied for the suspension to be cancelled[10]:

(1) the Authority must grant the application if it is satisfied that the relevant arrangements for reporting transactions are in compliance[11]; and in such a case the Authority must give written notice to the operator that the suspension is to be cancelled from the date specified in the notice[12];

(2) if the Authority proposes to refuse the application, it must give the operator a warning notice[13];

(3) if the Authority decides to refuse the application, it must give the operator a decision notice[14].

A person who receives a decision notice[15] may refer the matter to the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal[16].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
2 As to approval see PARA 782.
3 As to the meaning of 'relevant system' see PARA 782 note 2.

E. LIMITATION ON POWER TO REQUIRE DISCLOSURE OF PROTECTED ITEMS

784. Protected items. A person may not be required under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to produce, disclose or permit the inspection of protected items[1]. 'Protected items' means:

(1) communications between a professional legal adviser and his client or any person representing his client which are made in connection with the giving of legal advice to the client, or in connection with, or in contemplation of, legal proceedings and for the purposes of those proceedings[2];

(2) communications between a professional legal adviser, his client or any person representing his client and any other person which are made in connection with, or in contemplation of, legal proceedings and for the purposes of those proceedings[3];

(3) items which: (a) are enclosed with, or referred to in, such communications; (b) are made in connection with the giving of legal advice to the client, or in connection with, or in contemplation of, legal proceedings and for the purposes of those proceedings; and (c) are in the possession of a person entitled to possession of them[4].

A communication or item is not a protected item if it is held with the intention of furthering a criminal purpose[5].

F. SERVICE OF DOCUMENTS

785. Power of the Treasury to make provision as to procedure. The Treasury[1] may by regulations make provision with respect to the procedure to be followed, or rules to be applied, when a provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 requires a notice, direction or document[2] of any kind to be given or authorises the imposition of a requirement[3].

The regulations may, in particular, make provision:

(1) as to the manner in which a document must be given[4];
(2) as to the address to which a document must be sent[5];
(3) requiring, or allowing, a document to be sent electronically[6];
(4) for treating a document as having been given, or as having been received, on a date or at a time determined in accordance with the regulations[7];
(5) as to what must, or may, be done if the person to whom a document is required to be given is not an individual[8];
(6) as to what must, or may, be done if the intended recipient of a document is outside the United Kingdom[9].

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
2 As to the meaning of 'document' see PARA 10 note 10.
3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(1). As to the regulations made see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420; and PARAS 786–789. As to regulations made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 generally see PARA 67 note 1.

Section 414(1) applies however the obligation to give a document is expressed (and so, in particular, includes a provision which requires a document to be served or sent): s 414(3).

The Interpretation Act 1978 s 7 (service of notice by post) (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1388) has effect in relation to provisions made by or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 subject to any provision made by regulations under s 414: s 414(4).
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(2)(a). As to methods of service see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, regs 2, 7; and PARA 786.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(2)(b). As to the proper address for service see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 4; and PARA 786.
6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(2)(c). As to service by electronic means of communication see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, regs 5, 8; and PARA 787.
7 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(2)(d). As to deemed service see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, regs 6, 9, 10, 11; and PARA 788.
8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(2)(e). As to the appropriate person to be served see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 3; and PARA 789.
9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 414(2)(f). As to the proper address for service see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 4; and PARA 786.

786. Methods of service, and proper address for service. Any relevant document[1] must be given by a relevant authority[2] to any person (the 'recipient') by one of the following methods[3]:

(1) by delivering it to the recipient, the recipient's nominee[4] or the appropriate person[5];
(2) by leaving it at the proper address of the recipient, the recipient's nominee or the appropriate person[6];
(3) by posting[7] it to that address[8]; or
(4) by transmitting it by fax or other means of electronic communication to the recipient, the recipient's nominee or the appropriate person[9].

A relevant document which is to be given to a relevant authority may be given by any method of serving or transmitting documents[10]. Where a relevant document is given by delivering it to the relevant authority, it must be delivered: (a) to the employee or other individual with responsibility for the matter to which the document relates, if the identity of that individual is known[11]; or (b) in any other case, to the published address of that authority[12]. Where a relevant document is given to a relevant authority by leaving it at, or posting[13] it to, the address of a relevant authority, it must be left at or posted to the published address of that authority[14].

The proper address:

(i) in the case of any person who is required by any provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to provide to the Financial Services Authority an address of a place in the United Kingdom for the service of documents, is the address so provided[15]; and
(ii) in the case of a person to whom no such requirement applies, is any current address provided by that person as an address for service of relevant documents[16].

In the case of any person who has not provided an address as mentioned in heads (i) and (ii) above, the proper address is the last known address of that person (whether of his residence, or of a place where he carries on business or is employed), or any address under such of the following as may be applicable:

(A) in the case of a body corporate[17] (other than a limited liability partnership)[18], its secretary or its clerk, the address of its registered or principal office in the United Kingdom[19];
(B) in the case of a limited liability partnership or any of its designated members, the address of its registered or principal office in the United Kingdom[20];
(C) in the case of a partnership[21] (other than a limited liability partnership) or any of its partners, the address of its principal office in the United Kingdom[22];
(D) in the case of an unincorporated association other than a partnership, or its governing body, the address of its principal office in the United Kingdom[23];
(E) in the case of a member of a designated professional body[24], if the member does not have a place of business in the United Kingdom, the address of that body[25].

1 'Relevant document' means:
(1) a document in relation to which a provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (other than a provision of or made under Pt IX (ss 132–137) (see PARAS 43, 45–46, 65–69) or Pt XXIV (ss 355–379) (see PARA 490 et seq)) requires a document of that kind to be given (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2)); or
(2) where a provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (other than a provision of or made under Pt IX or Pt XXIV) authorises the imposition of a requirement, a document by which such a requirement is imposed (Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2)).

For these purposes, 'document' means a notice, direction or document (as defined in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 417 (see PARA 10 note 10)) of any kind: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2). In the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, references to a requirement to give any document apply however the requirement is expressed (and so, in particular, include any requirement for a document to be served or sent): reg 1(4).

2 'Relevant authority' means: the Financial Services Authority, the Secretary of State, the Office of Fair Trading, an investigator, the scheme manager, the scheme operator, or an ombudsman: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2) (definition amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 2). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 3. As to the Office of Fair Trading see TRADE, INDUSTRY AND INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS vol 47 (2001 Reissue) PARA 504 et seq. 'Investigator' means a person appointed by an investigating authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 97(2) (see PARA 434), s 167 (see PARA 449), s 168(3) or (5) (see PARA 449), s 169(1)(b) (see PARA 450) or s 284 (see PARA 683), or under regulations made under s 262 (see PARA 621), to carry out an investigation: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2). 'Investigating authority' means the Financial Services Authority or the Secretary of State, as the case may be: reg 1(2). As to the meaning of 'scheme manager' see PARA 583. As to the meaning of 'scheme operator' see PARA 575. As to the meaning of 'ombudsman' see PARA 575 note 15; definition applied by reg 1(2). For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, the scheme operator and ombudsmen are treated as the same relevant authority (with the effect, in particular, that a document given to one is to be treated as also given to the other): reg 1(3).

3 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 2(1), (2). The provisions of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, have effect subject to any contrary provision made by a relevant authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 with respect to the service of documents: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(6).

4 'Nominee', in relation to any person to whom a document is to be given ('A'), means a person ('B') who is authorised for the time being to receive relevant documents on behalf of A, to whom relevant documents may be given: (1) if A has notified the Financial Services Authority in writing that B is so authorised, by any relevant authority; or (2) if A has notified a relevant authority in writing that B is so authorised, by that relevant authority: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2). For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, 'writing' includes any means of electronic communication which may be processed to produce a legible text: reg 1(5).

5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 2(2)(a). 'Appropriate person' means: (1) an individual to whom a relevant document may be given, in accordance with reg 3(1) (see PARA 789), in order to give that document to a person who is not an individual; or (2) in the case of a relevant document given to an appointed representative, his principal: reg 1(2). As to appointed representatives see PARA 346.

6 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 2(2)(b). Such person is determined in accordance with reg 4 (see heads (i)–(ii), (A)–(E) in the text).

7 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 2, 'posting' a relevant document means sending that document pre-paid by a postal service which seeks to deliver documents by post within the United Kingdom no later than the next working day in all or the majority of cases, and to deliver by post outside the United Kingdom within such a period as is reasonable in all the circumstances: reg 2(3). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

8 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 2(2)(c).

787. Service by electronic means of communication. A relevant authority[1] may give a relevant document[2] by fax only if the person to whom it is to be given has indicated in writing[3] to that authority (and has not withdrawn the indication): (1) that he is willing to receive relevant documents by fax[4]; and (2) the fax number to which such documents should be sent[5]. If a relevant authority gives a relevant document by fax it must, by the end of the business day[6] following the day on which it did so, send a copy of that document to the person to whom the document is to be given by any method specified[7] other than fax[8].

A relevant authority may give a relevant document by any other electronic means of communication only if the person to whom it is to be given:

(a) has indicated in writing to that authority (and has not withdrawn the indication) that he is willing to receive relevant documents by those means[9]; and
(b) has provided, in writing to that authority for this purpose, an e-mail address, or other electronic identification such as an ISDN or other telephonic link number[10].

Where a relevant document which is to be given to a relevant authority is given by fax or other electronic means, it must be sent to a fax number, e-mail address or other electronic identification:

(i) which has been notified to the sender by the relevant authority as the appropriate number, address or other electronic identification for the purpose of receiving relevant documents of the kind in question[11]; or
(ii) in all other cases, which has been published by the relevant authority for the purpose of receiving relevant documents[12].

Where any provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 requires a person to give a relevant document to the Financial Services

Authority before the end of a specified period, that person may give that document by fax only if by the end of the business day following the day on which he did so, he sends a copy of that document to the Authority by any method other than fax[13].

1 As to the meaning of 'relevant authority' see PARA 786 note 2.
2 As to the meaning of 'relevant document' see PARA 786 note 1. In the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, references to a requirement to give any document apply however the requirement is expressed (and so, in particular, include any requirement for a document to be served or sent): reg 1(4).
3 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, writing includes any means of electronic communication which may be processed to produce a legible text: reg 1(5).
4 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 5(1)(a). A fax number, e-mail address or other electronic identification provided to the Financial Services Authority for the purpose of accepting the service of relevant documents is sufficient indication, for any relevant authority, for the purposes of reg 5(1) or (3): reg 5(4). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.
5 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 5(1)(b). See note 4.
6 'Business day' means any day except Saturday, Sunday or a bank holiday, where 'bank holiday' includes Christmas Day and Good Friday: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2).

788. Deemed service etc. A relevant document[1] which is given by a relevant authority[2] to any person in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001[3] is, for each method of giving, to be treated as having been received on the days shown below[4]:

(1) where the document is left at the proper address[5], on the business day[6] after the day on which it is left at the proper address;
(2) where the document is posted to an address in the United Kingdom[7], on the second business day after posting;
(3) where the document is posted to an address in any EEA state (other than the United Kingdom), on the fifth business day after posting;
(4) where the document is sent by fax[8], on the business day after the day on which the document is transmitted;
(5) where the document is sent by other electronic means of communication, on the business day after the day on which the document is transmitted[9].

Special provision is made for certain notices stated to take effect immediately[10]. No relevant document which is to be given to a relevant authority is to be treated as given until it is received by that authority in legible form; and for the purposes of any provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 which requires a relevant authority to take any action within a specified period beginning with the day on which a document was received by that authority, that day is the day on which the document is actually received in legible form[11].

For the purposes of any provision of or made under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 which requires a person to give a document to the Financial Services Authority before the end of a specified period, that person is to be regarded as having complied with that requirement (irrespective of the day on which the document is in fact received by the Authority if it is sent by post, fax or other electronic means) if he sends the document to the Authority in accordance with any applicable directions[12] before the end of the specified period or, where no such directions apply, if he:

(a) delivers the document to an employee of the Authority with responsibility for the matter to which the document relates before the end of the specified period[13];

(b) leaves the document at the Authority's address before the end of the specified period, and obtains a time stamped receipt[14];

(c) posts[15] the document to the Authority's address before the final day of the specified period[16];

(d) sends the document to the Authority by fax before the end of the specified period, provided that he has also sent or subsequently sends a copy of that document by any method other than fax[17]; or

(e) sends the document to the Authority by other electronic means of communication before the end of the specified period, and obtains electronic confirmation of receipt[18].

No relevant document is to be treated as given by a relevant authority to a host state regulator[19] until it is received by that regulator[20].

1 As to the meaning of 'relevant document' see PARA 786 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'relevant authority' see PARA 786 note 2.

4 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 6(1). This is subject to reg 11 (see the text to note 20). In the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, references to a requirement to give any document apply however the requirement is expressed (and so, in particular, include any requirement for a document to be served or sent): reg 1(4).

5 As to the proper address for service see PARA 786.

6 As to the meaning of 'business day' see PARA 787 note 6.

7 As to the meaning of the 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

8 Where a relevant document is given by fax, that document is to be treated as having been received on the deemed day of receipt of the fax, determined in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 6(1), regardless of whether a relevant authority has sent a copy of that document in accordance with reg 5(2) (see PARA 787): reg 6(2).

9 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 6(1).

10 See the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 6(3) (added by SI 2005/274). Where (1) a notice given under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 53(4) (see PARA 357) states that a variation of an authorised person's Part IV permission (see PARA 348) takes effect immediately; (2) a notice given under s 78(2) (see PARA 389) states that a discontinuance or suspension of the listing of any securities takes effect immediately; or (3) a notice given under s 259(3) (see PARA 619), or under the Open-Ended Investment Companies Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1228, reg 27 (see PARA 634) states that a direction to which it relates takes effect immediately, that notice is to be treated as having been received at the time it is in fact received if that is earlier than the day on which heads (1)–(5) of the text would otherwise require it to be treated as having been received: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 6(3) (as so added).

11 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 9(1). For the purposes of reg 9(1), where a relevant document is given by fax and a copy sent in accordance with reg 8(2) (see PARA 787), that document is to be treated as given to the Financial Services Authority on either the day on which the fax is actually received by the Authority or the day on which the copy is actually received by the Authority, whichever day is the earlier: reg 9(2). As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq.

12 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 10, 'applicable direction' means any direction given by the Authority under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 which specifies the manner in which the relevant document in question is to be given: Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 10(2)(b).

14 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 10(1)(b).

15 For the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 10, 'posts' means:

(1) where the person who is required to give a document is located in the United Kingdom, sending that document pre-paid by a postal service which seeks to deliver documents by post within the United Kingdom no later than the next working day in all or the majority of cases (reg 10(2)(a)(i)); and

(2) where the person who is required to give a document is located outside the United Kingdom, sending that document pre-paid by a postal service which seeks to deliver documents by post in the fastest time which is reasonable in the circumstances (reg 10(2)(a)(ii)).

18 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 10(1)(e).

19 As to the meaning of 'host state regulator' see PARA 323 note 10; definition applied by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 1(2).

20 Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Service of Notices) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1420, reg 11.

789. Appropriate person to be served. A relevant document[1] which is required to be given[2] by a relevant authority[3] to a person (other than a relevant authority) who is not an individual may:

(1) where that person is a body corporate[4] (other than a limited liability partnership)[5], be given to the secretary or the clerk of that body, or to any person holding a senior position in that body[6];

(2) where that person is a limited liability partnership, be given to any designated member[7];

(3) where that person is a partnership[8] (other than a limited liability partnership), be given to any partner[9];

(4) where that person is an unincorporated association other than a partnership, be given to any member of the governing body of the association[10].

A relevant document which is required to be given to an appointed representative[11] may be given to his principal[12].

3. BANKING

(1) INTRODUCTION

(i) Legislation and Common Law

791. Introduction. The statutory regulation of banking has changed considerably with the enactment of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000[1]. Prior to this, the regulation of banking was governed by the Banking Act 1987 which covered the regulation of deposit-taking business[2], the deposit protection scheme[3], banking names and descriptions[4], overseas institutions with representative offices[5], restriction on disclosure of information[6] and miscellaneous related matters[7]. The Banking Act 1987 also gave the Bank of England supervisory duties over the field of banking[8]. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 takes away the distinction between banking and other forms of financial services and imposes a system to regulate all financial services[9].

Although the statutory regulation of banking has been subsumed into that of financial services generally, there are a number of matters that remain distinctive to banks[10] and banking law. The Bank of England remains a powerful institution that has been granted new powers for the formulation of monetary policy under the Banking Act 1998[11]. The business of banking is primarily governed by the common law and covers such matters as the relation of banker and customer[12], the payment of cheques and the protection and duties of the paying banker[13], banker's lien[14], the appropriation of payments[15], statement of account[16], the banker as bailee[17], the collection of cheques and the protection and duties of the collecting banker[18], electronic funds transfer[19], bankers' books[20], secrecy, references and advice[21], letters of credit and performance bonds[22], lending and security[23], guarantees[24], and freezing injunctions[25]. There are specific accounting requirements for banking companies and groups[26].

One further statute that should be mentioned in this general context is the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 which makes provision for the Treasury[27] in certain circumstances to make an order relating to the transfer of securities issued by, or of property, rights or liabilities belonging to, an authorised UK deposit-taker[28].

27 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.
28 'Authorised UK deposit-taker' means a United Kingdom undertaking that under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40–55) has permission (see PARA 348 et seq) to accept deposits (see PARA 89 et seq): Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 s 1(1). That expression does not, however, include such an undertaking with permission to accept deposits only for the purposes of, or in the course of, an activity other than accepting deposits: s 1(2). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

The Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 received Royal Assent on 21 February 2008 and was intended to enable the United Kingdom government to nationalise high-street banks under emergency circumstances by secondary legislation. Specifically the Act was introduced in order to nationalise the failing bank Northern Rock plc after a private-sector solution was deemed of insufficient value to the taxpayer, although the legislation is of potentially wider application. It also has provisions on the following matters: cases where the Treasury's powers are exercisable (s 2); transfer of securities (s 3); extinguishment of subscription rights (s 4); compensation etc for securities transferred etc (s 5); transfer of property, rights and liabilities (s 6); compensation etc for property etc transferred (s 7); further transfers following transfer to public sector (s 8); supplementary provision about compensation schemes etc (s 9); tax consequences (s 10); modification of legislation applying in relation to building societies) (s 11) (see also PARA 1856 note 4); consequential and supplementary provision (s 12); orders and regulations: general (s 13); orders and regulations: retrospective provisions (s 14); interpretation (s 15); financial provision (s 16); short title, commencement and extent (s 17); transfer orders under s 3 (Sch 1); transfer orders under s 6 (Sch 2). The Northern Rock plc Transfer Order 2008, SI 2008/432, was made in exercise of the powers conferred by the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 ss 3, 4, 12 and 13 to protect the public interest, in circumstances where the Treasury has provided financial assistance to Northern Rock plc, being an authorised UK deposit-taker (see above), for the purpose of maintaining the stability of the UK financial system (see also PARA 807). The Northern Rock plc Compensation Scheme Order 2008, SI 2008/718, was made under the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 ss 5, 9, 12, 13 and provides a scheme for determining the amount of compensation, if any, payable by the Treasury to those whose securities were transferred, or whose rights were extinguished, by the Northern Rock plc Transfer Order 2008, SI 2008/432 (see above).

(ii) The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000

792. The statutory regulation of financial services and markets. The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 provides for the Financial Services Authority[1] to be the sole regulatory authority for the financial services industry, with powers of authorisation, supervision and enforcement[2]. It also creates a tribunal, known as the Financial Services and Markets Tribunal, to hear references from certain decisions of the Financial Services Authority[3].

The Act contains a general prohibition, which prohibits a person from carrying on a regulated activity which relates to investment or property[4] unless he is either an authorised person or an exempt person[5]. The former prohibitions on investment advertisement and unsolicited calls are replaced with a new scheme to control financial promotion[6]. In addition to powers of investigation and enforcement[7], there are powers to impose penalties for market abuse[8] which supplement the provisions relating to insider dealing[9]. The Act also makes provision for consumer protection[10], and provides for there to be a single compensation scheme[11] and a single ombudsman[12].

1 As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. See also the Financial Services Authority's Handbook of Rules and Guidance, Prudential Standards, General Prudential Sourcebook (GENPRU), Prudential Sourcebook for Banks, Building Societies and Investment Firms (BIPRU). As to the Handbook generally see PARA 22.
2 See PARA 314 et seq. The Bank of England previously had the duty to supervise banking institutions under the Banking Act 1987 s 1 (repealed) but this duty was removed and transferred to the Financial Services Authority: see the Bank of England Act 1998 Pt III (ss 21–30), Sch 4 (ss 21, 23 amended, and ss 25–29 repealed, by SI 2001/3649). The Bank did not owe individual commercial banks a duty of care in carrying out its supervisory functions: Minories Finance Ltd v Arthur Young [1989] 2 All ER 105. But it could be liable for misfeasance in public office: Three Rivers District Council v Bank of England (No 3) [2003] 2 AC 1, [2000] 3 All ER 1, HL.

(2) CONSTITUTION OF BANKS

(i) Bank of England

793. Governor and Company of the Bank of England. In 1694, by Act of Parliament[1] and by a charter granted under letters patent authorised by the Act[2], the subscribers and contributors to a government loan of £1,200,000, their successors and assigns, were constituted a body corporate and politic by the name of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, with perpetual succession and a common seal[3]. A supplemental charter was granted in 1896[4].

On 1 March 1946[5], the capital, amounting to £14,553,000[6], was brought into public ownership by transfer to the Treasury Solicitor[7] to be held on behalf of the Treasury[8]. The existing charters were with some exceptions[9] revoked, and a new Bank of England charter was granted, as from the same date[10].

1 See the Bank of England Act 1694 s 19 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1888; and the Statute Law Revision Act 1948).
2 The letters patent were dated 27 July 1694.
3 Bank of England Act 1694 s 19 (as amended: see note 1).
4 This was granted by letters patent dated 19 August 1896, authorised by the Bank Act 1892 s 7(1) (repealed).
5 See the Bank of England (Appointed Day) Order 1946, SR & O 1946/237.
6 Ie the amount specified in the Bank of England (Advance) Act 1816 s 3 (repealed).
7 The Treasury Solicitor was nominated as the transferee by the Bank of England (Transfer of Stock) Order 1946, SR & O 1946/238. As to the Treasury Solicitor see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 541.
8 Bank of England Act 1946 s 1(1)(a).
9 The exceptions are those parts of the charter of 1694 which incorporate the Bank of England, constitute its capital stock, and authorise it to have a common seal, to hold land and other property as mentioned, and to sue and be sued: see the Bank of England Charter (Cmd 6752) (1 March 1946) art 1.
10 See the Bank of England Charter (Cmd 6752) (1 March 1946).

794. Treasury control of the Bank of England. The Treasury may from time to time give such directions to the Bank of England as, after consultation with the Governor of the Bank, it thinks necessary in the public interest, except in relation to monetary policy[1]. Subject to any such directions, the affairs of the Bank are managed by the court of directors[2].

If it thinks it necessary in the public interest, the Bank may request information from and make recommendations to bankers and may, if so authorised by the Treasury, issue directions to any banker[3] for the purpose of securing that effect is given to any such request or recommendation[4]. Before authorising the issue of any such directions, the Treasury must give the banker concerned or such person as appears to the Treasury to represent him, an opportunity of making representations with respect to the proposed direction[5]. No request or recommendations may be made by the Bank with respect to the affairs of any particular customer of a banker[6].

1 Bank of England Act 1946 s 4(1) (amended by the Bank of England Act 1998 s 10). As to the Bank's relations with the Treasury in regard to the National Debt see the National Loans Act 1968 ss 12(7), 14(7) (s 12(7) amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1973; and the National Loans Act 1968 s 14(7) amended by SI 2002/2521; SI 2004/1662). As to the formulation of monetary policy see PARA 801. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

'From time to time' means 'as the occasion shall arise' or 'as and when it is appropriate so to do': see Holliday v Wakefield Corpn (1887) 57 LT 559 at 562–563 per Mathew J; Re Von Dembinska, ex p Debtor [1954] 2 All ER 46 at 48, [1954] 1 WLR 748 at 750–751, CA, per Evershed MR.

2 As to the court of directors see the Bank of England Act 1998 s 1, Sch 1; and PARA 795.

3 'Banker' means any such person carrying on a banking undertaking as may be declared by order of the Treasury to be a banker for the purposes of the Bank of England Act 1946 s 4: see s 4(6), (7).

4 Bank of England Act 1946 s 4(3).

5 Bank of England Act 1946 s 4(3) proviso (b).

6 Bank of England Act 1946 s 4(3) proviso (a).

795. The court of directors. The court of directors consists of a Governor, two Deputy Governors and 16 directors of the Bank of England, all of whom are appointed by Her Majesty[1].

Subject to Treasury directions[2], the court of directors manages the affairs of the Bank of England (other than the formulation of monetary policy, which is the responsibility of the Bank's Monetary Policy Committee)[3]. In particular, the functions of the court of directors include determining the Bank's objectives (including objectives for its financial management) and its strategy[4]. In so doing, the aim of the court of directors is to ensure the effective discharge of the Bank's functions; but, subject to that, in determining objectives for the financial management of the Bank, its aim is to ensure the most efficient use of the Bank's resources[5]. The court of directors must also keep the procedures followed by the Monetary Policy Committee under review[6]; and, in particular, it must determine whether the Committee has collected the regional, sectoral and other information necessary for the purposes of formulating monetary policy[7]. The court of directors has custody of the Bank's seal[8].

Certain functions of the court of directors are delegated to a sub-committee consisting of the directors of the Bank[9]. Those functions are:

(1) keeping under review the Bank's performance in relation to the objectives and strategy for the time being determined by the court of directors[10];

(2) monitoring the extent to which the objectives set by the court of directors in relation to the Bank's financial management have been met[11];

(3) keeping under review the internal financial controls of the Bank with a view to securing the proper conduct of its financial affairs[12];

(4) determining how the functions relating to remuneration and pensions of executive members of the court of directors[13] should be exercised[14]; and

(5) keeping under review the procedures followed by the Monetary Policy Committee[15].

Provision is made as to the proceedings of the sub-committee, including the declaration of interests, and the further delegation of its functions to two or more of its members[16].

The seal may only be affixed to an instrument if the affixation has been authorised by the court of directors or by a sub-committee of that court acting in exercise of delegated authority: s 5(2). The affixing of the seal must be attested by the signature of: (1) two members of the court of directors; (2) one member of the court of directors and the secretary to that court; or (3) two other officers of the Bank authorised by the court of directors for the purpose: s 5(3).

16 See the Bank of England Act 1998 s 3(3)–(7).

796. Issue and recall of notes. The Bank of England has the exclusive right of note issue in England and Wales[1]. The Bank may issue bank notes of such denominations as the Treasury may approve and no others[2]. Bank notes issued by the Bank may be put into circulation in Scotland and Northern Ireland as well as in England and Wales[3].

Unless expressly made payable also at some other place, bank notes are payable only at the head office of the Bank[4]. Bank notes may be called in on the Bank's giving one month's notice in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes, and on payment of their face value[5].

On demand by the holder, bank notes of any denominations must be exchanged for bank notes of such lower denominations, being bank notes which for the time being are legal tender in the United Kingdom[6] or in England and Wales, as may be specified by him[7].

The writing off of an amount from the total amount of bank notes issued from the issue department of the Bank of England does not affect the Bank's liability to pay any bank note included in the amount so written off[8].

1 See the Bank Charter Act 1844 s 11 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1891; and the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 Schedule). The amalgamation in 1921 of Messrs Fox, Fowler & Co of Wellington, Somerset, with Lloyds Bank Ltd marked the disappearance of the last private bank in England and Wales with note-issuing powers.

As to theft of notes etc see the Theft Act 1968 ss 1–7; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 282 et seq. As to counterfeiting of notes and related offences see the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 Pt II (ss 14–28); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 544 et seq.

2 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(1). 'Bank notes' means notes of the Bank of England payable to bearer on demand: s 3. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(1).

4 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(3).

5 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(5). Any such notes with respect to which a notice has been so given cease to be legal tender on the expiration of the notice: s 1(5). See further PARA 797.

6 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

7 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(4). The demand must be made during office hours at the head office of the Bank of England or, in the case of notes payable also at some place other than the head office, either at the head office or at that other place: s 1(4).

8 Currency Act 1983 s 3(4). See further PARA 798.

797. Notes as legal tender. All bank notes of denominations approved by the Treasury[1] which are issued by the Bank of England are legal tender in England and Wales, and all such notes of denominations of less than £5 are legal tender in Scotland and Northern Ireland[2]. Notes called in by the Bank cease to be legal tender on the expiration of the calling-in notice[3].

1 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 See the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(2), (6). See also Suffell v Bank of England (1882) 9 QBD 555 at 563, CA.

3 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(5). Currency notes issued under the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1914 (repealed) and not called in at 22 November 1928 were 'transferred currency notes' deemed to be bank notes (i e notes of the Bank of England), and the Bank of England was accordingly liable in respect of them: see the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 ss 4, 13(3). Transferred currency notes were called in pursuant to s 4(3) on 28 April 1933 and ceased to be legal tender on 1 August 1933.

798. Amount of issue and assets held in the issue department. The Bank of England may not cause the limit on the amount of the fiduciary note issue to be exceeded[1]; and for these purposes the limit is that specified in the Currency Act 1983 or such other amount as may from time to time be specified in a direction given by the Treasury[2], which may not be greater than the former limit by more than 25 per cent[3]. Such a direction must be given by a Treasury minute, a copy of which must be laid before each House of Parliament[4]. By order made by statutory instrument the Treasury may direct that the 25 per cent limitation is not to apply to any such direction which is given during a specified period not exceeding two years beginning with the day on which the order is made[5].

The Bank may write off from the total amount of notes issued from the issue department of the Bank the amount of any bank notes[6] which have not been presented for payment and which, by virtue of the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954[7], have ceased to be legal tender and have not been legal tender for ten years[8]. Any amount so written off must be deducted from the amount included in the next weekly account[9] as the amount of issued bank notes, and a return of the amount so written off must forthwith be sent to the Treasury, which must lay a copy of the return before each House of Parliament[10].

In addition to the gold coin and bullion for the time being in the issue department, the Bank of England must appropriate to and hold in the issue department securities[11] of an amount in value sufficient to cover the fiduciary note issue for the time being[12]. Such securities may include silver coin[13] to an amount not exceeding £5.5 million[14].

The Bank of England must give a weekly account, which must be periodically published, of the amount of notes issued and of the gold and silver bullion and securities in the issue department[15].

The assets held in the issue department must be valued, at market prices, at such times and in such manner as may be agreed between the Treasury and the Bank, but at least once in each financial year[16]; and if, as a result of such valuation, the value of the assets then held falls short of the total amount of the Bank of England notes then outstanding, the Treasury must assume a liability to the issue department of an amount equal to the difference[17]. The profits of the issue department must ordinarily be paid into the National Loans Fund[18]; but so long as any part of a liability assumed by the Treasury is outstanding, the profits must be applied towards meeting that liability, instead of being paid into the National Loans Fund[19].

1 Currency Act 1983 s 2(1).
2 Currency Act 1983 s 2(2). The limit specified in s 2(2) is £13,500 million, but the limit was increased to £16,500 million by a Treasury minute dated 17 December 1986. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

5 Currency Act 1983 s 2(6). A draft of any statutory instrument containing an order under s 2(6) must be laid before Parliament: s 2(7).
6 'Bank notes' means notes of the Bank of England payable to bearer on demand: Currency Act 1983 s 4(2).
7 Ie the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1954 s 1(5): see PARA 797.
8 Currency Act 1983 s 3(1), (2). No writing off of an amount under s 3 affects the liability of the bank to pay any bank note which was included in that amount: s 3(1), (4).

10 Currency Act 1983 s 3(1), (3). See also note 8.
11 For these purposes, 'securities' includes securities and assets in currency of any country and in whatever form held: Finance Act 1932 s 25(7) (amended by the Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 Schedule). Any liability assumed by the Treasury under the National Loans Act 1968 s 9(3) (see the text to note 17) is to be included among the assets held to cover the fiduciary note issue: s 9(4)(a).
12 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 s 3(1). The Bank must from time to time give to the Treasury such information as it may require with respect to the securities held in the issue department: s 3(3) (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1973).
13 References to 'silver coin' in the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 s 3(2) include references to: (1) coin of cupro-nickel; and (2) coin specified in a proclamation made under the Coinage Act 1971 s 3(1)(cc) (see PARA 1282), not being coin of gold, silver or cupro-nickel or coin of a denomination of less than five pence: s 12(1), (2), Sch 2 (s 12(2) amended by the Currency Act 1983 s 1(7); and the Coinage Act 1971 Sch 2 amended by the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 Schedule Pt II; and by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1989).

19 Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 s 6(1) (amended by the Currency Act 1983 s 3(6)); National Loans Act 1968 s 9(5).

799. Stamp duty. The notes of the Bank of England are exempt from all stamp duty, and the Bank is no longer liable to make any payment in consideration of this exemption[1].

1 Specific provisions exempting Bank of England notes from stamp duty, and relieving it from liability to make payment in consideration of the exemption, were made by the Bank Charter Act 1844 s 7, and by the Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 s 6(4), respectively. These enactments were repealed by the Finance Act 1972 Sch 28 Pt XI as they were no longer necessary in view of the repeal by that Act (see ss 126, 134, Sch 28 Pt XI) of the provisions of the Stamp Act 1891 relating to stamp duty on bank notes. As to stamp duty generally see STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX.

800. Defective title or material alteration. A holder with no title or a defective title cannot compel payment of a bank note by the Bank of England[1]; but any person taking such a note honestly and for value acquires a good independent title to it and may enforce payment[2].

Any material alteration in a bank note invalidates it, even in the hands of a holder in due course. An alteration of the number is a material alteration[3].

1 De la Chaumette v Bank of England (1829) 9 B & C 208. Cf Suffell v Bank of England (1882) 9 QBD 555 at 567, CA; Ransted v Bank of England (1900) 21 Journal of the Institute of Bankers vol xxi 157.
2 Raphael v Governor & Co of Bank of England (1855) 17 CB 161, where a person taking, for full value and without knowledge that the party from whom he took had no title, was held entitled to payment even though he might have had the means of acquiring knowledge. The inability of a person with no title or a defective title to recover is not really an exception to the proposition that bank notes are currency. Honest acquisition is a condition of right, even to coin.
3 Suffell v Bank of England (1882) 9 QBD 555, CA, which is not affected by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64(1) proviso (see Leeds & County Bank Ltd v Walker (1883) 11 QBD 84 at 90), and which was distinguished in the case of accidental destruction of the number on a note or bill in Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corpn v Lo Lee Shi [1928] AC 181, PC. See further PARA 1559. Any person who prints or stamps or by any like means impresses words, letters or figures on any bank note is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale for each offence: Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928 s 12 (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 31(6); and the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 37, 46). As to the standard scale see PARA 27 note 21.

801. Formulation of monetary policy by the Monetary Policy Committee. The objectives of the Bank of England in relation to monetary policy are to maintain price stability, and, subject to that, to support the economic policy of the government, including its objectives for growth and employment[1]. The Treasury may by notice in writing to the Bank specify what price stability is to be taken to consist of, or what the government's economic policy is to be taken to be[2].

The Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England has responsibility within the Bank for formulating monetary policy[3].

As soon as practicable after each meeting of the Committee, the Bank must publish a statement[4] as to whether it was decided at the meeting that the Bank should take any action, other than action by way of intervening in financial markets, for the purpose of meeting its objectives and, if so, what the action is[5]. If, at any meeting, the Committee decides that the Bank should intervene in financial markets, it must also consider at the meeting whether immediate publication of the decision would be likely to impede or frustrate the achievement of the intervention's purpose[6].

After each meeting of the Committee, the Bank must publish minutes of the meeting[7] before the end of the period of six weeks beginning with the day of the meeting[8]. However, this does not apply to minutes of any proceedings relating to a decision to intervene in financial markets, or a decision about the publication of a decision to intervene in financial markets, unless the Committee has decided that publication of the decision to intervene would not be likely, or would no longer be likely, to impede or frustrate the achievement of the intervention's purpose[9]. Minutes published must record, in relation to any decision of the Committee, the voting preference of the members who took part in the vote on the decision[10].

The procedures of the Committee are kept under review by the court of directors[11].

1 Bank of England Act 1998 s 11. The Treasury no longer has power to give directions to the Bank in relation to monetary policy, except in the circumstances set out in s 19: see PARA 803. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

2 Bank of England Act 1998 s 12(1). The Treasury must specify these matters at least once a year, and must publish the notice in such manner as it thinks fit and lay a copy of it before Parliament: s 12(2), (3).

As to the nationalising powers of the Treasury under the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 see PARA 791.

3 Bank of England Act 1998 ss 13(1), 20. The Committee consists of: (1) the Governor and Deputy Governors of the Bank (s 13(2)(a)); (2) two members appointed by the Governor of the Bank after consultation with the Chancellor of the Exchequer (s 13(2)(b)); and (3) four members appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer (s 13(2)(c)). Of the two members appointed under head (2) above, one must be a person who has executive responsibility within the Bank for monetary policy analysis, and the other must be a person who has executive responsibility within the Bank for monetary policy operations: s 13(3). The Chancellor of the Exchequer must only appoint a person under head (3) above if he is satisfied that the person has knowledge or experience which is likely to be relevant to the Committee's functions: s 13(4). As to members' terms of office, appointments to and qualification for membership, and meetings and proceedings of the Committee, see Sch 3 paras 1–13. Members of the Committee are disqualified for membership of the House of Commons: Sch 3 para 15. The Committee must submit a monthly report on its activities to the court of directors of the Bank: Sch 3 para 14. As to the Chancellor of the Exchequer see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 514. As to the court of directors see PARA 795.

4 The statement must be published in such manner as the Bank thinks fit: Bank of England Act 1998 s 14(6).

5 Bank of England Act 1998 s 14(1).

6 Bank of England Act 1998 s 14(2). If the Committee decides that immediate publication of a decision would not have that effect, the Bank must, when it publishes its statement, publish a statement as to what action by way of intervening in financial markets the Committee has decided the Bank should take: s 14(3). If it is decided that immediate publication of a decision would have that effect, the Committee must keep under consideration the question of whether publication of the decision would still have that effect: s 14(4). As soon as practicable after the Committee has decided that publication of such a decision would no longer have that effect, the Bank must publish a statement as to what action by way of intervening in financial markets the Committee decided the Bank should take and when the decision was made: s 14(5).

7 The minutes must be published in such manner as the Bank thinks fit: Bank of England Act 1998 s 15(5).

8 Bank of England Act 1998 s 15(1).

9 Bank of England Act 1998 s 15(2). Minutes of proceedings relating to a decision to intervene in financial markets, or a decision about the publication of a decision to intervene in financial markets, if not required to be published before the end of the period of six weeks beginning with the day of the meeting, must be published by the Bank before the end of the period of six weeks beginning with the day on which a statement about the decision to intervene is published under s 14(5) (see note 6): s 15(3).

11 See PARA 795. See also note 3.

802. Information and reports. The Bank of England may by notice[1] in writing require certain undertakings[2] to provide the Bank with such information as may be specified in the notice, being information about the relevant financial affairs[3] of the undertaking which the Bank considers it necessary or expedient to have for the purposes of its functions in relation to monetary policy[4]. A person who fails without reasonable excuse to comply with any such requirement imposed on him is guilty of an offence[5].

The Bank must prepare and publish reports containing: (1) a review of the monetary policy decisions published by the Bank in the period to which the report relates[6]; (2) an assessment of the developments in inflation in the economy of the United Kingdom in that period; and (3) an indication of the expected approach to meeting the Bank's objectives[7]. No such report may be published without the approval of the Monetary Policy Committee[8].

1 The notice may require information to be provided in specified form or manner, at a specified time or times, and in relation to a specified period or periods: Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(2).

2 This provision applies to an undertaking if:

(1) it has a place of business in the United Kingdom (Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(3)(a) (s 17(3) substituted, and s 17(3A)–(3D) added, by SI 2001/3649)); and

(2) it falls within heads (a) to (d) below (Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(3)(b) (as so substituted)):

(a) it is a deposit-taker (s 17(3A) (as so added));

(b) it is not a deposit-taker, but: (i) it falls within the subsector 'other monetary financial institution', as defined by EC Council Regulation 2223/96 on the European system of national and regional accounts in the Community (OJ L310, 30.11.96, p 1) Annex A PARA 2.48; (ii) it carries on a business of granting credits secured on land used for residential purposes; (iii) it has issued a debt security; or (iv) it has acted as an agent in connection with arranging or managing the issue of debt security (Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(3B) (as so added));

(c) it is a financial holding company (s 17(3C) (as so added));

(d) it is not a deposit-taker, but it continues to have a liability in respect of a deposit which was held by it in accordance with the Banking Act 1979 or the Banking Act 1987 or a permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40–55) (see PARA 348 et seq) (Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(3D) (as so added)).

'Undertaking' has the meaning given by the Companies Act 2006 s 1161(1) (see COMPANIES): Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(7D) (s 17(7A)–(7D) added by SI 2001/3649; Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(7D) amended by SI 2008/948)). 'Deposit taker' means: (A) a person who has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV to accept deposits; or (B) an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in Sch 3 para 5(b) or (c) which has permission under Sch 3 para 15 (as a result of qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 para 12(1)) to accept deposits or other repayable funds (see PARA 315): Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(7) (substituted by SI 2001/3649). 'Debt security' means any instrument creating or acknowledging indebtedness (including a government or public security): Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(7A) (as so added). The provisions of s 17(7) and s 17(7A) must be read with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22, any relevant order under s 22, and Sch 2 (see PARA 84 et seq): Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(7B) (as so added). 'Financial holding company' has the meaning given by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/48 (OJ L177, 30.6.2006, p 1) relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions art 4(19): Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(7C) (as so added; and amended by SI 2006/3321). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

The Treasury may by order amend the provisions of the Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(3) and s 17(3A)–(3D): s 17(5) (amended by SI 2001/3649). Before making such an order, the Treasury must consult the Bank, the Office for National Statistics, such persons as appear to be representative of persons likely to be materially affected by the order, and such other persons as it considers appropriate: Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(6). As to the Office for National Statistics see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 516, 528. Any power of the Treasury to make an order under the Bank of England Act 1998 is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 40(1). An order under s 17(4) (see note 3) or s 17(5) may not be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: s 40(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no order had been made under s 17(5). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 The Treasury may by order provide which financial affairs of an undertaking are relevant financial affairs, and may make different provision for different undertakings or classes of undertaking: Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(4). As to the making of orders under s 17 see note 2. As to the order that has been made under s 17(4) see the Bank of England (Information Powers) Order 1998, SI 1998/1270 (amended by SI 2001/3649).

4 Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(1). As to the formulation of monetary policy see PARA 801. As to restrictions on disclosure of such information see PARA 805.

5 Bank of England Act 1998 s 38(1). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale: s 38(1). As to the standard scale see PARA 27 note 21. If after conviction under s 38(1) a person continues the failure for which he was convicted, he is guilty of a further offence and liable on summary conviction to be punished accordingly: s 38(2). A person who, in purported compliance with a requirement imposed on him under s 17(1), provides information which he knows to be false or misleading in a material particular, or recklessly provides information which is false or misleading in a material particular, is guilty of an offence and liable: (1) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine, or to both; or (2) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or to both: s 38(3). As to the statutory maximum see PARA 56 note 24.

Where an offence committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of, or to be attributable to any neglect on the part of, any director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or any person who was purporting to act in any such capacity, he, as well as the body corporate, is guilty of that offence and is liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly: Bank of England Act 1998 s 39(1). Where the affairs of a body corporate are managed by its members, s 39(1) applies in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his functions of management as if he were a director of the body corporate: s 39(2).

6 Such a report must relate to a period of three months, or such other period as the Treasury and the Monetary Policy Committee may agree: Bank of England Act 1998 s 18(3). As to the Monetary Policy Committee see PARA 801. Periods to which such reports relate are successive, the first such period commencing on such day within the period of three months ending with 1 June 1998 as the Treasury, after consultation with the Bank, specifies in writing to it: s 18(4). A report must be published as soon as practicable after the end of the period to which it relates and in such manner as the Bank thinks fit: s 18(6).

7 Bank of England Act 1998 s 18(1), (2). As to the Bank's objectives see s 11; and PARA 801.

8 Bank of England Act 1998 s 18(5).

803. Reserve powers of the Treasury. After consultation with the Governor of the Bank of England[1], the Treasury[2] may by order give the Bank directions with respect to monetary policy if it is satisfied that the directions are required in the public interest and by extreme economic circumstances[3]. Such an order which does not cease to have effect before the end of the period of three months beginning with the day on which it is made ceases to have effect at the end of that period[4]. While such an order made by the Treasury has effect, it overrides the provisions relating to the objectives of the Bank in relation to monetary policy[5].

1 As to the Governor of the Bank of England see PARA 794.

2 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 Bank of England Act 1998 s 19(1). Such an order may include such consequential modifications of the Bank of England Act 1998 relating to the Monetary Policy Committee as the Treasury thinks fit: s 19(2). As to the Monetary Policy Committee see PARA 801. Any power of the Treasury to make an order under the Bank of England Act 1998 is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 40(1). A statutory instrument containing an order under s 19 must be laid before Parliament after being made: ss 19(3), 40(5). Unless an order under s 19 is approved by resolution of each House of Parliament before the end of the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which it is made, it ceases to have effect at the end of that period: s 19(4). In reckoning the period of 28 days for the purposes of s 19(4), no account is to be taken of any time during which Parliament is dissolved or prorogued or during which either House is adjourned for more than four days: s 19(5). At the date at which this volume states the law no order had been made under s 19.

4 Bank of England Act 1998 s 19(6).

5 Bank of England Act 1998 s 19(7). As to the provisions relating to the objectives of the Bank in relation to monetary policy see s 11; and PARA 801.

804. Cash ratio deposits. The Bank of England may give an eligible institution[1] a call notice[2]. A call notice must be in writing, and must specify the period to which it relates[3] and the amount which, in relation to that period, is the institution's depositable amount[4]. The depositable amount is the amount, or, as the case may be, the sum of the amounts, produced by multiplying so much of the institution's average liability base[5] for the reference period as falls into each value band by the ratio applicable to that band[6].

Where the Bank has given an eligible institution a call notice, then, if at any time in the period to which the notice relates the following conditions are met, namely: (1) the institution is an eligible institution; and (2) the institution does not have on deposit in the appropriate account[7] with the Bank the amount specified in the notice as its depositable amount in relation to that period, the Bank may by notice[8] in writing require the institution to make a payment in lieu of deposit[9].

The Bank may by notice[10] in writing require an eligible institution to provide such information as may be specified in the notice, being information which the Bank considers it necessary or expedient to have for the purposes of its functions in relation to cash ratio deposits[11].

The provisions described above are modified in relation to the first call notice issued to an institution after it becomes an eligible institution[12].

1 Each deposit-taker is an eligible institution for the purposes of the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2: Sch 2 para 1(1) (Sch 2 para 1(1) substituted, and Sch 2 para 1(1A)–(1C) added, by SI 2001/3649). 'Deposit-taker' has the meaning given in the Bank of England Act 1998 s 17 (see PARA 802), except that it does not include: (1) a credit union; (2) a friendly society; (3) a person who has permission to accept deposits under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40–55) only in the course of effecting or carrying out contracts of insurance in accordance with that permission (see PARA 989 et seq); or (4) an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 37, Sch 3 PARA 5(c) (see PARA 315): Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 1(1A) (as so added). 'Credit union' has the meaning given by the Credit Unions Act 1979 (see PARA 2402): Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 1(1B) (as so added). 'Friendly society' means: (a) a society which is registered within the meaning of the Friendly Societies Act 1974; or (b) a society incorporated under the Friendly Societies Act 1992 (see PARA 2082): Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 1(1C) (as so added).

The Treasury may by order amend Sch 2 para 1(1) and Sch 2 para 1(1A)–(1C) as it thinks fit: Sch 2 para 1(2) (amended by SI 2001/3649). Before making an order under the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2, the Treasury must consult: (i) the Bank; (ii) such persons as appear to it to be representative of persons likely to be materially affected by the order; and (iii) such other persons as it thinks fit: Sch 2 para 10. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. Any power of the Treasury to make an order under the Bank of England Act 1998 is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 40(1). An order under Sch 2 para 1(2) may not be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: s 40(2). At the date at which this volume states the law no order had been made under Sch 2 para 1(2).

2 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 3(1).

3 The period to be specified must be a period of six months beginning at least four working days after the date of the notice, and may not include any part of a period specified in a previous call notice given to the institution concerned: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 3(3).

4 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 3(2).

5 The liability base of an eligible institution at any time is the aggregate of those sterling and foreign currency liabilities of the institution which are eligible liabilities: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 2(1). The Treasury may by order define eligible liabilities and make provision about the calculation of any description of eligible liability, including provision for the amount of a liability of any description to be treated as reduced by the amount of an asset of any description: Sch 2 para 2(2). In exercising the power to make orders under the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 2(2), the Treasury must have regard to the financial needs of the Bank: Sch 2 para 11. As to the making of orders under the Bank of England Act 1998 see note 1. A statutory instrument containing an order under Sch 2 para 2(2) is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 40(3). As to the order that has been made see the Cash Ratio Deposits (Eligible Liabilities) Order 1998, SI 1998/1130 (amended by SI 2000/2952; SI 2004/1862; SI 2005/3203).

6 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 4(1). The Bank may use such method to calculate an institution's average liability base as it thinks fit, and may use different methods for different institutions: Sch 2 para 4(2). Value bands and the ratios applicable to them are such as may be specified by order made by the Treasury: Sch 2 paras 4(3), 5. As to the making of orders under the Bank of England Act 1998 see note 1. An order under Sch 2 para 5 may not be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: s 40(2). In exercising the power to make orders under Sch 2 para 5, the Treasury must have regard to the financial needs of the Bank: Sch 2 para 11. As to the order that has been made see the Cash Ratio Deposits (Value Bands and Ratios) Order 2004, SI 2004/1270.

7 The appropriate account, in relation to an eligible institution, is such account of the institution with the Bank as is designated by the Bank for the purpose: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 6(5).

8 The notice must specify what period it covers, and the period specified must: (1) fall within the period to which the call notice relates; and (2) be a period throughout which the conditions mentioned in heads (1) and (2) in the text have been met: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 6(2).

9 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 6(1). The amount which the Bank may require an institution to pay is an amount equal to interest for the period covered by the notice, at 4% over the benchmark rate, on the average shortfall during that period: Sch 2 para 6(3), (6).

As to the determination of the benchmark rate of interest see Sch 2 para 7, which may be amended by order under Sch 2 para 8. As to the making of orders under the Bank of England Act 1998 see note 1. A statutory instrument containing an order under Sch 2 para 8 is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 40(3). At the date at which this volume states the law no order had been made under Sch 2 para 8.

The Bank may use such method to calculate the average shortfall as it thinks fit: Sch 2 para 6(4).

10 Such a notice may require information to be provided: (1) in such form or manner as may be specified in the notice; (2) at such time or times as may be so specified; (3) in relation to such period or periods as may be so specified: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 9(2).

11 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 9(1). As to restrictions on disclosure of such information see PARA 805. Sections 38, 39 (offences in relation to the provision of information) apply to a requirement under Sch 2 para 9: see PARA 802 note 5.

12 See the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 2 para 13.

805. Restriction on disclosure of information. Restricted information obtained for monetary policy or cash ratio deposit purposes[1] may not be disclosed by the Bank of England or any officer or servant of the Bank, or by any person obtaining the information directly or indirectly from the Bank, without the consent of the person from whom the Bank obtained the information and, if different, the person to whom the information relates[2]. Any person who discloses information in contravention of this provision is guilty of an offence[3].

The disclosure of information is not precluded, however, in any case in which disclosure is for the purpose of enabling or assisting the Bank to discharge: (1) its functions as a monetary authority[4]; (2) its functions as a supervisor of systems for the transfer of funds between credit institutions[5] and their customers; or (3) its functions relating to cash ratio deposits[6]. The Bank may also disclose information to specified authorities if the Bank considers that the disclosure would enable or assist such an authority to discharge its functions[7]. The disclosure by any authority of information obtained by it in this way is not precluded if it is made with the consent[8] of the Bank, and for the purpose of enabling or assisting the authority to discharge its functions[9]. Disclosure of information is not prohibited if it is: (a) with a view to the institution of, or otherwise for the purposes of, any proceedings in connection with a payment in lieu of cash ratio deposit[10]; (b) with a view to the institution of, or otherwise for the purposes of, any criminal proceedings[11]; or (c) in pursuance of any Community obligation[12].

1 Information is restricted information for this purpose if: (1) it is obtained by the Bank of England by virtue of the power conferred by the Bank of England Act 1998 s 17(1) (see PARA 802) or Sch 2 para 9 (see PARA 804), whether or not it was obtained pursuant to a notice under that provision; and (2) it relates to the business or other affairs of any person: s 37, Sch 7 para 1(1). Information is not restricted information if: (a) it has been made available to the public from other sources; or (b) it is in the form of a summary or collection of information so framed as not to enable information relating to any particular person to be ascertained from it: Sch 7 para 1(2).

2 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 1(3).

3 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 1(4). A person guilty of such an offence is liable: (1) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine, or to both; or (2) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or to both: Sch 7 para 1(4). As to the statutory maximum see PARA 56 note 24.

4 See PARA 801.

5 'Credit institution' means an undertaking whose business is to receive deposits or other repayable funds from the public and to grant credits for its own account: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 2(2) (substituted by SI 2001/3649).

6 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 2(1). As to the Bank's functions relating to cash ratio deposits see PARA 804.

7 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 3(1). The specified authorities and functions are: (1) the Treasury, in relation to its functions under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (see PARA 2); (2) the Secretary of State, in relation to his functions under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (see PARAS 2, 3); (3) an inspector appointed under the Companies Act 1985 Pt XIV (ss 431–453C) or the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), Pt XV, in relation to his functions under those provisions (see COMPANIES vol 7(2) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1669 et seq); (4) a person authorised to exercise powers under the Companies Act 1985 s 447, the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6), art 440 or the Companies Act 1989 s 84, in relation to his functions under those provisions (see COMPANIES vol 7(2) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1679); (5) a person appointed to conduct an investigation under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 167, s 168(3), s 168(5) or s 284, in relation to his functions relating to that investigation (see PARAS 449, 683); (6) the Financial Services Authority, in relation to its functions under the legislation relating to friendly societies (see PARA 2081 et seq), the Building Societies Act 1986 (see PARA 1856 et seq), the Companies Act 1989 Pt VII (ss 154–191) (see PARA 509 et seq) or the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (see PARA 6 et seq); (7) the competent authority for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VI (ss 72–103), in relation to its functions under those provisions (see PARA 385); (8) the Office for National Statistics, in relation to its functions under the Statistics of Trade Act 1947 (see TRADE, INDUSTRY AND INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS vol 47 (2001 Reissue) PARA 951 et seq); (9) the Pensions Regulator in relation to its functions under the Pension Schemes Act 1993, the Pensions Act 1995, the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999, the Pensions Act 2004 or any corresponding Northern Ireland enactment (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 598 et seq): Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 3, Table (substituted by SI 2001/3649; and amended by the Pensions Act 2004 Sch 12 para 70). As from a day to be appointed, in head (8) above the reference to 'the Office for National Statistics' is replaced by a reference to 'the Chancellor of the Exchequer or any person to whom any functions of the Chancellor of the Exchequer under the Statistics of Trade Act 1947 are delegated': Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 3, Table (prospectively amended by the Statistics and Registration Service Act 2007 Sch 2 para 7). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the Financial Services Authority see PARAS 4, 6 et seq. As to the Office for National Statistics see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 516, 528. As to the Pensions Regulator see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 3.

The list of authorities and functions may be amended by order: see the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 3(2). The Treasury may by order restrict the circumstances in which, or impose conditions subject to which, disclosure is permitted in the case of any authority for the time being specified: Sch 7 para 3(3). Before making any order under Sch 7 para 3, the Treasury must consult the Bank: Sch 7 para 3(4). Any power of the Treasury to make an order under the Bank of England Act 1998 is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 40(1). An order under Sch 7 para 3(2) may not be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: s 40(2). A statutory instrument containing an order under Sch 7 para 3(3) is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 40(3). At the date at which this volume states the law, no order had been made under the Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 3.

8 Before deciding whether to give its consent to disclosure, the Bank must take account of such representations as the authority proposing to make the disclosure may make about the desirability of or necessity for the disclosure: Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 4(2).

9 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 4(1). The functions referred to in the text are any of its functions set out in Sch 7 para 3, Table: see note 7.

10 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 5(a). As to payments in lieu of cash ratio deposits see PARA 804.

11 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 5(b).

12 Bank of England Act 1998 Sch 7 para 5(c).

806. Annual report and accounts. As soon as practicable after the end of each of its financial years, the Bank of England must make to the Chancellor of the Exchequer[1] a report on its activities in that year[2]. The Bank must publish every report in such manner as it thinks appropriate[3], and the Chancellor of the Exchequer is required to lay copies of every report before Parliament[4].

The Bank has a duty to keep proper accounts and records in relation to the accounts[5]. It must prepare for each of its financial years a statement of accounts consisting of a balance sheet as at the last day of the year, and a profit and loss account[6]. The Bank must appoint an auditor or auditors to audit its accounts, including any statement of accounts[7]. As soon as practicable after receiving the report of its auditors on a statement, the Bank must send a copy of the report and the statement to the Chancellor of the Exchequer[8].

After consulting the Bank, the Treasury[9] may by notice in writing to the Bank require it to publish in such manner as it thinks fit such additional information relating to its accounts as the Treasury may specify in the notice[10].

1 As to the Chancellor of the Exchequer see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 514.

2 Bank of England Act 1998 s 4(1). The report must, in particular, contain: (1) a report by the directors of the Bank on the matters for which the sub-committee constituted by s 3 is responsible (see PARA 795); and (2) a copy of the statement for the year prepared under s 7(2) and the report of the Bank's auditors on it (see the text and notes 6–7): s 4(2). The report mentioned in head (1) above must, in particular, include a review of the Bank's performance in relation to its objectives and strategy, as determined by the court of directors of the Bank, in the financial year to which the report relates: s 4(3). A report must also contain: (a) a statement of the rate or rates at which directors of the Bank have been remunerated in the financial year to which the report relates; and (b) a statement of the Bank's objectives and strategy, as determined by the court of directors of the Bank, for the financial year in which the report is made: s 4(4). As to the court of directors see PARA 795.

3 Bank of England Act 1998 s 4(5).

4 Bank of England Act 1998 s 4(6).

5 Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(1).

6 Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(2). In preparing accounts under s 7(2), the Bank is subject to requirements corresponding to the relevant Companies Act requirements, except in so far as the accounts relate to the issue department: Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(3). The Bank may disregard a requirement to which it is subject under s 7(3) to the extent that it considers it appropriate to do so having regard to its functions: s 7(4). In s 7(3), the reference to 'the relevant Companies Act requirements' is a reference to the requirements to which the directors of a company which is a banking company for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 are for the time being subject under that Act (except ss 412, 413 (directors' benefits)) in relation to the preparation of accounts under s 394 (see COMPANIES): see the Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(9) (amended by SI 2008/948).

7 Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(5). As to auditors see further COMPANIES vol 7(2) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1328 et seq.

8 Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(6).

9 As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

10 Bank of England Act 1998 s 7(7), (8). This may include information which the Bank has excluded under s 7(4) from a statement under s 7(2) (see note 6): s 7(7).

807. Bank of England's other powers and duties. The Bank of England must keep registers of the holders of specified stocks[1] and bonds[2]. Gilts are registrable in the books of the Bank, following the closure to gilts of the National Savings Stock Register[3].

The Bank may lend any sums which the Treasury[4] has power to borrow[5] in connection with the National Debt[6].

The Bank of England no longer has statutory power to establish branches in any part of England[7].

The Bank's supervisory role in the regulation of banking business under the Banking Act 1987 has been removed and that role is now performed by the Financial Services Authority[8].

Apart from the monetary policy objective in the Bank of England Act 1998[9], the Bank now has no general statutory objectives[10] but it has two core purposes[11] of monetary stability and financial stability. Monetary stability relates to stable prices[12] and confidence in the currency and financial stability involves the detection and reduction of threats to the financial system as a whole[13]. The Bank in pursuit of both the core purposes communicates its views and works closely with others including the Treasury and the Authority[14] and other central banks[15] and international organisations to improve the international monetary system.

10 The Bank's functions as seen by the Treasury, the Authority and the Bank itself are described in the Memorandum of Understanding between them, issued in October 1997 and revised in March 2006.

11 Ie as determined by the court of directors in its role in setting the Bank's objectives and strategy: see PARA 795. These core purposes were reaffirmed by a statement in March 2007. See also note 13.

12 Stable prices relate back to the government's inflation target, which the Bank seeks to meet through decisions on interest rates taken by the Monetary Policy Committee: see PARA 120.

13 The Bank has responsibility for the stability of the financial system as a whole while the Authority supervises individual banks and other financial organisations. In this role the Bank has surveillance and market intelligence functions. Threats to the financial system as a whole are reduced by strengthening the infrastructure and various financial operations both nationally and internationally, including in exceptional circumstances by acting as the 'lender of last resort' to financial institutions in difficulty (eg in the Northern Rock plc crisis of 2007/2008 but see also PARA 791 note 28). This is part of the Bank's central banking functions and would be exercised to prevent loss of confidence spreading through the system as a whole: it is set out in the Memorandum of Understanding (see note 10). Related to this is the Bank's role in oversight of payment systems (payment and settlement systems being at the centre of the financial infrastructure), its main objective being to ensure that sufficient weight is given to risk reduction and management in their design and operation while taking into account the potential effect of risk mitigation measures on system efficiency. The Bank's principal focus is on the UK payment systems and its oversight activities and priorities are set out in an annual Payment Systems Oversight Report. The Bank also takes part in a joint Working Group of the European System of Central Banks (ESCB) (see note 15) and the Committee of European Securities Regulators (CESR) on standards for securities settlement systems.

As to the nationalising powers of the Treasury under the Banking (Special Provisions) Act 2008 generally see PARA 791.

14 See the Memorandum of Understanding; and note 10.

15 The Bank is a member of the European System of Central Banks (ESCB) which comprises the European Central Bank (ECB) and the national central banks of all 27 EU member states. See also PARA 1398 note 5. At the date at which this volume states the law, the website for the ECB and ESCB is www.ecb.int.

(ii) Banks Generally

808. Origin and constitution of banks. The development of joint stock banks began in 1826, when corporate bodies, or co-partnerships, unlimited in number, were authorised to carry on banking business, both deposit and issue, outside a radius of 65 miles from London[1]. In 1833, the carrying on of banking other than issue business within London and that radius by corporations, companies or partnerships, irrespective of the number of members, was recognised as permissible[2].

In 1837, powers were given to the Crown to grant charters of incorporation to trading companies, including banking companies[3], and provision was made for the renewal or extension of such charters[4].

A system of constituting banks of more than six persons by letters patent was instituted in 1844. Pre-existing banks under the legislation of 1826 and 1833 were given the option of coming under the new system by petitioning for letters patent, but, if in operation before 6 May 1844, were not compelled to do so[5]. The powers and privileges of banks formed within the 65-mile radius under the 1833 legislation were assimilated to those formed outside it under the legislation of 1826[6], except with regard to the right to issue notes[7].

In 1857, a limit of ten members was imposed on all unregistered partnerships carrying on the business[8] of banking[9], but partnerships of not more than ten were authorised to carry on banking business in all respects as any partnership of not more than six, before the passing of the Joint Stock Banking Companies

Act 1857, could then do[10]. At the same time all banks consisting of seven or more members formed under the 1844 legislation were compelled to register with unlimited liability[11]. Those of the earlier joint stock banks or companies which had merely availed themselves of the privileges of the 1844 scheme were not affected, nor were any of the banks existing prior to 1844 which had merely stood on their rights; any of such banks, however, if consisting of more than seven members, or any new coalition of more than seven persons, was entitled to register as a banking company with unlimited liability[12].

In 1858, banking companies, whether already registered or newly formed, were permitted to register with limited liability, save as to note issue, if any[13].

All banks formed or registered under the legislation of 1857 and 1858 were made subject to the company legislation of 1862[14], as if registered under it. This legislation, as subsequently amended and consolidated[15], governs their constitution and that of all banks incorporated since 1862 otherwise than by royal charter or special Act of Parliament. Banks came into the regime of the company legislation as limited or unlimited according to their previous constitution[16], but no existing or new bank could by registering with limited liability preclude the liability of its shareholders being unlimited with regard to note issue, if any[17]. In 1879 banking companies registered as unlimited were afforded the opportunity of registering as limited[18].

(iii) Savings Banks

A. TRUSTEE SAVINGS BANKS

809. Reorganisation of trustee savings banks. The Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 was passed[1] for the purpose of enabling the then existing TSB group[2] to be reorganised into the new TSB group[3]. The Act provided for the transfer and vesting[4] of property, rights, liabilities and obligations and for the transfer of the business of each of the existing banks to its successor[5]; and the transfer included customers' accounts and rights, liabilities and obligations under contracts which are not normally capable of being transferred or assigned[6].

The new TSB group was required to seek authority as necessary to take deposits; and its customers' accounts were governed by the normal relationship of banker and customer[7]. The Trustee Savings Banks Central Board was given additional powers to assist in the reorganisation[8]; and following the completion of that task, was wound up by the Treasury[9].

1 The Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 received the Royal Assent on 25 July 1985 and came into force on 25 September 1985: s 7(2). For a description of the legislative history of trustee savings banks from 1817 until their reorganisation in 1985 see Ross v Lord Advocate [1986] 3 All ER 79 at 84–93, [1986] 1 WLR 1077 at 1084–1095, HL, per Lord Templeman.

2 'Existing TSB group' means the following, taken as a whole:
   (1) the existing trustee savings banks certified under the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1969 or the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1981 (the 'existing banks');
   (2) the Trustee Savings Banks Central Board (the 'Central Board');
   (3) Trustee Savings Banks (Holdings) Limited (the 'existing holding company'); and
   (4) the existing subsidiaries of any of the existing banks, the Central Board or the existing holding company, and 'existing' with reference to any of those banks or companies means existing immediately before 21 July 1986 (see note 4) and, in the case of a bank, with a certification under the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1969 or the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1981 effective on 17 December 1984: Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 1(1)(a).

3 Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 1(5). 'New TSB group' means the following, taken as a whole: (1) the companies formed or to be formed with objects including that of assuming and conducting, after 21 July 1986 (see note 4), the respective businesses of the existing banks and eligible to succeed them; (2) the companies which, immediately before 21 July 1986, were subsidiaries of the existing banks, the Central Board or the existing holding company (see note 2); (3) the company formed or to be formed with objects including that of acting as the holding company for the companies falling within heads (1) and (2) above and which, immediately before 21 July 1986, was a subsidiary of the Central Board (the 'new holding company'): s 1(1)(b).

4 The vesting day under the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 was to be appointed by the Treasury by order made by statutory instrument after consulting the Central Board: s 1(4). In exercise of the power so conferred, the Treasury appointed 21 July 1986 as the vesting day: see the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 (Appointed Day) (No 3) Order 1986, SI 1986/1222, art 2. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

5 See the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 3, Sch 1 (s 3 amended by the Employment Rights Act 1996 Sch 1 para 27; and the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 Sch 1 amended by the Banking Act 1987 Sch 6 para 19, Sch 7 Pt I; the Building Societies Act 1986 s 120, Sch 19 Pt I; SI 2001/3649; and SI 2002/1501). At the date of the passing of the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985, the depositors had no proprietary interest in the surplus assets of the existing trustee savings banks and accordingly by s 3(3) such assets were transferred to the successor company: Ross v Lord Advocate [1986] 3 All ER 79, [1986] 1 WLR 1077, HL.

6 See the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 3(6).

7 See PARA 815 et seq. The TSB group was acquired by Lloyds Bank plc in 1994, and thus no longer exists as an independent entity.

8 See the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 2 (repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004).

9 See the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 2(4) (repealed: see note 8); and the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 (Appointed Day) (No 7) Order 1990, SI 1990/1982. As to the dissolution of the existing banks and the repeal of the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1981 see the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 4 (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004); the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 (Appointed Day) (No 2) Order 1986, SI 1986/1220; the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 (Appointed Day) (No 4) Order 1986, SI 1986/1223; and the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 (Appointed Day) (No 6) Order 1988, SI 1988/1168.

B. THE NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK

810. The National Savings Bank. The National Savings Bank (formerly known as the Post Office Savings Bank) exists for the receipt and repayment of deposits, and its business is carried on by the Director of Savings[1] who is appointed by the Treasury[2]. Regulations may be made by the Treasury for superintending, inspecting and regulating the manner in which accounts of depositors are kept and examined, and with respect to the making of deposits and the withdrawal of deposits and interest[3]. The National Savings Bank provided facilities for certified contractual savings schemes[4] and under the Savings Contracts Regulations 1969 savings contracts may be administered by the Director of Savings[5].

1 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 1. The Director of Savings may authorise another person, or that person's employees, to exercise certain of the Director's functions: see the Contracting Out (Functions Relating to National Savings) Order 1998, SI 1998/1449.

2 National Debt Act 1972 s 1(1). Unless required by any Act to be borne in some other manner, any expenses of the Director of Savings must be defrayed out of money provided by Parliament: s 1(2). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 e seq.

3 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 2(1). Regulations may also be made as to particular matters: see s 8 (amended by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 2 para 1, Sch 20 para 1; and the Finance Act 2003 s 208). Regulations may restrict the classes of persons who may open accounts with the National Savings Bank, but any such restriction does not apply to any account opened before the coming into force of the regulations imposing the restriction: National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 2(1A) (added by the Finance Act 1989 s 184(1)). As to the regulations in force at the date at which this volume states the law see the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764 (amended by SI 1974/553; SI 1978/888; SI 1981/484; SI 1982/1282; SI 1982/1762; SI 1983/1750; SI 1984/9; SI 1984/602; SI 1986/2001; SI 1988/1166; SI 1988/2144; SI 1989/25; SI 1989/2045; SI 1991/72; SI 1992/2892; SI 1996/801; SI 1996/1724; SI 1998/1446; SI 1999/588; SI 1999/1611; SI 2001/858; SI 2003/2895; SI 2004/1662; SI 2006/1066; SI 2007/1265; SI 2008/734). As to the disapplication of particular regulations in relation to certain accounts see the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 2A (added by SI 2003/2895; and amended by SI 2008/734). Any provision which may be made in relation to investment deposits by regulations under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 2 may, in the case of deposits in investment accounts of any description first made available after the passing of the Finance Act 2003, be included instead in the terms and conditions of the accounts, although any such provision has effect subject to regulations under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 2 and orders under s 4 (see PARA 812): s 9A(1), (2) (s 9A added by the Finance Act 2003 s 208). For these purposes, 'terms and conditions' means terms and conditions set by the Treasury and published by the Director of Savings in a manner approved by the Treasury: National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 9A(3) (as so added). As to investment deposits see PARA 812.

Any power to make regulations, orders or warrants under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 26(1). A statutory instrument containing regulations under s 2, or an order under s 4 (see PARA 812), is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 26(2) (substituted by the Finance Act 2000 s 152(2)). As to the procedure for statutory instruments made under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 11 (see PARA 811 note 1) see s 26(4).

4 See the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 326(1), (2) (repealed); and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1192.

5 See the Savings Contracts Regulations 1969, SI 1969/1342 (amended by SI 1977/1456; SI 1984/599; SI 1986/2001; SI 1988/1358; SI 1991/76; SI 1992/3112; SI 1997/1858; SI 2005/2114).

811. Kinds of deposit. A deposit with the National Savings Bank may be made either as an ordinary deposit or as an investment deposit[1]. Treasury regulations[2] may make different provision with respect to ordinary deposits, investment deposits and investment deposits of different descriptions, and may prevent the making of an investment deposit or an investment deposit of a particular description unless the person who will be the depositor in respect of the investment deposit is also a depositor in respect of ordinary deposits and the sum due to him in respect of those deposits is not less than such amount as may be specified in the regulations[3].

An ordinary deposit of less than £10, and an investment deposit of less than £20, may only be made at the principal office of the National Savings Bank unless the Director of Savings, in any case in which he thinks fit, accepts any such deposit made at any other savings bank office[4]. Where an account is opened, a deposit book must be issued to the depositor in which deposits are to be duly entered[5]. Where investment deposits are to be made by or on behalf of a depositor, a separate account must be opened and a separate deposit book must be issued in respect of those deposits[6].

1 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 3(1). This is subject to any provision made in relation to ordinary accounts or ordinary deposits by regulations under s 2 (see PARA 810) made by virtue of s 8(3) (see PARA 810): s 3(1A) (added by the Finance Act 2003 s 208). As to the making of regulations see PARA 810 note 3. As to the management of ordinary deposits see PARA 813; and as to investment deposits see PARA 812.

2 Ie regulations made by the Treasury under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 2: see PARA 810. As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

3 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 3(2) (amended by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 2).

4 See the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 8(1)(e); and the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, regs 20, 28(5) (both substituted by SI 1988/2144; and amended by SI 1992/2892).

5 See the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, regs 16, 19. The Treasury's power to make regulations under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 2 (see PARA 810) includes power to make regulations for the giving of statements of accounts or the issuing of depositors' books and for prescribing the entries to be made in such books: s 8(1)(b) (substituted by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 1). Except in such cases as the Director of Savings may direct, every person who may properly sign an application to withdraw deposits must sign his name in the space provided in the book: National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 16(2). No charge may be made for a deposit book, which is the property of the Director of Savings and must be delivered up as and when required by him: reg 16(3), (4). Every depositor must, at such times as the Director of Savings may direct and whenever required, forward to the Director of Savings the deposit book relating to any account in his name: reg 17. On the application of a depositor, the Director of Savings may, if he thinks fit, issue a new deposit book to replace a lost one; and if in his opinion any deposit book has been tampered with or is in such a condition as to render the issue of a new book desirable, he may, if he thinks fit, require the surrender and cancellation of the book and issue a new book to the depositor: reg 18(1), (2). Notwithstanding anything in the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, the Director of Savings may pay any sum in respect of any amount in the National Savings Bank without the production of the deposit book where he is satisfied that the depositor or other claimant is entitled to receive that sum: reg 18(3).

6 National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 28(1).

812. Investment deposits. Investment deposits[1] are received on such terms as to notice of withdrawal[2] and interest[3] (other than terms as to rate of interest) as the Treasury may from time to time prescribe, and in respect of interest different terms may be prescribed in relation to different descriptions of investment deposits[4]. The Treasury may by order prescribe an amount as the minimum balance for investment accounts and may provide for converting into a different description of investment account any account into which investment deposits of any description are made if the balance of that account falls below the minimum balance so prescribed for an account of that description[5].

The maximum amount which any person may have in an investment deposit account (except for the credit of a treasurer's account or an individual savings account) or in one or more such accounts, whether solely or jointly with any other person, is £100,000[6]. The maximum amount that may be credited to a treasurer's account is £2,000,000[7]. The maximum deposit for crediting to an individual savings account is £3,600 in any year beginning on 6 April[8]. Interest on investment deposits is payable at such rates as the Treasury may from time to time determine, and different rates may be so determined in relation to different descriptions of investment deposits and different periods of notice of withdrawal[9].

All sums received by the Director of Savings as investment deposits with the National Savings Bank must from time to time be paid by him into the National Loans Fund in accordance with directions given by the Treasury; and the sums required for repaying, or paying interest on, investment deposits with the National Savings Bank are to be charged on that Fund with recourse to the Consolidated Fund[10]. However, there may be retained by the Director of Savings out of the sums so received by him such amounts as may be required by him as a working balance; and there must be paid to him from time to time out of the National Loans Fund or, as the case may be, the Consolidated Fund, the sums required for repaying, or paying interest on, investment deposits or for increasing his working balance[11].

1 As to the different kinds of deposit see PARA 811.

2 Except where the Director of Savings otherwise directs, money deposited in a treasurer's account by way of investment deposit, or any interest thereon, may not be withdrawn or transferred, except to an investment deposit account, unless the relevant prior notice of withdrawal or transfer in the approved form has been given to the Director of Savings: National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 7(2) (substituted by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 6(b)); National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 29(1) (reg 29 substituted by SI 1996/801; and the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 29(1) amended by SI 1996/1724 and SI 2006/1066). The relevant prior notice is 30 days: National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 29(1A) (reg 29 as so substituted; and reg 29(1A) added by SI 1996/1724 and amended by SI 2006/1066). Withdrawals and transfers from accounts other than a treasurer's account are governed by comparable provisions contained in the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 28A (added by SI 2006/1066).

3 'Interest', in relation to investment deposits, includes any bonus or other payment, whether payable annually or otherwise, which constitutes income derived from the whole or any part of the deposits: National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 27 (definition added by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 8). As to the calculation of interest see the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 42 (amended by SI 1983/1750; SI 1996/1724; SI 1999/588; SI 1999/1611).

As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq.

5 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 4(1A) (added by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 3(1)). As to the making of orders under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 see PARA 810 note 3.

6 See the National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 3 (amended by SI 1993/1239; SI 1996/1854; SI 1999/1056). See note 8. The National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 3 does not apply to an investment account of any description for which terms and conditions have been set pursuant to the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 9A(1) (see PARA 810 note 3): National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 3ZA (added by SI 2003/2895).

7 National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 3A (added by SI 1996/1854). See note 8. As to treasurer's accounts see the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, regs 29A–29K (all added by SI 1996/1724; and the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 29H amended by SI 2006/1066; and the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 29K amended by SI 1999/588).

Notwithstanding the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, regs 21, 29, 29A, 29B(3), 29F–29H, 29K (see also PARA 823): (1) a treasurer's account may not be opened after 10 May 2007; (2) no deposit may be made to the credit of a treasurer's account after 10 August 2007; and (3) any withdrawal from a treasurer's account after 10 August 2007 must be a withdrawal of the balance standing to the credit of the account at the date of withdrawal and any accrued interest that has not been credited to the account: reg 2C (regs 2C, 2D added by SI 2007/1265). If a valid application to withdraw the whole amount referred to in the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 2C(c) (see head (3) above) from a treasurer's account has not been made before 10 November 2007, the Director of Savings may transfer the balance standing to the credit of that account and any accrued interest that has not been credited to that account to a special Director's account: reg 2D (as so added).

8 National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 3B (added by SI 1999/1056; and amended by SI 2001/858; SI 2008/734). As to individual savings accounts see the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, regs 29L–29R (all added by SI 1999/588; and the National Savings Bank Regulations 1972, SI 1972/764, reg 29L amended by SI 1999/1611; SI 2001/858; SI 2005/2114).

Nothing in the National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 3, art 3A or art 3B operates to prevent: (1) the receipt or crediting of any amount allowed by the National Savings Bank to a depositor by way of interest in respect of his investment deposit account; (2) the receipt or crediting of any amount transferred from the investment deposit account of another depositor in the National Savings Bank who has died; (3) the crediting of any amount by the Director of Savings under the National Savings Stock Register Regulations 1976, SI 1976/2012, reg 45 (see PARA 814) or paid under the National Savings Stock Register (Closure of Register to Gilts) Order 1998, SI 1998/1446, art 21 (see PARA 1347); (4) the receipt or crediting of any amount received or credited in contravention of art 21 from being treated as having been lawfully received or credited for such period as the Director of Savings, in his discretion, thinks appropriate provided that at the time the amount was received or credited the Director was unaware of the contravention and provided also that the Director considers it just and reasonable that the amount should be so treated; (5) the receipt of any amount for, or the crediting of any amount to, any account of the Accountant General of the Supreme Court of Judicature of Northern Ireland; or (6) the receipt or crediting of any amount to an individual savings account of a sum transferred by an account manager pursuant to the Individual Savings Account Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1870: see the National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 4(1) (substituted by SI 1981/108; and amended by SI 1987/329; SI 1988/1030; SI 1998/1446; SI 1999/2060; SI 2000/1421). A trustee is treated separately in his personal capacity and in his capacity as trustee and separately in respect of each trust fund: see the National Savings Bank (Investment Deposits) (Limits) Order 1977, SI 1977/1210, art 4(2), (3).

9 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 6(2) (amended by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 5(2); and the Finance Act 2003 s 208). The Treasury may determine that the rate is to be produced by the operation of a formula: see the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 6(2ZA) (added by the Finance Act 2003 s 208). Without prejudice to the generality of the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 6(2), the Treasury may determine, in relation to an account into which investment deposits of any description are made, different rates of interest by reference to one or more of the following factors, namely: (1) the balance of that account at any time or over any period or the aggregate balance of that account and the depositor's other accounts of the same description, or the depositor's other investment accounts of any description, at any time or over any period; and (2) the number of withdrawals from that account over any period or the number of withdrawals from that account and the depositor's other accounts of the same description, or the depositor's other investment accounts of any description, over any period: s 6(2A) (added by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 5(3)).

The Director of Savings must give notice in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes of any alteration in a rate of interest payable on investment deposits or investment deposits of a particular description (other than one occasioned by the operation of a formula); and any such alteration may affect deposits received at or before, as well as after, the time the alteration is made: National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 6(3) (amended by the Finance Act 1982 Sch 20 para 5(4); and the Finance Act 2003 s 208).

10 Finance Act 1980 s 120(1). As to the National Loans Fund and the Consolidated Fund see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 711 et seq, 727 et seq; PARLIAMENT vol 34 (Reissue) PARAS 952–955.

11 Finance Act 1980 s 120(2). The amounts to be retained by or paid to the Director of Savings must be determined by agreement between him and the Treasury: s 120(3). The expenses of the Director of Savings in connection with investment deposits are to be defrayed out of moneys provided by Parliament: s 120(6).

813. Management of ordinary deposits. The balance of ordinary deposits received in excess of the amount required to meet withdrawals must be paid over to, and invested by, the National Debt Commissioners, after deducting expenses incurred by them and by the Director of Savings[1]. The Director of Savings and the National Debt Commissioners must prepare annual statements with respect to matters relating to ordinary deposits and expenses[2]. If in any period the aggregate of the sums accrued by way of interest on the investment of surplus deposits[3], after deduction of any sum required by the Treasury to be set aside to provide for depreciation in the value of the investments so made, exceeds the aggregate of:

(1) the aggregate of the sums paid or credited during that period by way of interest on ordinary deposits; and then the excess must be paid into the Consolidated Fund[4]. If in any period the aggregate of the sums that so accrued, after deduction of any sum required to be so set aside, falls short of the second-mentioned aggregate, the deficiency must be made good out of that Fund[5].

(2) the amount of the expenses incurred during that period in connection with ordinary deposits,

1 See the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 17(1)–(3). As to the National Debt Commissioners see PARA 1332. As to securities in which ordinary deposits may be invested see s 18 (amended by the Finance Act 1999 s 134(7)). As to sums to be included in the expenses of the Director of Savings and the National Debt Commissioners see the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 24(1), (2) (s 24(1) amended by the Superannuation Act 1972 Sch 6 para 83). As to limits on the amount of ordinary deposits, and the rate of interest payable on them, see the National Savings Bank Act 1971 ss 4, 5; and PARA 814.

2 See the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 19 (amended by the Finance Act 1998 s 162).

3 Ie under the National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 17: see the text to note 1.

4 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 20 (amended by the Finance Act 1998 s 162). If at any time claims in respect of ordinary deposits cannot be met, the Treasury must provide the Director of Savings with such sum out of the Consolidated Fund as is necessary to meet them: National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 25 (amended by the Finance Act 1980 Sch 20 Pt XV). As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. As to the Consolidated Fund see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 711 et seq; PARLIAMENT vol 34 (Reissue) PARAS 952–955.

5 National Savings Bank Act 1971 s 20 (as amended: see note 4).

814. Regulation of deposit and withdrawal. Regulations for the conduct of business by the National Savings Bank are made by the Treasury[1]. The Treasury may by order limit the amount which may be received by way of deposit in the National Savings Bank from any person whatsoever either in one year or in the aggregate; and the limit which a person may have in an ordinary deposit account or accounts, whether solely or jointly with any other person, is £10,000, exclusive of money deposited or credited for specified purposes[2]. The Director of Savings may, with the consent of the Treasury, from time to time determine the rate or rates at which interest is to be payable on amounts deposited in ordinary accounts or determine that no interest is to be payable on such amounts[3].

Deposits may be made by and in the name of any person who has attained the age of seven years and who is not under any legal disability, otherwise than by reason of his age[4]. Deposits may also be made on behalf of and in the name of a minor under the age of seven years, and of a person who lacks capacity[5]. Trust accounts may be opened[6].

A depositor may apply to transfer deposits standing in his name into the name of any other depositor or into an account to be opened in the name of any person entitled to make deposits in the National Savings Bank; and, if the Director of Savings is satisfied as to the applicant's title, the death of the applicant before the transfer is effected will not, in the absence of notice, determine his authority for the transfer to be made[7].

Withdrawals may be made by a depositor[8] on written application in the approved form, payments being made by warrant unless otherwise directed by the Director of Savings[9].

Where the total amount due to a depositor at the date of his death does not exceed £5,000, the Director of Savings may dispense with probate or letters of administration and pay the amount due, or any part of it, to a person who has a beneficial interest in the deceased's estate or falls within certain other specified categories[10]. Where, on the death of a depositor, the aggregate value of specified assets[11] exceeds £50,000, the Director of Savings must, before making any payment or transfer of any of the deposits standing to the credit of the depositor either alone or jointly, require the production of a statement from the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs with regard to payment of inheritance tax[12].

Before 1 May 1981, a depositor, being a person who had attained the age of 16 years, could nominate any person to receive any sum due to the depositor at his death in respect of deposits; but a nomination made after 30 April 1981 is of no effect[13].

At the request of the depositor, investments may be made out of the deposit in government stock[14].

Restrictions are imposed on the disclosure of depositors' names and of amounts deposited or withdrawn[15].

Where a first or any other deposit is made or received in error, the Director of Savings may return the same and cancel all proceedings taken in respect of it, or may take such other steps as may be necessary to give effect to the intention of the parties[16].

(3) BUSINESS OF BANKING

(i) Relation of Banker and Customer

815. Meanings of 'bank' and 'banker'. It is the existence of enactments, instruments, agreements, rules, usages and practices which apply to a person by virtue of his being a bank or banker that makes relevant the meanings of the terms 'bank' and 'banker'[1].

The principal enactments which apply to a person by virtue of his being a bank or banker are the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 and the Cheques Act 1957[2]. Both statutes refer exclusively to 'banker'[3] rather than 'bank'[4].

The characteristics usually found in bankers are: (1) that they accept money from, and collect cheques for, their customers and place them to their credit; (2) that they honour cheques or orders drawn on them by their customers when presented for payment and debit their customers accordingly; and (3) that they keep current accounts in their books in which the credits and debits are entered[5]. This statement of the essentials of banking business is not, however, exhaustive of all that is ordinary in such business; transactions which lack the above characteristics may nevertheless be usual banking transactions[6].

The judicial recognition of the banker's lien[7] implies the inclusion in banking business of the making of advances or the granting of overdrafts to customers.

1 See United Dominions Trust Ltd v Kirkwood [1966] 2 QB 431 at 445, [1966] 1 All ER 968 at 974, CA, where Lord Denning MR collected together the statutory privileges then enjoyed by bankers.

2 See PARA 819 et seq. For examples of other statutes which define 'bank' or 'banker' see: (1) the Bank Charter Act 1844 (which provides that the term 'banker' is to extend and apply to all corporations, societies, partnerships, and persons, and every individual person, carrying on the business of banking, whether by the issue of notes or otherwise, except only the Bank of England: see s 28 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1891; and the Statute Law Revision (No 2) Act 1893)); (2) the Agricultural Credits Act 1928 (which provides that 'Bank' means the Bank of England, a person who has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40–55) (see PARA 348 et seq) to accept deposits, or an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in Sch 3 para 5(b) which has permission under Sch 3 para 15 (as a result of qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 para 12(1)) to accept deposits or other repayable funds from the public (see PARA 315): see the Agricultural Credits Act 1928 s 5(7) (definition substituted by SI 2001/3649). As to the meaning of 'banking business' see Koh Kim Chai v Asia Commercial Banking Corpn Ltd [1984] 1 WLR 850, PC.

3 In the Bills of Exchange Act 1882, 'banker', unless the context otherwise requires, includes a body of persons whether incorporated or not who carry on the business of banking: s 2. The Cheques Act 1957 contains no definition of 'banker' but is to be construed as one with the Bills of Exchange Act 1882: Cheques Act 1957 s 6(1).

4 See eg the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 60, 73, 74, 79, 80; and the Cheques Act 1957 ss 1–4. As to these provisions see PARAS 1405, 1411, 1519, 1552, 1575.

5 United Dominions Trust Ltd v Kirkwood [1966] 2 QB 431 at 447, [1966] 1 All ER 968 at 975, CA, per Lord Denning MR, where the main question was whether the plaintiff finance house was excluded from the statutory definition of 'moneylenders' by virtue of an exception for 'any person bona fide carrying on the business of banking' (see the Moneylenders Act 1900 s 6(d) (repealed)). See further Re Roe's Legal Charge, Park Street Securities Ltd v Roe [1982] 2 Lloyd's Rep 370, CA.

6 Royal Bank of Canada v IRC [1972] Ch 665 at 679, [1972] 1 All ER 225 at 235 per Megarry J. Numerous other transactions are undertaken at the present day by banks. These include the payment, discounting and collection of bills; money transfers; the issue of letters of credit and performance bonds; the operation of credit and cash card systems; the issue of certificates of deposit and other commercial paper; the custody of valuables; and the issue of travellers' cheques. See PARA 832 et seq.

7 Brandao v Barnett (1846) 3 CB 519, HL. See PARA 860 et seq.

816. Meaning of 'customer'. A customer is someone who has an account with a bank or who is in such relationship with the bank that the relationship of banker and customer exists, even though at this stage he has no account[1]. An occasional or even regular encashment of a cheque is not sufficient to establish the relationship of banker and customer[2]. At the same time, the duration of the relationship is not of the essence[3]. It is usual for banks to make inquiries as to prospective customers to ensure that they are suitable persons with whom to enter into relations; and failure to do so may be a factor in a subsequent claim against the bank for conversion of a cheque collected for the customer's account[4]. The inquiries the bank should make depend upon current banking practice related to the particular circumstances of the case[5].

817. Relation of banker and customer. The receipt of money[1] by a banker from or on account of his customer constitutes him the debtor of the customer[2]. The banker is normally liable to repay only the person from whom he received the money[3]. The bank borrows the money and undertakes to repay it or any part of it[4] at the branch of the bank where the account is kept[5], during banking hours, and upon payment being demanded[6]. Moreover, the bank undertakes to pay any part of the amount due against the written orders of the customer[7], the relationship here being one of agent and principal, a cheque being the principal's order to his agent to pay the amount of the cheque to the payee[8]. The customer, on his part, undertakes to exercise reasonable care in executing his written orders so as not to mislead the bank or facilitate forgery and, if he becomes aware that forged cheques are being presented, to inform the bank[9]. The contract between banker and customer cannot be unilaterally varied[10], though there may be terms implied into the contract[11].

The banker is not a trustee for the customer[12], who has no right to inquire into, or question the use of, the money by the banker[13]; but the position is otherwise if the banker assumes the office of trustee[14]. Moreover, a banker is affected by the existence of a trust where an account is opened by a customer acting in the capacity of trustee[15], or where the banker is on notice that a payment into or out of the account is in breach of trust[16], or where money is paid to a banker for a particular purpose in circumstances such as to impress the payment with a trust[17].

The receipt of money on deposit account constitutes the banker a debtor to the depositor[18] but not a trustee of the money for him[19]. No new contract is created every time there is a fresh deposit: the account is a continuing one[20]. The debt is repayable either on demand or on conditions agreed with the depositor. Specified notice may be stipulated for, and the return of the deposit book (or receipt) made a condition of repayment, or the deposit may be for a fixed period. If the return of the deposit book is a condition precedent, no actual debt arises until its return[21]. In case of the loss of the book, however, a court would exercise its equitable jurisdiction, and not allow the absence of the receipt to stand in the way of the depositor reclaiming his money[22]. Nor would the court require the depositor to give an indemnity, the deposit book or receipt not being a negotiable instrument[23]. However, for the purpose of satisfying High Court or county court judgments for the payment of money, a sum standing to a person's credit in a deposit account in a bank is deemed to be a sum due or accruing due to that person, and is attachable accordingly[24].

The receipt of rent by a banker into a customer's account does not make the banker the agent of the owner for the purposes of the Public Health Act 1936[25].

The banker owes his customer a contractual duty of secrecy[26]. The relation of banker and customer may also give rise to a contractual or tortious duty of care or a fiduciary duty where the banker gives his customer advice[27]; but where the parties are in a contractual relationship, it is not to the advantage of the law's development to search for liability in tort, particularly in a commercial relationship[28].

The relation of banker and customer is not one which ordinarily gives rise to a presumption of undue influence; in the ordinary course of banking business a banker can explain the nature of a proposed transaction without laying himself open to a charge of undue influence[29].

The banker has at law a right of lien[30] and a right to combine accounts[31].

It is unlawful for any person concerned with the provision of banking services and facilities to the public or a section of the public to discriminate against a disabled person in refusing to provide, or deliberately not providing, those services or facilities, or in the standards or terms of those services or facilities[32]. It is also unlawful to discriminate on the grounds of sex, race, colour, ethnic or national origins, religion or belief or sexual orientation[33].

14 In general a bank acting as trustee is under like duties to those of any other trustee. Where a trustee, such as a bank trust corporation, holds itself out as having the skill and expertise to carry on the specialised business of trust management, the duty of care of such a trustee is higher than the standard of care of the ordinary prudent man of business (as demanded of a trustee without specialised knowledge): see Bartlett v Barclays Bank Trust Co Ltd [1980] Ch 515, [1980] 1 All ER 139; Bartlett v Barclays Bank Trust Co Ltd (No 2) [1980] Ch 515, [1980] 2 All ER 92. Where a trust corporation fills the double capacity of trustee and banker, its successors in the trust are in no worse position as regards the obtaining of information with respect to the trust bank account than they would have been in if a third party had been the banker, although such a case may justify the drawing of a line between mere banking books or documents, and trust books or documents: see Tiger v Barclays Bank Ltd [1952] 1 All ER 85 at 88, CA, per Jenkins LJ. If the bank is a trustee and places trust money on deposit with itself, the terms of the charging clause in the trust instrument may be such as to exclude the bank from having to account to the beneficiaries for profit from employing the trust money in its business: see Re Waterman's Will Trusts, Lloyds Bank Ltd v Sutton [1952] 2 All ER 1054. 818. Customers opening accounts. Anyone may be a customer of a bank[1]. An account may be opened by a married woman[2], a minor[3], a trustee, an executor, a local authority, an unincorporated body or a company or corporation formed under the Companies Acts, royal charter or otherwise[4]. None of these customers except the minor is under any contractual disability in this connection[5]. Accounts may be opened for special purposes, as, for instance, in the case of 'wages' accounts intended to preserve a binding banker's priority in a winding up of the company[6].

819. Married women. A current account may be opened with a married woman in her own name. Opening it constitutes a binding contract with the married woman who contracts as a feme sole[1]. She has power to draw cheques and give a sufficient discharge[2]; and bona fide dealings with the account cannot subsequently be questioned to the prejudice of the banker[3].

1 See the Law Reform (Married Women and Tortfeasors) Act 1935 ss 1, 2; the Married Women (Restraint upon Anticipation) Act 1949 s 1(1), (2); and MATRIMONIAL LAW vol 29(3) (Reissue) PARA 161.

820. Minors. A minor is a person who has not reached the age of 18 years[1]. A current account may be opened with a minor so long as it is not allowed to be overdrawn; for a minor may be a creditor[2]. The recoverability of money lent to a minor by way of overdraft is governed by the rules of common law[3]. A bill drawn or indorsed by a minor entitles the holder to receive payment, and to enforce it against any other party to it[4]. A minor cannot reclaim money paid out to him or to others on his cheques[5]. In the case of joint deposit accounts in the name of an adult and a minor, the contract depends upon the terms on which the deposit is made[6].

Where a guarantee is given in respect of an obligation of a party to a contract made on or after 9 June 1987[7] and the obligation is unenforceable against him, or he repudiates the contract, because he was a minor when the contract was made, the guarantee is not for that reason alone unenforceable against the guarantor[8].

2 Cf Nottingham Permanent Benefit Building Society v Thurstan [1903] AC 6, HL; and see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARAS 23, 42. 49.
3 The Infants Relief Act 1874 s 1, which rendered 'absolutely void' all contracts entered into by infants for the repayment of money lent or to be lent, was repealed by the Minors' Contracts Act 1987 ss 1(a), 4(2), 5(2) as regards contracts made on or after 9 June 1987. As to the rules of common law see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 12. Where a person (the 'claimant') on or after 9 June 1987 enters into a contract with another (the 'defendant') and the contract is unenforceable against the defendant, or he repudiates it, because he was a minor when the contract was made, the court may, if it is just and equitable to do so, require the defendant to transfer to the claimant any property acquired by the defendant under the contract, or any property representing it: ss 3(1), 5(2). This power is without prejudice to any other remedy available to the claimant (s 3(2)), including presumably the remedy of tracing (see PARA 857).

This reversed the position at common law, as to which see Coutts & Co v Browne-Lecky [1947] KB 104, [1946] 2 All ER 207, not following Wauthier v Wilson (1912) 28 TLR 239, CA; and see Yeoman Credit Ltd v Latter [1961] 2 All ER 294, [1961] 1 WLR 828, CA (where a third party's undertaking to indemnify against any loss arising out of a hire-purchase agreement with a minor was held valid as a contract of indemnity).

821. Persons lacking capacity. Where a person is mentally disabled or disordered or lacks capacity and the banker knows of it, he has no mandate on which to act; though if he collects a cheque for the person, it is likely that the banker could claim that he collected for a 'customer'; otherwise any balances and securities the person may have with the bank are tied, to be dealt with on the directions of the Court of Protection or by the depositor if he recovers and again becomes capable of contracting[1]. Money lent by a bank to meet necessaries for such a person's household and estate may be recovered by right of subrogation; but claims for interest and charges do not lie[2].

2 See Re Beavan, Davies, Banks & Co v Beavan [1912] 1 Ch 196; B Liggett (Liverpool) Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1928] 1 KB 48; Scarth v National Provincial Bank Ltd (1930) 4 LDAB 241.

822. Companies and corporations. In the absence of an express power, companies and corporations, whether trading or non-trading, ordinarily have implied power to open current and deposit accounts and to draw valid cheques and make withdrawals[1].

1 See Serrell v Derbyshire, Staffordshire and Worcestershire Junction Rly Co (1850) 9 CB 811 at 820 (where it was conceded that the directors had implied power to draw cheques for the lawful purposes of the company); Bateman v Mid-Wales Rly Co (1866) LR 1 CP 499 at 506 (distinguishing cheques from bills). As to the capacity of corporations to incur liability on negotiable instruments see PARA 1466.

823. Joint accounts. Unless the contract otherwise provides, a sum standing to the credit of a joint account is a debt owed to the creditors jointly and is not enforceable by either on his own[1]. Where the mandate provides for both account holders to sign, the bank impliedly undertakes to each of them severally not to honour orders for payment without his or her signature[2]. A claim for breach of such an undertaking may be brought without joining the other account holder, and the measure of damages is prima facie equal to the value of the claimant's interest in the moneys wrongfully paid away[3].

Where a person deposits money with a bank in the names of himself and another with instructions that it is to be payable to either person or the survivor, the other's right at common law against the bank depends on whether the depositor purported to make the other a party to the contract; if the depositor did so, then he must have had authority to act as the other's agent. If there was no such authority, the bank would not be under obligation to the other party unless the latter ratified the contract[4].

If on the death of either party the current account is overdrawn, the survivor will be liable for the whole debt. Where the money is in the name of husband and wife, the position on the husband's death may depend upon the reason for setting up the joint account[5].

Cf Brewer v Westminster Bank Ltd [1952] 2 All ER 650 (where two executors opened a joint bank account and the mandate authorised the bank to honour any drawings on the account signed by both executors, and one executor forged the other's signature; it was held that the executors' right to have cheques honoured by the bank only if signed by both of them was a right owed to them jointly, and it could only be enforced in an action brought either by both executors joining as plaintiffs or by one as plaintiff joining the other as defendant (this being merely a procedural matter), neither of which was possible because several persons cannot sue at law jointly unless each one is in a position to sue). See further PARA 849.

4 See McEvoy v Belfast Banking Co Ltd [1935] AC 24, HL, in relation to joint deposits with a minor. A joint account holder is not prevented from succeeding to the joint account by survivorship on the ground that he has not contributed to the account where it is established that the deceased, the other account holder, intended that he should so succeed: Aroso v Coutts & Co [2002] 1 All ER (Comm) 241. The other named account holder may be able to invoke the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 s 1(1)(b), which permits a third party to enforce a term of a contract if the term purports to confer a benefit on him, but not if on a true construction of the contract it appears that the parties did not intend the term to be enforceable by the third party (see s 1(2)). See CONTRACT.

5 Where the customers are husband and wife and the latter survives the former, the rule permitting the survivor to draw any balance standing to a joint account may not apply. The position depends on whether the wife was joined in the account as a matter of convenience or whether the husband intended to provide for her in the event of his death: see Husband v Davis (1851) 10 CB 645; Re Williams, Williams v Davies (1864) 3 Sw & Tr 437; Marshal v Crutwell (1875) LR 20 Eq 328; Hall v Hall [1911] 1 Ch 487; Re Bishop, National Provincial Bank Ltd v Bishop [1965] Ch 450, [1965] 1 All ER 249. In the case of a joint account between a husband and wife no restriction is implied into a mandate unless there is an express provision which limits a bank's freedom to honour a cheque drawn by one account-holder without reference to the other: Fielding v Royal Bank of Scotland plc [2004] EWCA Civ 64, [2004] All ER (D) 183 (Feb).

824. Trust accounts. A trust account is an account opened by a customer acting as a trustee or fiduciary and designated as a trust account or in some other way to indicate its fiduciary nature[1]. The ordinary relation between a banker and a customer acting as trustee or fiduciary is that of debtor and creditor[2]. Strictly speaking, it is inaccurate to refer to the credit balance on a trust account as 'trust moneys'. Money so paid into a bank ceases altogether to be money of the customer, the subject matter of the trust being the right to repayment. The designation of an account as a trust account or in some equivalent way fixes the banker with notice of the existence of a trust, which limits the banker's right to combine accounts[3] and establishes a necessary element in any claim to render the banker liable as constructive trustee[4].

1 For an example of an account headed in some other way see Re Gross, ex p Adair (1871) 24 LT 198; affd sub nom Re Gross, ex p Kingston (1871) 6 Ch App 632, where an account heading 'Police Account' was held to be as clear and distinct a statement that the moneys paid into it were trust moneys belonging to the county, as if the moneys had been put into a strong box labelled 'County Moneys'.

4 As to the banker as constructive trustee see PARA 843.

825. Money paid for a special purpose. The legal relation of debtor and creditor does not exclude the implication of a trust enforceable in equity, there being no difficulty in recognising the co-existence in one transaction of legal and equitable rights and remedies[1].

An arrangement for the payment of a person's creditors by a third party may give rise to a relationship of a fiduciary character or trust in favour, as a primary trust, of the creditors, and secondarily, if the primary trust fails, of the third party[2]. The lender acquires an equitable right to see that the payment is applied for the primary designated purpose, and when this purpose has been carried out, the lender has his remedy against the borrower in debt; if the primary purpose cannot be carried out and a secondary purpose has been agreed, expressly or by implication, the remedies of equity may be invoked to give effect to it[3].

Where the debtor is a customer of the bank and the bank receives such a payment in circumstances where it is on notice that the arrangement includes a secondary trust, the bank may not, if the primary purpose fails, apply the payment to discharge a debt owed to it by the debtor[4]; and the money so paid will not form part of the debtor's assets so as to fall within the assets charged to the bank under a floating charge[5].

826. Solicitors' client and trust accounts. With the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, the Council of the Law Society[1] must make rules:

(1) as to the opening and keeping by solicitors of accounts at banks[2] or with building societies for clients' money;

(2) as to the keeping by solicitors of accounts containing particulars and information as to money received or held or paid by them for or on behalf of their clients; and

(3) empowering the Council to take such action as may be necessary to enable it to ascertain whether or not the rules are being complied with,

and the rules may specify the location of the branches at which the accounts are to be kept[3].

With the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, the Council must also make rules:

(a) as to the opening and keeping by solicitors of accounts at banks or with building societies for money comprised in controlled trusts[4];

(b) as to the keeping by solicitors of accounts containing particulars and information as to money received or held or paid by them for or on account of any such trust; and

(c) empowering the Council to take such action as may be necessary to enable it to ascertain whether or not the rules are being complied with,

and the rules may specify the location of the branches at which the accounts are to be kept[5].

The rules must make provision for requiring a solicitor, in such cases as may be prescribed by the rules, either:

(i) to keep on deposit in a separate account at a bank or with a building society for the benefit of the client money received for or on account of a client; or

(ii) to make good to the client out of the solicitor's own money a sum equivalent to the interest which would have accrued if the money so received had been so kept on deposit[6].

Where a solicitor keeps an account with a bank or a building society, the bank or society does not incur any liability, nor is it under any obligation to make any inquiry, nor is it deemed to have any knowledge of any right of any person to any money paid or credited to the account, which it would not incur or be under or be deemed to have in the case of an account kept by a person entitled absolutely to all the money paid or credited to it; and the bank or society does not have any recourse or right against money standing to the credit of the account, in respect of any liability of the solicitor to the bank or society, other than a liability in connection with the account[7]. The purpose of the provisions of head (i) above is not to give the bank a special advantage but to ensure that it suffers no special disadvantage; their purpose is not to put a solicitor's client account in some special category in which constructive trusteeship can never arise[8].

Money paid into a client account is a debt owing from the banker to the solicitor[9]; but it may also be, in effect, trust money to the banker's knowledge[10]. It will be attached by a third party debt order served on the bank[11].

2 Except where the context otherwise so requires, 'bank' means the Bank of England, a person (other than a building society) who has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40–55) (see PARA 348 et seq) to accept deposits, or an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in Sch 3 para 5(b) which has permission under Sch 3 para 15 (as a result of qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 para 12) to accept deposits (see PARA 315): Solicitors Act 1974 s 87(1) (definition substituted by SI 2001/3649). A body comprised in the new TSB group (see PARA 809 note 3) is a bank for the purposes of the Solicitors Act 1974: Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 s 3(9), Sch 1 para 11(2)(b).

827. Dispositions by customer. Money on current account is subject to many of the legal incidents of a debt. It passes under a bequest by the customer of 'money owing to me at the time of my decease'[1], though it equally falls within a bequest of 'ready money'[2]. It is payable to the legal representatives of a deceased customer on production of probate or letters of administration[3]. It is repayable on demand, the drawing of a cheque not being a condition precedent[4]. It may be legally assigned[5], but probably only as a whole, by a single assignment[6]. In England a cheque is not an assignment[7].

On the bankruptcy of the customer, any balance to his credit vests in his trustee in bankruptcy[8], and the banker may be summarily compelled to pay it over[9]. Where, whether before or after the service of written notice by the trustee claiming for the bankrupt's estate any property which has been acquired by, or has devolved upon, a bankrupt since the commencement of the bankruptcy[10], a banker enters into a transaction in good faith and without notice of the bankruptcy, the trustee is not in respect of that transaction entitled[11] to any remedy against that banker, or any person whose title to any property derives from him[12].

828. Customer's title to money paid in. A banker is not entitled to refuse his customer's demand for repayment on grounds of mere suspicion or curiosity[1]. Similarly, where a banker takes money from his customer in discharge of a debt, he is not bound to inquire into the manner in which the person so paying the debt acquired the money with which he pays it[2].

A banker is, however, not only entitled but bound to refuse payment if he has, or a reasonable banker would have, grounds for believing that the authorised signatories on an account are misusing their authority for the purpose of defrauding their principal or otherwise defeating his true intentions[3]; or if he is on notice that the payment is in breach of trust[4].

Where the customer's title to money or cheques paid into the account is defective, the banker may become exposed to a tracing claim[5], a claim in conversion, or a claim for money had and received[6].

829. Customer's duty in operating current account. In operating his current account the customer owes to his bank two duties of care: (1) to refrain from drawing a cheque in such a manner as to facilitate fraud or forgery[1]; and (2) to inform the bank of any forgery of a cheque purportedly drawn on the account as soon as he, the customer, becomes aware of it[2].

The customer does not owe any wider duty of care in the operation of his current account; and in particular he does not owe a duty of care: (a) to take reasonable precautions in the management of his business with the bank to prevent forged cheques being presented to it; or (b) to take such steps to check his periodic bank statements as a reasonable customer in his position would take to enable him to notify the bank of any debit items in the account which he has not authorised[3].

Mere silence, without resulting injury to the banker, does not operate as an estoppel or constitute adoption[4].

The alteration in the position of the banker necessary to support adoption is not confined to payment of the cheque. Loss of opportunity of protecting himself against subsequent forgeries, if any, by the same person, and loss of the chance of taking proceedings, civil or criminal, against the forger, as by his escaping out of the jurisdiction, constitute sufficient alteration in the position of, and prejudice to, the banker[5]. It appears immaterial whether civil proceedings against the forger would have resulted in recovering any money or not[6].

Where this principle of adoption applies, it covers all previous forgeries by the same person if, notified on the last occasion when the customer or other person had knowledge of the forgery, the bank might have taken steps to recover from the forger all money previously obtained by him[7].

1 London Joint Stock Bank Ltd v Macmillan and Arthur [1918] AC 777, HL (amount in words filled in and figures altered by confidential clerk after signature), approving Young v Grote (1827) 4 Bing 253. In view of this judgment the statements in the judgment of the Privy Council to a contrary effect in Colonial Bank of Australasia Ltd v Marshall [1906] AC 559, PC, have lost their authority, as have also the dicta in Baxendale v Bennett (1878) 3 QBD 525, CA, questioning the authority of Young v Grote above. While the customer should not, for example, sign a blank cheque leaving the amount in words to be filled in by a clerk (see London Joint Stock Bank Ltd v Macmillan and Arthur above), there is no duty to fill in a blank between the name of the payee and 'or order' (see Slingsby v District Bank Ltd [1932] 1 KB 544, CA).

In William Ewing & Co v Dominion Bank (1904) 24 SCR 133, the Supreme Court of Canada by a majority expressly extended the doctrine to the case of a businessman, not a customer, on the ground of moral and commercial obligation. 830. Closing of account. A banker is not entitled arbitrarily to close a current account in credit[1]. He must give the customer reasonable notice[2] and make satisfactory provision for outstanding cheques.

A customer's instruction to his bank to close his account and transfer the balance to a third party does not end the relationship of banker and customer[3], the instructions being revocable until the transferee is notified of the transfer[4].

831. Money laundering. Regulations have been made in order to prevent the use of the financial system for the purposes of money laundering and terrorist financing[1]. Relevant persons[2] must, when undertaking certain activities in the course of business, apply customer due diligence measures[3] where they establish a business relationship, carry out an occasional transaction, suspect money laundering or terrorist finance or doubt the accuracy of customer identification information[4]. Relevant persons also have to undertake ongoing monitoring of their business relationships[5]. There is a general rule on the timing of the verification of the customer's identity subject to certain exceptions[6]. The regulations have specific measures on record-keeping, procedures and training[7]; and also provisions on supervision and registration[8]. There are enforcement powers[9] for certain supervisors, including powers to obtain information and enter and inspect premises[10]. Civil penalties may be imposed by these supervisors on persons who fail to comply with the regulations' requirements[11]. Miscellaneous matters[12] include provision for the recovery of penalties and charges through the court[13], the imposition of an obligation on certain public authorities to report suspicions of money laundering or terrorist financing[14] and transitional provisions[15].

The Financial Services Authority[16] has as one of its objectives the reduction of financial crime[17] and the Authority may make rules in relation to the prevention and detection of money laundering[18].

There are also statutory provisions penalising those who assist in the retention of the proceeds of drug trafficking or criminal conduct and requiring banks and their employees to report suspicions or beliefs of money laundering to the police[19]. Anti-terrorism legislation has been enacted to prevent the retention or control of terrorist property, including money[20].

1 See the Money Laundering Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2157; and PARA 539 et seq. The Regulations revoke and replace earlier regulations (the Money Laundering Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3075) and implement in part European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/60 (OJ L309, 25.11.2005, p 15) on the prevention of the use of the financial system for the purpose of money laundering and terrorist financing. As to the commencement of the Money Laundering Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2157, see reg 1 which provides that the regulations are in force from 15 December 2007.

2 See the Money Laundering Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2157, reg 3 and as to exclusions see reg 4 (see PARA 540). 'Relevant persons' include credit institutions (including most banks and branches), financial institutions, auditors, accountants, tax advisers and insolvency practitioners, independent legal professionals, trust or company service providers, estate agents, high value dealers and casinos.

3 See the Money Laundering Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2157, reg 5; and PARA 542. As to customer due diligence see Pt 2 (regs 5–18). The measures consist of identifying and verifying the identity of the customer and any beneficial owner (see reg 6; and PARA 542) of the customer, and obtaining information on the purpose and intended nature of the business relationship.

Aspects of customer due diligence include a general rule on the timing of the verification of the customer's identity (part of which relates specifically to banks) with certain exceptions (see reg 9; and PARA 543); and when casinos must identify and verify their customers (see reg 10; and PARA 544). Failure to apply such measures means that a person cannot establish or continue a business relationship with the customer concerned or undertake an occasional transaction: see reg 11; and PARA 545 (and see also reg 12; and PARA 542 as to an exception from the requirement to identify the beneficial owner for debt issues held in trust). Relevant persons may apply simplified customer due diligence measures for certain products, customers or transactions (listed in reg 13: see PARA 542) and must apply enhanced measures in four situations (one of which relates specifically to banking): see reg 14; and PARA 546. There are obligations on relevant persons in respect of their overseas branches and subsidiaries: see reg 15; and PARA 547. There are also specific obligations in respect of shell banks and anonymous accounts: see reg 16; and PARA 548. The regulations provide a list of persons on whom relevant persons can rely to perform customer due diligence measures: see reg 17; and PARA 549.

(ii) Payment of Cheques etc; Protection and Duties of Paying Banker

832. Paying banker. A banker is bound to pay cheques drawn on him by a customer in legal form provided he has in his hands at the time sufficient and available funds for the purpose[1], or provided the cheques are within the limits of an agreed overdraft[2], and may so pay them within a reasonable period after the bank's advertised closing time[3]. Where he pays in accordance with specific statutory provisions, he may claim protection against claims of the true owner[4]. He must either pay cheques or refuse payment at once; a request to re-present amounts to dishonour[5]. A banker must not continue to pay cheques without inquiry if a reasonable and honest banker with knowledge of the relevant facts would have considered that there was a serious or real possibility, albeit not amounting to a probability, that the customer was being defrauded or that moneys were being misappropriated[6]. Failure to inquire is not excused merely because of a conviction that the answer would be false[7].

Post-dated cheques are not invalid[8], but the banker should not pay such a cheque if presented before the date it bears[9]. If, therefore, a cheque dated on a Sunday is presented on the previous business day, it should be returned with the answer 'post-dated'[10]. A post-dated cheque, however, if presented at or after its ostensible date, should be paid though the banker knows it to be post-dated, and even if it has been presented before the date and refused payment[11]. A cheque is not payable on a non-business day[12].

The Treasury has power, by order made by statutory instrument, to suspend financial dealings in the national interest for such time as may be specified in the order[13]. An obligation on a person to do a thing on a day on which he is prevented from doing it by such an order, or is unable to do it by reason of such an order, is deemed to be complied with if he does it as soon as practicable thereafter[14].

A banker is justified in refusing payment of a cheque which is ambiguous in form[15]. He may be liable if he pays a cheque which is irregularly indorsed[16] in circumstances in which the absence of, or irregularity in, indorsement is not covered by statute[17].

Bankers habitually refuse payment of what are called stale cheques, that is, cheques which have been outstanding for a period varying from 6 months in some banks to 12 months in others; but the practice has never received judicial sanction[18].

Bankers usually refuse payment of an undated cheque, or one on which the date is incomplete, and it has been held that a banker is not bound to honour an undated cheque[19]. The date is a material particular, and the prima facie authority[20] of the person in possession to fill in the date must be exercised within a reasonable time[21]. Any alteration of the date of a cheque appears to be a material alteration[22], and a banker should therefore refuse to pay a cheque on which the date appears to have been altered.

It is submitted that a banker should not pay a cheque to a payee he knows to be an undischarged bankrupt[23]. The validity of payment to a payee who is a minor has never been questioned[24].

The making of any payment on a day following a bank holiday is equivalent to payment on the holiday, and the same applies to the performance of other acts: see the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 1(4).

11 In Emanuel v Robarts (1868) 9 B & S 121, the bankers were held justified under a custom of London bankers in refusing payment of a post-dated cheque so re-presented. The ground of decision was the then existing doubt as to the legality of post-dated cheques; that legality is now established (see the text and note 8) and the custom could not obtain at the present day.

12 As to non-business days see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 92 (amended by the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 ss 3(1), 4(4)); and the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 1(1), Sch 1. See also PARA 1437.

As to the Treasury see PARA 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. A person who knowingly or recklessly contravenes a direction given by such an order is guilty of an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine of not more than the prescribed sum, or on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for not more than two years or a fine, or to both: Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 2(4) (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(2)). Consenting or conniving directors or officers of bodies corporate, or members of a body corporate managed by its members, have a personal criminal liability: see the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 2(5). 17 Protection is given to bankers paying unindorsed or irregularly indorsed cheques and certain other instruments not technically bills of exchange by the Cheques Act 1957 s 1: see PARA 836; and PARA 1552. Before the Cheques Act 1957, paying bankers required indorsement of order cheques for their own protection, since a banker would have had no defence had he paid an order cheque which was unindorsed or irregularly indorsed to a person who had no title to it: cf PARA 836. The regularity of the indorsement depended upon mercantile custom, and books on practical banking contained pages of examples. Little attention was paid to the question of whether the indorsement, which was, generally speaking, in blank, was made or not made animo indorsandi or was merely a receipt. As to statutory provisions protecting paying bankers see also the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 60, 80; and PARAS 836, 838. An irregular indorsement may yet be sufficient to pass title: see Arab Bank Ltd v Ross [1952] 2 QB 216 at 226, [1952] 1 All ER 709 at 715, CA, per Denning LJ.

18 Save in case of damage by non-presentation within a reasonable time, the drawer remains liable until discharged by lapse of time: Robinson v Hawksford (1846) 9 QB 52; Laws v Rand (1857) 3 CBNS 442; King and Boyd v Porter [1925] NI 107, CA. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 869. In the notes to Serle v Norton (1841) 2 Mood & R 401, it is suggested that the practice is justified by the custom of bankers. In any event, the customer's credit would not be damaged by the cheque being returned marked with this ground of refusal.

22 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64(2). See also PARA 1560.

23 It is the banker's duty, as far as possible, to obtain a good discharge for his customer. This prima facie the bankrupt cannot give, his estate having vested in the trustee: see the Insolvency Act 1986 ss 283(1), 306, 385(1); and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 216. The banker cannot know whether or not the cheque represents after-acquired property and, even if it does, payment may not be protected: see s 307; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 445 et seq. See also Cohen v Mitchell (1890) 25 QBD 262, CA; Re Clarke, ex p Beardmore [1894] 2 QB 393, CA; Re Bennett, ex p Official Receiver [1907] 1 KB 149.

24 As to the extent of the disability of minority see PARA 820.

833. Authority to draw as condition of payment. The cheque must be drawn by a person having authority express or implied[1]. A per pro signature puts the banker on inquiry as to the authority of the person so signing[2]. Where the account is not that of an individual, it is customary to take a mandate setting out the parties authorised to draw and the form in which they are to sign; the mandate must be strictly observed.

Apart from agreement[3], cheques on ordinary joint accounts should be drawn by all the parties in whose name the account stands[4]. However, the banker is justified, in case of death, in allowing the survivor to draw any balance standing to the joint account, except, as in the case of husband and wife, when the object with which the account was opened requires refusal[5].

During partnership, and in the absence of instructions to the contrary[6], any partner has the right to draw on the partnership account in the firm name[7]. The death of one or more partners does not absolutely preclude the surviving partner or partners from drawing on the firm account[8], but the modern and preferable method is that, where to the knowledge of the banker a partner dies, the old account should be operated only for the purpose of winding up the partnership, and arrangements should be made for a new account, carrying over to it any balance remaining[9]. In the absence of agreement to the contrary, the bankruptcy of one partner involves the dissolution of the firm[10]; but this does not prevent the other partner or partners from drawing on the firm account for purposes of the partnership.

An account of a deceased person cannot be drawn upon or the money transferred until probate or letters of administration have been granted and registered with the banker. In the absence of special arrangement, one of several executors or administrators may draw on an account opened with the deceased, or with them as executors or administrators[11]. Trustees cannot delegate the drawing of cheques to one of their number, but a trustee may, by power of attorney, delegate this power for up to 12 months; the statutory power of delegation is strictly construed[12].

1 Theoretically a cheque need not be drawn by a customer. Cf Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL, where protection was awarded under the Stamp Act 1853 s 19 to bankers' drafts, as being 'drawn upon a banker', which words are similar to those in the definition of a cheque contained in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 73 (see further PARA 848). However, a banker is under no obligation to pay a cheque drawn by someone other than a customer, though he may place himself under such an obligation, as in the case of a demand draft drawn on him by a beneficiary under a letter of credit.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 25. See also PARA 1474. For example, an executor cannot as a rule delegate his powers, though one of several executors may sign for all, and a cheque signed per pro an executor ought not to be paid without inquiry and satisfactory explanation. As to per pro indorsements see PARA 892.

3 See eg Marshal v Crutwell (1875) LR 20 Eq 328.

4 Husband v Davis (1851) 10 CB 645 at 650 per Maule J; and cf Brandon v Scott (1857) 7 E & B 234. As to the determination by one of the joint customers of the authority to pay see PARA 847. The common form of bank mandate relating to joint accounts embodies the authority of the signatories to the bank to honour cheques drawn by either or both, as the case may be, or the survivor. It may in addition give similar authority in respect of bills of exchange, the withdrawal of securities and property held for safe custody, the taking of advances, and the pledging and deposit of securities for advances. The effect of such a mandate is usually considered to be no more than an indication of the intention of the parties, because the mandate becomes ineffective on the death of either party, though it does not affect the rule of survivorship where this would otherwise apply: see Husband v Davis (1851) 10 CB 645; Williams v Davies (1864) 3 Sw & Tr 437; Marshal v Crutwell (1875) LR 20 Eq 328. 9 See the Partnership Act 1890 s 38; Re Bourne, Bourne v Bourne [1906] 2 Ch 427, CA; Dickson v National Bank of Scotland 1917 SC (HL) 50. The rights inter se of partners and the representatives of a deceased partner do not normally affect the banker.

10 See the Partnership Act 1890 s 33; and PARTNERSHIP vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 166.

11 As to the devolution of trust powers to the surviving trustee or trustees see the Trustee Act 1925 s 18; and PARA 847. As to the administration of a deceased's estate generally see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

12 See the Trustee Act 1925 s 25(1), (2) (substituted by the Trustee Delegation Act 1999 s 5(1), (2)); and cf Green v Whitehead [1930] 1 Ch 38 (affd on different grounds [1930] 1 Ch 38 at 46, CA). See further TRUSTS vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 984.

834. Funds to be available. There must be sufficient funds to cover the whole amount of the cheque presented, for, in the absence of special arrangement, there is no obligation on the banker to pay any part of a cheque for an amount exceeding the available balance[1]. A cheque is not an assignment of funds in the banker's hands[2].

Cheques must be paid in the order in which they are presented, whether by post or otherwise[3]. If two cheques are presented simultaneously, for example through the same clearing, and there are funds sufficient to pay only one, it is doubtful whether both may be returned[4].

The funds must be not only sufficient, but available. Even in the case of notes, the banker is entitled to reasonable time between the paying in and drawing against in which to carry out the necessary book-keeping entries[5]. In the case of cheques and other documents, he is entitled to a reasonable time for clearing or collection according to their respective nature[6].

Mere crediting as cash is not sufficient to entitle the customer to draw against the cheque before clearing. There must be an agreement, express or implied, to permit the customer to draw[7].

Where a bank is required by a client's standing order to pay a sum on a particular day of each month to a payee until further order, and there are insufficient funds in the client's account on the material date to satisfy the standing order, the bank is under no duty to review the account to meet the order as and when sufficient funds become available[8].

1 The banker contracts with the customer to honour cheques only when he has 'sufficient' funds in hand: see Carew v Duckworth (1869) LR 4 Exch 313; Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corpn [1921] 3 KB 110 at 127, CA, per Atkin LJ.

In Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL, there was in fact an agreement entitling the customer to draw against the uncleared cheque. See further Westminster Bank Ltd v Zang [1966] AC 182, [1966] 1 All ER 114, HL; and PARA 891.

8 Whitehead v National Westminster Bank Ltd (1982) 10 Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers 364.

835. When funds not available. A balance at one branch of a bank does not entitle a customer to draw on another branch where he has no account or is overdrawn[1], for different branches of a bank are for this purpose separate entities, though the bank may apply funds which it holds at one branch to meet an overdraft of the customer at another[2]. If the customer has, in the same capacity, accounts at two or more branches, the bank is entitled to combine them, in the absence of agreement or course of business suggesting otherwise, and to treat the ultimate credit balance, if any, as alone available for drawing purposes[3].

A third party debt order founded on a judgment against the customer and served on the banker prevents any credit balance being available irrespective of the relative amounts of the judgment and the balance[4], unless the order requires the attachment of the balance up to a stated sum only.

The fact that bills discounted for the customer are not yet due does not render a credit balance on current account not available[5].

If a banker has marked cheques[6] at the instance of the customer, he is entitled to retain funds to meet them. Where he does so at the instance of another banker, for clearing purposes, he binds himself to pay. While marking does not make the banker an acceptor, it may amount to a representation by him that the cheque will be paid if presented within a reasonable time[7].

The presentation of a bankruptcy petition against a customer, and the making of a bankruptcy order, render money standing to his credit not available[8]; the same consequence flows from the presentation of a petition for the winding up of a corporate customer[9].

As to voluntary winding up see ss 87, 103; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 939 et seq. However, the honouring of a company's cheques does not involve a disposition to the paying bank for the purposes of s 127: Hollicourt (Contracts) Ltd v Bank of Ireland [2001] Ch 555, [2001] 1 All ER 289, CA.

836. Payment of order cheques in good faith in ordinary course of business. A banker who in good faith and in the ordinary course of business pays a cheque[1] payable to order[2] drawn on him, to which the person in possession has no title by reason of the indorsement being forged, is protected from liability, and may debit his customer with the amount so paid[3]. A banker who in good faith and in the ordinary course of business pays a cheque drawn on him which is not indorsed or is irregularly indorsed does not incur any liability by reason only of the absence of, or irregularity in, indorsement[4]. A thing is done in good faith if it is done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not[5].

Apart from the statutory provisions relating to crossed cheques[6], payment contrary to the crossing would not be in the ordinary course of business[7]. Omission to ascertain that the ostensible indorsement was in proper form, for example, where one indorsement is 'placed to account of payee', would, prior to the passing of the Cheques Act 1957, have been a departure from the ordinary course of business[8]; but now a payment may be in good faith and in the ordinary course of business notwithstanding that the instrument bears no indorsement or an irregular indorsement and the banker will be deemed to have paid in due course[9]. Payment over the counter of a cheque for a large amount to a suspicious-looking person might be a departure from the ordinary course of business[10].

Payment need not be in actual cash to the person presenting[11]. The banker's obligation to pay is during business hours[12], but he is entitled to make a payment outside the usual banking hours and such payment seems to be within the ordinary course of business[13].

1 It is of the nature of a cheque that it is payable on demand: see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 73. See also PARAS 1405, 1410.

2 As to the meaning of 'order cheque', or cheque payable to order, see PARA 879. A cheque payable to order is negotiated by the indorsement of the holder and completed by delivery: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 31(3). See also PARA 1489. Indorsement of cheques is now largely a matter of theory since printed forms carrying the words 'account payee' or 'a/c payee' are no longer transferable and are only valid between the parties: see s 81A; and PARAS 895, 1500.

3 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60. See also PARA 1552. It is not incumbent on the banker to show that the indorsement of the payee or any subsequent indorsement was made by or under the authority of the person whose indorsement it purports to be, and the banker is deemed to have paid the bill in due course, although such indorsement has been forged or made without authority: s 60. Section 60 does not apply to drafts between branch and head office (see PARA 896) or to documents payment of which is made conditional on the signature of an annexed receipt or on presentation within a limited time (see PARA 898). Payment in the ordinary course of business includes payment of order cheques not indorsed or irregularly indorsed: see the Cheques Act 1957 s 1(1); and the text to note 4.

If the banker is both paying and collecting banker, he must also show himself not to have been negligent within s 4 (see PARA 882): Carpenters' Co v British Mutual Banking Co [1938] 1 KB 511, [1937] 3 All ER 811, CA (decided in relation to negligence within the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82 (repealed)). 11 'Payment' within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 is broadly interpreted: see Glasscock v Balls (1889) 24 QBD 13 at 16, CA, per Lord Esher MR. A cheque drawn on one branch of a bank, paid in at another, and appearing as an item in balancing accounts between the branches, has been held to be paid: Bissell & Co v Fox Bros & Co (1885) 53 LT 193, CA; Capital and Counties Bank v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL. Where payment was made by the paying banker by cheque, this was held to be payment within the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 79(2) (see PARA 839): see Meyer & Co Ltd v Sze Hai Tong Banking and Insurance Co Ltd [1913] AC 847, PC.

Many banks have automatic teller machines installed which dispense cash. Most systems involve the issue by the bank to its customer of a plastic card which is inserted into the machine to withdraw cash. Unless the system is directly linked to the bank's central computer account files so that the customer's account is debited immediately the withdrawal is made, the card is probably a credit token within the meaning of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 s 14 (see CONSUMER CREDIT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 88). Automatic teller machines are capable of performing most other functions of a cashier (eg accepting deposits, giving the balance of a customer's account, and transferring funds). See further PARA 906.

837. Payment of bearer cheques in good faith and without negligence. A banker who in good faith and without negligence[1] pays a bearer cheque[2] on presentation is free from all liability[3], and may debit his customer[4], though the holder had no title or a defective title to the cheque[5]. If the cheque has reached the payee actually or constructively, payment in due course by the banker discharges the customer (the drawer) both as to the cheque and as to the consideration[6].

2 A bearer cheque is one expressed to be payable to bearer or to a particular person or bearer: see PARA 879. As to cheques generally see PARAS 879–880.

3 Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151, CA (not liable to true owner).

4 Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151, CA.

5 This is referred to as discharge by payment in due course: see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 59(1). See also PARA 1550. 'Holder' means the payee or indorsee of a bill or note who is in possession of it, or the bearer of it; and 'bearer' means the person in possession of a bill or note which is payable to bearer: s 2. See also PARA 1407. The definition of 'holder' merely requires possession without in any way limiting it to lawful possession. Neither definition involves any question of title.

6 Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151, CA. As to crossed cheques see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 80; and PARA 838.

838. Payment of crossed cheques in accordance with the crossing. A banker is protected if he pays a cheque, in good faith and without negligence, in accordance with its ostensible crossing[1], notwithstanding that it may have been obliterated, or added to or altered otherwise than as authorised by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[2]. 'Addition' means a material addition, effective under the provisions relating to crossed cheques; the addition of a memorandum such as 'account payee' would not justify the banker in refusing to pay the cheque, or in itself deprive him of protection in paying[3]. The 'opening' of a crossing, by writing 'pay cash' and initialling, is a patent alteration not authorised by the Act, and a banker pays such a cheque over the counter at the risk that the opening may prove unauthorised[4]. A banker paying in good faith and without negligence a cheque which at the time of presentation appears not to be crossed does not incur liability by reason only that the cheque was in fact or had been crossed[5].

A banker paying a crossed cheque in good faith, without negligence[6], and in accordance with the crossing, is protected, and may debit his customer, notwithstanding any defect of title in the collecting banker or the person from whom he received it[7]. If the cheque had come to the hands of the payee[8], the drawer is discharged both on the cheque and on the consideration[9].

Protection under the provisions relating to crossed cheques might be doubtful in the case of an open cheque crossed by a person having no authority to cross, such as an innocent person in possession under a forged indorsement, but the banker would be otherwise protected[10].

The addition of 'not negotiable' to the crossing has no effect whatever on the paying banker, except to prevent his being a holder in due course[11]. 'Not negotiable' by itself, however, does not constitute a crossing[12].

The banker's identification stamp may or may not be a crossing. If impressed on an open cheque by the collecting banker, it probably is. Similarly, the collecting banker's stamp on a cheque crossed generally would probably constitute it a cheque crossed specially to that banker[13].

A banker paying a document, ostensibly a crossed cheque, to which his customer's name is forged as drawer is not protected; the instrument is not a cheque[14].

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 80 (amended by the Cheques Act 1992 s 2). See also PARA 1575. The practice of bankers may be relevant to negligence: see Arab Bank Ltd v Ross [1952] 2 QB 216 at 222, [1952] 1 All ER 709 at 713, CA, per Somervell LJ. As to negligence in relation to the practice of collecting bankers see PARA 884.

2 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 79(2) proviso. See also PARA 1575. The proviso is defectively drawn. The wording 'added to or altered' etc grammatically refers to the cheque, not the crossing, but the words are intended to apply to the latter: Slingsby v District Bank Ltd [1932] 1 KB 544, CA.

3 See Akrokerri (Atlantic) Mines Ltd v Economic Bank [1904] 2 KB 465 at 472 per Bigham J; and see PARA 895. The paying banker could, as a rule, have no knowledge for whose account the cheque was being collected. The only doubtful case would be where the cheque bore indorsements after that of the payee, and one was forged. Quaere whether payment in such case would be 'in the ordinary course of business' or 'without negligence'. The 'provisions relating to crossed cheques' are the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 76–81; and the Cheques Act 1957 s 4: see PARA 880.

4 The practice of banks is not to recognise the opening of cheques unless signed by the drawer and presented for payment by him or his known agent: see Questions on Banking Practice (11th Edn) no 344; and see also Smith and Baldwin v Barclays Bank Ltd (1944) 5 Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers 370, in which Stable J said, in relation to a cheque crossed 'not negotiable' over which were written the words 'please pay cash', that the alteration to the printed form did not make the instrument any the less a crossed cheque. The crossed cheque provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (ss 76–81A) have effect in relation to the instruments, other than cheques, to which the Cheques Act 1957 s 4 (see PARA 882) applies as they have effect in relation to cheques: see s 5; and PARA 880. As to the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 81A see also PARA 836 note 2; and PARAS 895, 1500.

5 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 79(2) proviso.

6 Payment on an irregular indorsement is negligence (Slingsby v District Bank Ltd [1932] 1 KB 544, CA), except as provided by the Cheques Act 1957 s 1, the protection of which is additional to that given by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 80: see PARA 836. If the banker is both paying and collecting banker, he must also show himself not to have been negligent within the Cheques Act 1957 s 4: see PARAS 836, 882.

7 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 80 (as amended: see note 1).

8 It is presumed that 'constructive' coming to the payee's hands would be sufficient.

9 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 80 (as amended: see note 1).

10 Cf Simmons v Taylor (1857) 2 CBNS 528 at 539 per Cresswell J; affd (1858) 4 CBNS 463. However, if the cheque is an order cheque, the banker is protected under the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 (see PARA 836); if a bearer cheque, by having paid to bearer. As to the meanings of 'order cheque' and 'bearer cheque' see PARA 879.

11 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 81. See also PARA 1499. See Algemene Bank Nederland NV v Happy Valley Restaurant Pte Ltd [1991] 2 MLJ 289.
12 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 76. See also PARA 1411.
13 A collecting banker may specially cross to himself: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 77(6). See also PARA 1411. Transverse lines are not necessary to constitute crossing where a banker's name is put across the face of the cheque: s 76(2). Bankers habitually stamp all cheques collected by them, whether crossed or not, and the stamp is frequently horizontal, not transverse or 'across' the face of the cheque. The latter point would probably not be considered material.
14 It is not a cheque, but a mere piece of paper: Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] AC 49, PC; and see PARA 850.

839. Payment in contravention of the crossing. The Bills of Exchange Act 1882 does not, as the earlier crossed cheques legislation did, directly prohibit a banker from paying in contravention of the crossing, except in the case of a cheque crossed to more than one banker, none of whom is an agent for collection[1]. However, a banker so doing[2] is liable to the true owner for any loss the latter may sustain as a result[3]. In the case of a forged indorsement, he would also lose the protection afforded by statute[4], payment contrary to the crossing not being in the ordinary course of business[5].

Notwithstanding the absence of the direct prohibition, a banker cannot charge his customer with the amount of a crossed cheque paid in contravention of the crossing[6], even, it would seem, though payment was made to the true owner[7].

The fact that a crossed cheque has been refused payment does not make it an open cheque for the purpose of re-presentation[8]; nor does the fact that a crossing has been opened or obliterated render it an uncrossed cheque[9].

1 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 79(1). See also PARA 1575.
2 Payment by means of the bank's own cheque is sufficient payment: Meyer & Co Ltd v Sze Hai Tong Banking and Insurance Co Ltd [1913] AC 847, PC.

6 Smith v Union Bank of London (1875) 1 QBD 31, CA. In that case, there was a direct prohibition; but the disability to debit the customer was apparently based on disobedience to mandate (Bobbett v Pinkett (1876) 1 ExD 368). Such payments would clearly be made negligently. See also the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 79(2) proviso; the provision that, in the circumstances covered by the proviso, the payment 'shall not be questioned' implies that the customer may normally repudiate payment contrary to the crossing. See PARA 838.
7 Payment had been made to the true owner, the bona fide holder, in Smith v Union Bank of London (1875) 1 QBD 31, CA. Possibly, however, the court would apply the doctrine laid down in Reid v Rigby & Co [1894] 2 QB 40, Bevan v National Bank Ltd (1906) 23 TLR 65, and B Liggett (Liverpool) Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1928] 1 KB 48, as to adoption of a payment by taking the benefit of it. Contrast Lloyds Bank Ltd v Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China [1929] 1 KB 40, CA.
8 It remains a crossed cheque: cf Questions on Banking Practice (11th Edn) no 345.
9 Smith and Baldwin v Barclays Bank Ltd (1944) 5 Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers 370.

840. Domiciled bill. Where a customer accepts a domiciled bill payable at his bank[1], it constitutes an authority to the banker to pay it at maturity[2] and, if no funds are available, amounts to a request for an overdraft to the amount of the bill; but, in the absence of previous arrangement, the banker is under no obligation to pay the bill, even though he has sufficient funds in hand[3]. Where such an obligation exists, the banker, in the absence of special terms, is under a duty to identify the person to whom he makes payment with the person named as payee[4]. There is no statutory protection in regard to the payment of a domiciled bill.

A banker who in good faith and without negligence pays a bill payable to bearer, so accepted, to the bearer of it may charge his customer with the amount[5].

1 A bill is said to be domiciled when it is accepted payable at a bank or by another paying agent.

841. Cheques drawn in breach of trust. It is not the banker's business or right to set up the title of persons other than his customer, and mere suspicion that a breach of trust is involved or intended in the drawing of a cheque on trust funds may not be sufficient to entitle the banker to refuse payment[1]. However, it is hardly conceivable that a court would award damages against the banker to a customer who had to admit, or against whom it was proved, that he drew the cheque for the purpose of defrauding the trust[2].

2 Gray v Johnston (1868) LR 3 HL 1 at 11 per Lord Cairns; Hunt v Maniere (1864) 34 Beav 157.

842. Breach of trust designed to benefit banker. A banker may not retain any benefit to himself from wrongful dealing with any fund he knows to be affected with a trust where such benefit has been designed or stipulated for by him[1]. A banker cannot assert his right of combination over an account known to be a trust account, whether so described or not[2]. A banker may, however, refuse to accept an account in any form which implies that it is affected by a trust[3], but he is not at liberty to disregard intimations conveyed to him by the title or character in which the account is opened, or otherwise[4].

1 Gray v Johnston (1868) LR 3 HL 1. In Foxton v Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co (1881) 44 LT 406, Fry J appears to have held that the fact that the bank indirectly derived benefit from such dealing invalidated the transaction. In Coleman v Bucks and Oxon Union Bank [1897] 2 Ch 243, Byrne J shows that, to come within Gray v Johnston above, there must at least be an ascertained debt due to the bank, which on pressure by the bank is satisfied or reduced by payment from the trust account. 843. The banker as constructive trustee. Banks have been held liable as constructive trustees in circumstances wider than those of wrongfully obtaining by design or stipulation a benefit from a fund known to be affected by a trust[1]; and a constructive trust has been imposed upon a paying bank in circumstances where it has obtained no benefit for itself at all[2]. A bank may be held liable as constructive trustee even in respect of a payment made in accordance with its customer's mandate[3]. In relation to the category of constructive trusteeship known as dishonest assistance[4], it is necessary to establish that the bank acted dishonestly[5]. The position is not as clear in relation to the other category of constructive trusteeship known as knowing receipt[6], and the authorities conflict as to whether the bank will be liable when the relevant knowledge is merely of circumstances which would indicate the facts to an honest and reasonable person or would put an honest and reasonable person on inquiry or whether actual knowledge is required[7].

844. Banker paying without authority. Subject to questions of statutory protection, estoppel or adoption, a banker who has paid a cheque drawn without authority[1] or who has paid one in contravention of his customer's order, or, probably, negligently[2], cannot debit the customer's account with the amount[3]. However, if such a cheque is paid in discharge of the customer's debts, the banker is entitled to take credit for it[4].

The banker's duty in regard to the payment of cheques under a valid mandate is not necessarily fulfilled by his compliance with the mandate; he is under a contractual duty of care which may require him to question payment[5].

When a company mandate authorises its bank to honour cheques if signed by any two signatories, but the board confers authority upon a single person to direct the transfer of a particular sum, the bank is entitled to act upon a cheque drawn on that person's single signature if he was acting within his authority[6]. If the bank fails to observe the discrepancy between the cheque and the mandate, or if it does so but makes no inquiries, it takes a risk in honouring the cheque that the sole signatory may not in fact be authorised[7].

1 As to determination of authority to pay see PARA 847.
2 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 80 (protection to banker) which uses the words 'without negligence' (see PARA 838); Bellamy v Marjoribanks (1852) 7 Exch 389; Carlon v Ireland (1856) 5 E & B 765 at 770 per Crompton J. See also PARA 1575. The Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 does not mention negligence: see PARA 836. If, therefore, payment on a forged indorsement is in the ordinary course of business, it may be protected, though negligent: see Brighton Empire and Eden Syndicate v London and County Bank (1904) Times, 24 March.

845. Wrongful dishonour. If, without justification, a banker dishonours his customer's cheque, he is liable to the customer in damages for injury to credit[1]; but he is not liable to the holder except where, as only rarely happens, he holds funds appropriated to the particular cheque and has so informed the holder[2]. Proof of actual injury to credit is not necessary to secure substantial damages, either for a business customer[3] or for personal customers[4]. The answer on a cheque dishonoured on presentation by a third person[5] may constitute libel, but such cases are rare[6]; in such cases general damages may be awarded.

1 Marzetti v Williams (1830) 1 B & Ad 415. Where a bank wrongly dishonoured a cheque and marked it 'not sufficient', the bank could not rely on qualified privilege as a defence against the alleged libel: Davidson v Barclays Bank Ltd [1940] 1 All ER 316. 6 See Frost v London Joint Stock Bank Ltd (1906) 22 TLR 760, CA (words 'reason assigned—not stated' held not libellous); Flach v London and South-Western Bank Ltd (1915) 31 TLR 334 (words 'refer to drawer' held not libellous, although Grantham J left these words to the jury in Szek v Lloyds Bank Ltd (1908) 2 Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers 159); Plunkett v Barclays Bank Ltd [1936] 2 KB 107, [1936] 1 All ER 653 (adopting the view taken in Flach v London and South-Western Bank Ltd). However see Pyke v Hibernian Bank Ltd [1950] IR 195 (words 'refer to drawer, present again' and 'refer to drawer' held libellous by court of first instance; judges of appeal court being equally divided, the judgment was affirmed). In Jayson v Midland Bank Ltd [1967] 2 Lloyd's Rep 563 (on appeal [1968] 1 Lloyd's Rep 409, CA), while the jury found that the words 'refer to drawer' were libellous, the point was immaterial in the sense that the statement that there were no funds to meet the charges was true. As to 'present again' see Baker v Australia and New Zealand Bank Ltd [1958] NZLR 907.

846. Time for payment. If the bill is ostensibly in order, the banker must pay or refuse to pay at once. He is not entitled to time in which to decide whether he may safely pay[1]. Some doubt has, however, been cast on this view[2]. Where presentment is made through a clearing house, the banker is probably entitled to the time allowed by the rules of that establishment for deciding whether to pay or not.

847. Determination of authority to pay. The duty and authority to pay a cheque drawn by a customer are determined:

(1) by countermand of payment, commonly known as stopping a cheque[1];
(2) by notice of the customer's death[2];
(3) by notice of the customer's mental disorder or lack of capacity, where it is of a degree preventing his understanding the transaction[3];
(4) by notice of the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against the customer[4] or the making of a bankruptcy order against him[5];
(5) by notice of the presentation of a winding-up petition where the customer is a limited company[6], or of the passing of a resolution for voluntary winding-up[7].

The duty and authority of a bank to pay money from a client's account may also be established by a direct debit mandate. It has been suggested that failure to implement a properly concluded mandate might be breach of an implied term of a contract between the bank and its customer[8], but such a mandate does not confer on a creditor any rights of the debtor against his own bank[9]. It has been held that cancelling a direct debit mandate is equivalent to countermanding a payment by cheque[10].

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 75; Mclean v Clydesdale Banking Co (1883) 9 App Cas 95, HL. See also PARA 1403. As between separate branches of a bank there is a right to separate notice of countermand: London Provincial and South-Western Bank v Buszard (1918) 35 TLR 142. As to payment contrary to instructions see Twibell v London Suburban Bank [1869] WN 127; Bale v Parr's Bank Ltd (1909) 25 TLR 549; Reade v Royal Bank of Ireland Ltd [1922] 2 IR 22, CA. As to the authority of a principal to stop payment on an account, which he has opened in favour of an agent, see Société Coloniale Anversoise v London and Brazilian Bank Ltd [1911] 2 KB 1024. As to countermand addressed to a branch substituted by alteration, the cheque being magnetically lettered to the original branch addressee, see Burnett v Westminster Bank Ltd [1966] 1 QB 742, [1965] 3 All ER 81; and see also Andrews v Andrews 1967 SLT 14. As to joint accounts see PARA 823. Apart from any question of mandate, one partner has power to stop a cheque issued in the firm name, and one executor has power to stop a cheque signed by another: Gaunt v Taylor (1843) 2 Hare 413.

Stopping by teletransmission is sufficient: see Curtice v London City and Midland Bank Ltd [1908] 1 KB 293, CA (where it was held that, though a telegram countermanding a cheque might reasonably be acted upon by a banker, an unauthenticated telegram was not sufficient authority for refusing payment). See also Reade v Royal Bank of Ireland Ltd above; Westminster Bank Ltd v Hilton (1926) 136 LT 315. See further the Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (1993 and 2007 Revisions), which uses the expression 'teletransmission' (see art 11; and PARA 932).

Where a banker has marked a cheque at the instance of the customer, the customer probably cannot countermand payment of the cheque after issue. By so marking (see PARA 835), the banker probably becomes bound to pay to any other banker presenting it: cf Goodwin v Robarts (1875) LR 10 Exch 337; Gaden v Newfoundland Savings Bank [1899] AC 281, PC; Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] AC 49, PC. See also Bank of Baroda Ltd v Punjab National Bank Ltd [1944] AC 176, [1944] 2 All ER 83, PC, in which English law and practice are considered. The Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 75 does not include the case as an exception, but the banker is in the position of an agent with an interest: see further generally AGENCY. Even if the cheque is not crossed, it might be presented through a banker, or be subsequently crossed.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 75. Cf Rogerson v Ladbroke (1822) 1 Bing 93. Where one of two or more partners or customers on joint account dies, the survivors or survivor may, as a rule, still draw on the account (see PARA 833); but, on the death of one of several trustees, the banker may not honour cheques on the trust account drawn by the survivor or survivors unless satisfied of his or their power so to draw under the terms of the trust, or in exercise of statutory authority (see the Trustee Act 1925 s 18; PARA 833; and TRUSTS vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 817, 981, 983).

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 97(1); Insolvency Act 1986 s 284. See also PARA 1608. The right and duty to refuse payment in such case arise not so much from the actual determination of the customer's authority as from the provisions of the bankruptcy legislation: see further BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY. 848. Cheque not drawn by customer. It would appear that a cheque, being a bill of exchange drawn on a banker, payable on demand, need not be drawn by a customer[1], although payment of such a cheque would hardly be in the ordinary course of banking business. The protection extends to an instrument carrying a per pro indorsement[2].

1 See Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL, where protection was accorded to banker's drafts (see PARA 896) under the Stamp Act 1853 s 19 (see PARA 896), in which the words 'drawn on a banker' are the same as in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 (see PARA 836). The history of the legislation given in Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151 at 156, CA, and in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon above at 250 per Lord Lindley should, however, be considered. There is nothing about 'ordinary course of business' in the Stamp Act 1853 s 19, but s 19 has been held to have been impliedly repealed by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 as regards bills and cheques: see Carpenters' Co v British Mutual Banking Co [1938] 1 KB 511, [1937] 3 All ER 811, CA. See also PARA 833.

2 Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151, CA, decided in relation to the Stamp Act 1853 s 19, but applicable to the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 (see PARA 836). As to per pro indorsements see PARA 892.

849. Cheques materially altered. Whether a material alteration of a cheque precludes the banker from debiting his customer with the whole or part of the cheque appears to depend on the character and effect of the alteration[1]. If, despite the alteration, the customer's mandate has been substantially complied with, it is submitted that the banker may charge the customer[2]. If the alteration is in the amount, it would seem that the banker may be entitled to debit the customer with the amount originally inserted[3].

1 The cases do not agree. The decision in Simmons v Taylor (1857) 2 CBNS 528 at 539, 541 (affd (1858) 4 CBNS 463) implies that any material alteration would absolutely debar the banker from debiting, for the cheque must be the customer's cheque in all respects. Other cases point the other way, as only the excess amount seems to have been treated as disputable: see Hall v Fuller (1826) 5 B & C 750 (date and amount altered); Young v Grote (1827) 4 Bing 253 (amount altered); Halifax Union v Wheelwright (1875) LR 10 Exch 183; Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] AC 49, PC (amount altered; in this case the cheque was described as good for the original amount). See also London Joint Stock Bank Ltd v Macmillan and Arthur [1918] AC 777, HL; and PARA 829 note 1. The alteration of an amount of money in the old currency to the equivalent decimal amount is not a material alteration for the purposes of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64(1) (by which a bill materially altered is avoided except against a party who has made, authorised or assented to the alteration, and subsequent indorsers: see PARA 1559): see the Decimal Currency Act 1969 s 3(2).

2 The paying banker, not being a holder, cannot avail himself of the Bills of Exchange 1882 s 64(1) proviso (by which a material alteration which is not apparent does not prevent a holder in due course from availing himself of a bill: see PARA 1559). It is submitted that that provision avoids the bill only as between the parties. Cf the common law rule as stated by Brett LJ in Suffell v Bank of England (1882) 9 QBD 555 at 568, CA, where he limited the avoidance to a party suing on the bill or setting it up as a direct defence. This is not the banker's position; he sets it up as an authority, not a bill. The ground alleged for the rule, namely that the bill must have been altered with the privity or by the neglect of the holder (see Davidson v Cooper (1843) 11 M & W 778, Ex Ch), is inapplicable to the banker. Alteration of the date of a cheque is a material alteration (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64(2); Vance v Lowther (1876) 1 ExD 176), but it would be unreasonable if the alteration to an earlier date debarred the banker from debiting the customer, if paid after the original date. A bank collecting a stolen cheque or paying a draft which has been materially altered by the payee's name being fraudulently changed is not liable in conversion because the instrument is avoided under the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 64(1) (see PARA 1559): Smith v Lloyds TSB Group plc, Harvey Jones Ltd v Woolwich plc [2001] QB 541, [2001] 1 All ER 424, [2000] 2 All ER (Comm) 693, CA.

3 See the cases cited in note 1.

850. Payment on forged cheque. A document in cheque form on which the customer's name as drawer is forged or placed without authority is not a cheque but a nullity; and, unless the banker can establish adoption or estoppel, he may not debit the customer with any payment made on it[1].

The common aphorism that a banker is under a duty to know his customer's signature is in fact incorrect, even as between the banker and his customer; the principle is simply that a banker may not debit his customer's account on the basis of a forged signature, since he has in that event no mandate from the customer for doing so[2].

As to the position where there is a forged signature on a cheque card see First Sport Ltd v Barclays Bank plc [1993] 3 All ER 789, [1993] 1 WLR 1229, CA.

851. Payment of bill on forged acceptance or indorsement. A banker who has paid a bill on a forged acceptance may not charge his customer with the amount, unless the customer is precluded by estoppel or adoption from disputing his signature[1].

A banker who has paid a bill on a forged indorsement may not charge his customer unless the customer is estopped from disputing the payment[2]. Negligence on the part of the customer directly leading to or enabling the loss, or a representation made to the banker by the customer on a material point on which the banker acted by paying money which he would not otherwise have paid, might constitute such estoppel[3]. Acceptance of a bill on which the payee's indorsement has been forged does not, however, stop the customer from refusing to be debited[4].

If, however, the payee is a fictitious or non-existent person, the bill may be treated as payable to bearer[5], and the banker may charge his customer, notwithstanding the forged indorsement.

Where a banker has paid a bill on a forged indorsement, he is liable for the amount to the true owner in conversion or for money had and received[6].

2 Smith v Mercer (1815) 6 Taunt 76; Robarts v Tucker (1851) 16 QB 560, Ex Ch; Bank of England v Vagliano Bros [1891] AC 107, HL. There is no protection in such a case for the banker similar to that given by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 (see PARAS 836, 1552) with regard to demand drafts or cheques, or by the Stamp Act 1853 s 19 (see PARA 896) with regard to drafts or orders payable to order on demand drawn on a banker. As to forged or unauthorised signatures see also the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 24 (and see PARA 1425).

3 See Bank of England v Vagliano Bros [1891] AC 107, HL. The banker acts as agent for the customer in paying domiciled bills, and as such is entitled to the protection and consideration usually accorded to an agent. As to domiciled bills see PARA 840.

4 Robarts v Tucker (1851) 16 QB 560, Ex Ch.

5 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 7(3). See also PARA 1431. The bill may be so treated by anyone to whose interest it is so to treat it, which includes the paying banker: Bank of England v Vagliano Bros [1891] AC 107, HL. As to when the payee is fictitious see Vinden v Hughes [1905] 1 KB 795; North and South Wales Bank Ltd v Macbeth [1908] AC 137, HL; and PARA 855.

6 Smith v Union Bank of London (1875) LR 10 QB 291; affd 1 QBD 31, CA (cheque; but the same principle applies to a bill, except that there is no protection); Smith v Lloyds TSB Group plc, Harvey Jones Ltd v Woolwich plc [2001] QB 541, [2001] 1 All ER 424, [2000] 2 All ER (Comm) 693, CA. Quaere, however, whether the banker could not escape this liability by returning the bill, if still in his possession, to the true owner, the cancellation of the acceptance being treated as made under a mistake within the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 63(3) (see PARA 1556). See Castrique v Imrie (1870) LR 4 HL 414 at 435 per Blackburn J, referring to Novelli v Rossi (1831) 2 B & Ad 757. This course seems suggested by Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151, CA. The acceptor would still be liable to the true owner, the bill not being discharged by the payment to the person wrongfully in possession of it.

852. The principle in Cocks v Masterman. The claim of a bank to recover money paid on a document which is a bill or cheque, and not a nullity ab initio, has been defeated[1] by a defence founded on the need to give notice of dishonour[2]. It seems that the principle which applies[3] is that, if the claimant fails to give notice on the day of payment that the bill contains a forged signature, and the money, having been paid in ignorance of that fact, is being claimed back, the defendant is deprived of the opportunity of giving notice of dishonour on the day when the bill falls due, and so is deemed to have changed his position and has a good defence to the claim on that ground[4]. The principle has been described as stringent[5] and very technical[6] and it is unlikely to be extended.

The defence appears to be available to a payee of a bill or cheque held under genuine indorsements following forged ones, since the holder's remedy against the indorsers subsequent to the forgery is on the instrument by estoppel and dependent on giving notice of dishonour in due time[7]. Where a person holds immediately under a forged indorsement, the banker is prima facie entitled to recover the money from him if demanded within a reasonable time after payment.

The principle mentioned above has no application where notice of dishonour is dispensed with[8], as where the drawer of a cheque countermands payment[9]. The principle is not founded upon estoppel by representation, and the mere honouring of an undetectably forged cheque does not amount to a representation by the bank that the cheque is genuine, whether the cheque is presented for special collection or cleared in the normal way[10].

1 The authorities are analysed by Kerr J in National Westminster Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1975] QB 654, [1974] 3 All ER 834.

2 For cases which adopt this analysis of the true foundation of the defence see Imperial Bank of Canada v Bank of Hamilton [1903] AC 49 at 58, PC; National Westminster Bank Ltd v Barclays Bank International Ltd [1975] QB 654 at 668, [1974] 3 All ER 834 at 846 per Kerr J; Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd [1980] QB 677 at 701, [1979] 3 All ER 522 at 541 per Robert Goff J. It may be noticed that in the leading case (Cocks v Masterman (1829) 9 B & C 902) the prejudice to the holder was defined as being the loss of his right to take steps against other parties to the bill the same day as it is dishonoured. This must refer to his immediate right of recourse on dishonour (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 47(2)) or the equally immediate right to give notice (s 49(12)) (see also PARAS 1525, 1531). There is no right of action until the next day (Kennedy v Thomas [1894] 2 QB 759, CA), and the right to give notice would hardly ever be lost until the next day (Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 49(12)). This would seem to point to deprivation of the immediate right, not loss of the power to give notice, as the test. See also Smith v Mercer (1815) 6 Taunt 76 at 87 per Gibbs LJ ('The defendants, while the bill continued paid, could not have given notice to him (the indorser), for the bill was not then dishonoured'); and Barclays Bank Ltd v WJ Simms Son & Cooke (Southern) Ltd above at 702 and 541–542 per Robert Goff J.

7 The remedy is not based on warranty, which applies only to a transferor by delivery: see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 58; and PARA 1581. As to the estoppel of the indorser from denying the genuineness of previous indorsements see s 55(2)(b); and as to his liability to compensate the holder, subject to notice of dishonour being duly given, see s 55(2)(a). See also PARA 1577, 1578. Although the person in possession is not strictly a holder in due course, or even a holder, he is entitled by estoppel against indorsers subsequent to the forgery. See also generally ESTOPPEL.

8 As to the circumstances in which notice of dishonour is dispensed with see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 50(2); and PARA 1535.

853. Mistake of fact or law; recovery of money paid. If a person pays money to another under a mistake[1] which causes him to make the payment, he is prima facie entitled to recover it as money paid under a mistake[2]. A payment is made under a mistake of fact if it is so made honestly, notwithstanding that the payer has means, of which he did not avail himself, of knowing the true facts[3]. His claim may, however, fail if: (1) the payer intends that the payee is to have the money at all events, whether the fact be true or false, or is deemed in law so to intend[4]; or (2) the payment is made for good consideration, in particular if the money is paid to discharge, and does discharge, a debt owed to the payee, or a principal on whose behalf he is authorised to receive the payment, by the payer or by a third party by whom he is authorised to discharge the debt[5]; or (3) the payee has changed his position in good faith[6] or is deemed in law to have done so[7]. However, it is not necessary, in order to ground recovery, for the mistake: (a) to have induced the payer to believe that he was liable to pay the money to the payee or his principal; or (b) to be 'as between' the payer and the payee[8].

Where a bank pays a cheque drawn on it by a customer, the bank's entitlement to recover the payment on the ground that it was paid under a mistake depends on whether the payment was effected with or without mandate[9]. Where the bank pays within its mandate, it has a right of recourse against its customer and its customer's obligation to the payee is discharged; the payee having given consideration for the payment, the money is irrecoverable unless the transaction itself is set aside. Where the bank pays without mandate, it has no recourse against its customer, the customer's debt to the payee is not discharged, and prima facie the bank may recover payment[10].

If payment is made to a bank acting as agent for a person as to whose identity there is a mistake of fact, and, before the mistake is discovered, the money has been paid by the bank to its principal, the payer cannot recover the amount from the bank[11]. Wherever money is received by an agent who, without knowledge of the mistake, pays it over to his principal, it cannot be recovered[12].

Where money is paid on a negotiable instrument to a person innocent of any knowledge of mistake, it cannot be recovered if the payee's position might, but not necessarily would, be affected if he had to refund[13]. A mistake of fact in relation to negotiable instruments must be as to the instrument itself[14].

Where the money has been received in bad faith, it may be recovered by the payer[15].

1 The former rule of law that money was not recoverable if paid under a mistake of law (as distinct from a mistake of fact) was abrogated by the House of Lords in Kleinwort Benson Ltd v Lincoln City Council [1999] 2 AC 349, [1998] 4 All ER 513, HL. 854. Estoppel, ratification and adoption. Mere silence or inaction cannot amount to a representation unless there is a duty to disclose or to act[1]. The customer owes his bank a duty to inform it of any forgery of a cheque purportedly drawn on the account as soon as he, the customer, becomes aware of it[2] or has reasonable grounds for believing it[3]. If he fails to do so within a reasonable time, and the bank alters its position for the worse, he is estopped from setting up the forgery[4].

Ratification of a forged signature on a bill is not possible[5]. Adoption of such a signature requires valuable consideration[6].

An estoppel was upheld in London Intercontinental Trust Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd [1980] 1 Lloyd's Rep 241, but this ground of the decision may be open to doubt in the light of the decision in Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd above. A person who allows his banker to pay a cheque to which his name has been forged is not estopped from disputing a subsequent forgery by the same hand unless the repetition of such payment establishes a course of business authorising the use of his name: Morris v Bethell (1869) LR 5 CP 47.

The decision in Brook v Hook above was made at a time when a person who remained silent when he knew that a forgery had been committed was guilty of the offence of misprision of felony. The modern equivalent (concealing an offence) is not committed if the only consideration for remaining silent is the making good of the loss caused or the making of reasonable compensation for it: see the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 5(1); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 734. Quaere whether this affects the principle of Brook v Hook above. 855. Fictitious payee. A cheque of which the payee is a fictitious or non-existent person may be treated as payable to bearer[1], though ostensibly payable to that payee or order[2]. Where the payee is a real person known to the drawer and intended by him to have the benefit of the cheque, although the drawer is induced to insert the name and draw by fraudulent representations of a third party, the ostensible payee could never enforce payment of the cheque[3]. In such case, however, the paying banker would usually be protected as having paid on a forged indorsement[4]. It would appear that documents made payable to an impersonal payee or order (for example, 'wages or order' or 'petty cash or order') are not within the statutory rule[5]; they are not bills of exchange, since these require payment to a specified person[6].

1 As to the meaning of 'bearer cheque' see PARA 879. An order cheque on which the last or only indorsement is an indorsement in blank is equally payable to bearer: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 8(3), 73. As to cheques generally see PARAS 879–880. See also PARAS 1405, 1410, 1428.

A bank has been held not entitled to rely on provisions corresponding to the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 7(3) where the name of the fictitious payee had been inserted in the cheque by an employee of the drawer with intent to defraud the drawer, and the cheque was marked 'not negotiable; account payee only': Rhostar (Pvt) Ltd v Netherlands Bank of Rhodesia Ltd 1972 (2) SA 703.

It runs, 'Pay to ship Fortune or bearer"), and at 1528 per Wilmot J ('No person at all is named. It is 'Pay to ship Fortune or bearer"). Cf the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 2 (definition of 'person'); Bank of England v Vagliano Bros [1891] AC 107 at 129, HL, per Lord Selborne (but see the judgment of Lord Herschell at 153).

6 North and South Insurance Corpn Ltd v National Provincial Bank Ltd [1936] 1 KB 328 (where it was held that a document could not be a cheque because it was not a bill of exchange within the statutory definition, for the word 'cash' cannot be a specified person; and a document made out in the form 'pay cash or order' was construed as a document requiring payment of cash to bearer); and see Cole v Milsome [1951] 1 All ER 311; Orbit Mining and Trading Co Ltd v Westminster Bank Ltd [1963] 1 QB 794, [1962] 3 All ER 565, CA. As to bills of exchange generally see PARA 1400 et seq.

856. Indorsement at request of banker. Where a person claims payment of an open order cheque over the counter, alleging that he is the payee of it, and only signs his name on the back at the request of the banker, it is submitted that the banker does not obtain protection[1]. The signature probably represents only a receipt[2].

1 This view is supported by Lord Haldane LC in Gerald McDonald & Co v Nash & Co [1924] AC 625 at 633–634, HL. 'Indorsement' means an indorsement completed by delivery: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 2. See also PARA 1407. There can be no delivery to the drawee. The terms of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 (see PARA 836 note 3; see also PARA 1552) as to 'indorsement of the payee or any subsequent indorsement' point to the indorsement being for negotiation, or at least collection; and those as to the banker being deemed to have paid the bill in due course, notwithstanding the forged indorsement, imply payment made to an ostensible holder under the indorsement: see Keene v Beard (1860) 8 CBNS 372 at 382, where Byles J held such signature a receipt, not an indorsement. Cf the Finance Act 1895 s 9 (repealed), treating such signature as a receipt. See Charles v Blackwell (1877) 2 CPD 151 at 157, CA, per Cockburn CJ. As to the meaning of 'order cheque' see PARA 879.

2 See note 1. Whether the Cheques Act 1957 s 1 (see PARA 836; and also PARA 1552) affords protection if the cheque is paid in good faith and in the ordinary course of business is yet to be determined; although presumably it does. The point will now rarely arise since banks will not normally pay a cheque in cash except for the account holder himself.

857. Following money in equity. Equity will intervene to prevent a defendant from acting in an unconscionable manner; and money, or the credit which results from a customer paying in a cheque[1], may be followed into the hands of a banker, being a volunteer, by any person who has equal or superior right in equity to the money or the chose or thing in action[2].

Where executors mistakenly paid a legacy to a charity which was not entitled to it, and the amount of the legacy was credited to the charity by the bank of which the charity was the customer, and the means of identifying the money or disentangling it remained, the true beneficial owner was entitled to follow the testator's property into the hands of the bank and obtain repayment[3]. If the amount of the legacy has been mixed with the customer's own money in his bank account, the customer and the true beneficiary, having equal equities, are entitled to share the fund (that is to say, the amount credited by the bank to the customer), for, if both the customer and the true beneficial owner are innocent, equity will not regard it as unconscionable for the customer to put forward a claim to retain his own money[4]; although, if the banking account was an active account, money first paid into it would prima facie be treated as having been first paid out[5]. If, however, the customer is in a fiduciary capacity towards the true owner, it will be unconscionable for the customer to advance his own claim and accordingly the true owner will have priority[6]. Further, if the customer is not a volunteer, but is a purchaser for value without notice in respect of the cheque or money which he pays into his banking account, the title of the true owner will neither prevail over nor rank equally with that of the customer and the money will not be able to be followed into the customer's banking account[7]. Equity does not permit tracing into an overdrawn account[8].

Mere payment under a mistake[9] does not found an equitable relationship nor give the payer an equitable interest in the funds[10].

858. Assignment and transfer of deposit account. A deposit account, being a chose or thing in action, may be assigned as a whole under the Law of Property Act 1925[1], but the mere transfer of a deposit receipt does not constitute such an assignment[2].

A deposit receipt, even if in terms it is expressed to be transferable, has never been recognised as a negotiable instrument, or as giving the transferee a right to sue in his own name[3]. It is possible that a bank, having issued the document in a transferable form, might be estopped from disputing its character as such. Where a form of cheque is printed on the back of a deposit receipt, and any conditions imposed, such as previous notice, have been fulfilled, the bank cannot, as between itself and the depositor, refuse to pay the holder[4]. Payment to a person wrongfully dealing with even a signed deposit receipt is no discharge to the bank, unless the depositor is estopped by his conduct from disputing such payment[5].

A deposit receipt[6] or deposit account books of a bank[7], being essential indications of title, may be the subject of a donatio mortis causa although they may not contain all the material terms of the contract with the bank[8], and the court will compel the legal representatives of the deceased to facilitate the receipt of the money by the donee[9]. Where a document combining the features of a deposit receipt and a cheque is so given, the validity of the gift will depend on which is the predominant characteristic[10].

A deposit may be the subject of attachment by a third party debt order[11].

859. Payment in by third persons. Money may be paid into a customer's current account by a third person[1], and, in ordinary cases, the banker is bound to accept it. However, where a cheque for an amount larger than the available balance is presented for payment, it has been said that the banker should not allow the holder to pay in the deficit, and then pay the cheque[2]. The receipt of rent by a bank into the owner's banking account does not change the relationship between the two from that of banker and customer[3].

1 This is common practice in the operation of the bank giro system, whereby a person may pay money into any bank to the credit of the current account of any person at any branch of any bank operating the system.
2 To do so would be unjustifiable disclosure of the customer's affairs, and, if followed by receipt of the difference and payment of the cheque, might constitute a fraud on other creditors of the customer: Foster v Bank of London (1862) 3 F & F 214; Hardy v Veasey (1868) LR 3 Exch 107.
3 Ie so as to render the bank the agent of the owner within the meaning of the Public Health Act 1936 s 343(1): see PARA 817 note 25.

(iii) Banker's Lien

860. Banker's lien. The general lien of bankers is part of the law merchant as judicially recognised[1]; it connotes the right of a banker to retain the subject matter of the lien until an indebtedness of the customer is paid or discharged. It attaches to all securities[2] deposited with a banker as a banker by a customer, or by a third party on a customer's account, to instruments paid in for collection[3], and to money held to the account of a customer[4], unless there is an express or implied contract between the banker and the customer which is inconsistent with the lien[5]. In the case of money, the banker's right is often a right of set-off; it arises only in relation to the customer's money and does not apply to money paid in under a mistake of fact[6].

Where there is a contract inconsistent with the lien, it determines when the relationship of banker and customer ends, as on the liquidation of a company which is a customer[7].

The lien is not limited to fully negotiable securities[8], but has been held to cover share certificates[9], an order to pay a particular person a sum of money[10], and an insurance policy[11].

861. Lien over bills. A banker has a lien on a bill handed to him by a customer for collection, if the customer is or becomes indebted to him[1]. If the customer has indorsed the bill, the banker has a remedy on it against the customer to the extent of such indebtedness[2]. Mere indorsement for collection, without indebtedness, gives no such title or remedy[3], nor does indorsement necessarily imply parting with the entire property in the bill[4]. Whether the customer parts with the entire property depends on the nature of the dealing between him and the banker. Entering as cash before receipt of the money has been held evidence only of the banker's having taken the bill in his own right[5]. Whether it has greater effect now is doubtful[6]. It would seem to constitute an undertaking by the banker to honour cheques to the amount of the bill[7].

In the case of an unindorsed order cheque, the banker has the same rights as if the holder had indorsed in blank[8].

862. When lien attaches. Whatever the nature of the securities, the lien attaches only when they have come to the banker's hands in his capacity as a banker, that is to say, in the way of his business[1]. The common example is cheques paid in for collection, where the customer paying in has an overdraft or loan, or is entitled or permitted to draw against the cheques before they are cleared or then and there borrows against them[2].

Either because the receipt of securities or valuables for safe custody is not part of the ordinary business of banking, or because receipt for such purposes involves an implied contract inconsistent with the assertion of lien, the lien does not attach to securities or articles in the banker's hands for safe custody[3]. Nor does the lien attach to any money or security known to the banker to be affected by a trust or not to be the actual property of the customer[4], or to money paid in by a third person under mistake of fact[5]. Where securities are deposited which involve the collection of coupons or interest, the question is which component part is received for safe custody, and which is for the exercise thereon of the banker's business[6].

Bills or money paid in to meet specific cheques or bills accepted payable at the bank are not subject to the lien[7]. Whether securities deposited to cover a specific advance, and, after repayment of that advance, remaining in the banker's hands, are subject to a general lien for a balance due to the banker, seems somewhat doubtful[8].

Where, however, the security has been realised and produces more than enough to cover the specific advance, the banker's lien attaches to the surplus proceeds[9].

The banker's lien extends to bills of a customer of another bank transmitted by that bank for collection, unless the receiving banker has notice that the bills are the property of that customer[10].

Where bills, notes or cheques pass from a customer to a bank who takes them for collection, the banker is holder for value to the extent of any lien he may have[11], and has full beneficial interest to that extent[12], and may sue for the full amount, holding any surplus over the customer's indebtedness as trustee for him[13]. Where he holds as transferee, lien is excluded, but he has the ordinary rights of a holder for value, and may sue for the full amount irrespective of the customer's indebtedness, and without having to account for any balance received by him in excess of such indebtedness[14].

6 Where bonds are deposited with a banker for him to cut off the coupons and collect them, the lien probably attaches to the bonds and coupons. However, if the bonds and coupons are deposited merely for safe keeping and the customer cuts off the coupons and hands them to the banker to collect, the lien attaches to the coupons when handed to the banker, but not to the bonds.

7 Farley v Turner (1857) 26 LJ Ch 710. See also PARA 865.

8 This was doubted in Jones v Peppercorne (1858) John 430. In Wilkinson v London and County Banking Co (1884) 1 TLR 63, the House of Lords assumed that the customer was entitled to have back the securities in such a case independent of the state of account. In Re Bowes, Earl of Strathmore v Vane (1886) 33 ChD 586, North J held an agreement that a policy of insurance was to be security for £2,000 inconsistent with a general lien for a further balance of £1,000. However, in Re London and Globe Finance Corpn Ltd [1902] 2 Ch 416, Buckley J held that securities deposited as cover for specified advances remaining after discharge in a banker's hands were liable to general lien. Cf Wolstenholm v Sheffield Union Banking Co Ltd (1886) 54 LT 746, CA. It would seem that, where securities are jointly deposited to cover a joint liability, one of the depositors, on paying his share of the liability, is not entitled to the return of a proportionate amount of the securities: Coats v Union Bank of Scotland 1929 SC (HL) 114. In view of the terms of forms of charge now used this question is probably academic.

863. Sale by virtue of lien. The banker's lien is something more than an ordinary lien; it is an implied pledge[1]. The distinction is not material in the case of bills, notes and cheques, the position of holder for value enabling the banker to deal with these when due; but, in the case of other negotiable instruments, such as bearer bonds, coming into the banker's hands in circumstances rendering them liable to the lien, his character of pledgee enables the banker to sell on default if a fixed time is appointed for repayment of the advance, or, where no time is fixed, after request for repayment and reasonable notice of intention to sell[2].

1 See Brandao v Barnett (1846) 12 Cl & Fin 787 at 806 per Lord Campbell. As to lien generally see LIEN; and as to pledge generally see PLEDGES AND PAWNS.
2 Burdick v Sewell (1884) 13 QBD 159 at 174, CA, per Bowen LJ in a dissenting judgment which was upheld on appeal sub nom Sewell v Burdick (1884) 10 App Cas 74, HL; Re Morritt, ex p Official Receiver (1886) 18 QBD 222, CA; Re Richardson, Shillito v Hobson (1885) 30 ChD 396 at 403, CA, per Fry LJ; Deverges v Sandeman, Clark & Co [1902] 1 Ch 579, CA. It is desirable to give notice of intention to sell, even when a time is fixed for repayment. The statement by Lord Herschell in North Western Bank v John Poynter, Son and Macdonalds [1895] AC 56 at 69, HL, that a pledge gives no right of sale, must either have reference to Scots law, or to the absolute and immediate right of sale given in that case.

864. Banker's duty in respect of bills etc subject to lien. The fact that the banker holds bills, notes or cheques under a lien does not affect his duty as holder to present them for acceptance where necessary, and for payment in due course, and to give notice of dishonour[1]. Although there is some authority for saying that a banker who holds indorsed bills under a lien is entitled to negotiate them when the state of the customer's account renders such a course reasonable[2], it would be very unusual to do so[3].

1 This course is equally obligatory on him either as agent or holder for value. As to the duties of a holder see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 39–52 (ss 41, 45, 49, 51 as amended); and PARA 1509 et seq. As to the duties of an agent see AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 74 et seq. As to lien generally see LIEN.
2 See PARA 888.
3 However, if he holds them as transferee for value, he may, of course, deal with them in any way he likes.

(iv) Appropriation of Payments; Combining Accounts; Third Party Debt Orders

865. Repayment and appropriation. The Limitation Act 1980 imposes time limits for the bringing of proceedings[1]. The balance on a current banking account is not actionable until the customer has demanded it or part of it, and time under that Act begins to run only from the date of the demand[2]. After a lapse of time the circumstances of the case may raise a presumption of repayment[3].

On a current account, the earlier drawings out are, in the absence of appropriation, attributed to the earlier payments in[4]; and, where the money of several beneficiaries has been wrongfully mixed with a private account, their respective rights in any balance will be adjusted in accordance with this rule[5]. There are, however, exceptions to this rule; thus, where a trustee or other person in a fiduciary position has mixed sums of trust money in his private account, all drawings out are attributed to his own money so far as it will go[6], and the rule may be excluded by the terms of a guarantee[7], or, it seems, by sums being earmarked as particular property, such as a legacy[8]. The person paying the money has the primary right to say to what account it is to be appropriated; if the debtor makes no appropriation, the creditor has the right to appropriate; and, if neither exercises the right of appropriation, one may look on the matter as one of account and see how the creditor has dealt with the payment in order to ascertain how in fact he did appropriate it. If there is nothing more than a current account kept by the creditor or a particular account kept by the creditor, and he carries the money to that particular account, then the court concludes that the appropriation has been made; and, having been made, it is made once for all, and it does not lie in the mouth of the creditor afterwards to seek to vary that appropriation[9]. Money paid into a current account to meet a particular bill or cheque must be applied accordingly[10].

866. Appropriation when account guaranteed. The position and rights of a banker under a guarantee depend on the character and form of the guarantee and the parties to it[1]. A guarantee for a void debt cannot be enforced[2] unless it also takes effect as an unconditional indemnity.

Where there is a mere unbroken current account, part of which is covered by a guarantee, the other part not, as where the guarantee has been determined, there is, in the absence of appropriation, no presumption that money paid in is to be allocated to the unsecured rather than the secured portion or otherwise than in the usual sequence of payments in and out in order of date[3].

Where the guarantee is a continuing one, a guarantor has no right, in the absence of special agreement, to control the appropriation of payments into the principal debtor's account[4], so long as the banker deals with the accounts in the ordinary way of business[5].

Payments in by the principal debtor or any third party may be appropriated to a pre-existing debt of which the surety had no notice or knowledge[6]; but it would be contrary to ordinary business and good faith to open a new account during the currency of the guaranteed one, and carry all payments in to the new account[7]. On the determination of the guarantee, the banker may, however, close the account and open a new one, to which he may carry all payments in, leaving any debit on the old one to be covered by the guarantee[8]. Where an account is guaranteed to a limited extent, the banker is not entitled to split that account during the continuance of the guarantee and attribute all payments in to the unsecured balance[9].

So long as an account is unbroken, a surety ought not to be prejudiced by any departure from the rule of appropriation of items in order of date, unless he has expressly consented to such departure, or his consent may be implied from the character of his engagement[10].

867. Combination of accounts; banker's right of set-off. Unless precluded by agreement, express or implied from the course of business, the banker is entitled to combine accounts kept by the customer in his own right, even though at different branches of the same bank, and to treat the balance, if any, as the only amount really standing to his credit[1]; but the banker may not arbitrarily combine a current account with a loan account[2]. An agreement not to combine ceases to be effective as soon as the relationship of banker and customer comes to an end[3]. The customer, however, has not the equivalent right, and cannot utilise a credit balance at one branch for the purpose of drawing cheques on another branch where his account is overdrawn[4]. In the absence of agreement or course of business, and either by right of lien or set-off, the banker may retain enough on an account in credit to satisfy a debit on another kept in the same right[5].

1 Garnett v M'Kewan (1872) LR 8 Exch 10; Buckingham & Co v London and Midland Bank Ltd (1895) 12 TLR 70 (where the banker was precluded by the course of business); WP Greenhalgh & Sons v Union Bank of Manchester [1924] 2 KB 153 (banker precluded by agreement). A dictum of Swift J in WP Greenhalgh & Sons v Union Bank of Manchester above at 164, that, if a banker agrees with his customer to open two or more accounts, he has not, without the assent of the customer, any right to move either assets or liabilities from the one account to the other, the very basis of his agreement with his customer being that the two accounts are to be kept separate, was criticised by Lord Denning MR in Halesowen Presswork & Assemblies Ltd v Westminster Bank Ltd [1971] 1 QB 1 at 35, [1970] 3 All ER 473 at 478, CA; this criticism was approved by Lord Kilbrandon despite reversal of the judgment by the House of Lords sub nom National Westminster Bank Ltd v Halesowen Presswork and Assemblies Ltd [1972] AC 785 at 819, [1972] 1 All ER 641 at 661, HL. It has been held that a bank, in combining a customer's accounts, is not asserting a claim over the money in them, but is merely carrying out an accounting exercise to determine the customer's indebtedness to it or vice versa: Re K (restraint order) [1990] 2 QB 298, [1990] 2 All ER 562. 868. Equitable set-off. Where accounts are maintained in different names so that the requirement of mutuality is prima facie lacking, there may be available an equitable set-off[1] when a credit balance is really and truly the property of one person, in the name of another, who is indebted to the bank on some other account[2]. Equitable set-off will be available in such circumstances only if the court, without any terms or any further inquiry, would oblige the nominee or trustee to transfer the account into the name of the true beneficial owner[3].

869. Third party debt orders. The Civil Procedure Rules contain rules which provide for a judgment creditor to obtain an order for the payment to him of money which a third party who is within the jurisdiction owes to the judgment debtor[1]. Third party debt orders were formerly known as garnishee orders.

On the application of a judgment creditor, the court may make a final third party debt order requiring a third party to pay to the judgment creditor: (1) the amount of any debt due or accruing due to the judgment debtor from the third party; or (2) so much of that debt as is sufficient to satisfy the judgment debt and the judgment creditor's costs of the application[2]. The court must first make an interim third party debt order to fix a hearing to consider whether to make a final third party debt order and may direct that until that hearing the third party must not make any payment which reduces the amount he owes the judgment debtor to less than the amount specified in the order[3].

A bank or building society[4] served with an interim third party debt order must carry out a search to identify all accounts held with it by the judgment debtor[5]. The bank or building society must disclose to the court and the creditor within seven days of being served with the order, in respect of each account held by the judgment debtor: (a) the number of the account; (b) whether the account is in credit; (c) if the account is in credit: (i) whether the balance of the account is sufficient to cover the amount specified in the order; (ii) the amount of the balance at the date it was served with the order, if it is less than the amount specified in the order; and (iii) whether the bank or building society asserts any right to money in the account, whether pursuant to a right of set-off or otherwise, and if so giving details of the grounds for that assertion[6]. If the judgment debtor does not hold an account with the bank or building society or the bank or building society is unable to comply with the order for any other reason[7], the bank or building society must inform the court and the judgment creditor of that fact within seven days of being served with the order[8].

If the judgment debtor is an individual and he is prevented from withdrawing money from his account with a bank or building society as a result of an interim third party debt order, and he or his family is suffering hardship in meeting ordinary living expenses as a result, the court may, on an application by the judgment debtor, make an order permitting the bank or building society to make a payment or payments out of the account (a 'hardship payment order')[9]. A hardship payment order may permit the third party to make one or more payments out of the account and specify to whom the payments may be made[10].

If the judgment debtor or the third party objects to the court making a final third party debt order, he must file and serve written evidence stating the grounds for his objections[11]. If the judgment debtor or the third party knows or believes that a person other than the judgment debtor has any claim to the money specified in the interim order, he must file and serve written evidence stating his knowledge of that matter[12]. If the third party has given notice that he does not owe any money to the judgment debtor or that the amount which he owes is less than the amount specified in the interim order, and the judgment creditor wishes to dispute this, the judgment creditor must file and serve written evidence setting out the grounds on which he disputes the third party's case[13].

At the hearing the court may: (A) make a final third party debt order; (B) discharge the interim third party debt order and dismiss the application; (C) decide any issues between the parties and any other person who has a claim to the money specified in the interim order; (D) direct a trial of any such issues and if necessary give directions[14].

A final third party debt order is enforceable as an order to pay money[15]. If the third party pays money to the judgment creditor in compliance with a third party debt order, or the order is enforced against him, the third party, to the extent of the amount paid or realised by enforcement, is discharged from his debt to the judgment debtor[16]. This applies even if the third party debt order, or the original judgment or order against the judgment debtor, is later set aside[17]. It appears that a bank which receives a third party debt order will not incur liability to the creditor in tort if it negligently released the funds to the debtor himself, although it would obviously be guilty of contempt of court if it flouted the order deliberately[18].

5 CPR 72.6(1). A bank or building society served with an interim third party debt order is only required, unless the order states otherwise: (1) to retain money in accounts held solely by the judgment debtor (or, if there are joint judgment debtors, accounts held jointly by them or solely by either or any of them); and (2) to search for and disclose information about such accounts: Practice Direction—Third Party Debt Orders PD 72 PARA 3.1. The bank or building society is not required, for example, to retain money in, or disclose information about, accounts in the joint names of the judgment debtor and another person or, if the interim order has been made against a firm, accounts in the names of individual members of that firm: Practice Direction—Third Party Debt Orders PD 72 PARA 3.2. 870. Deposit accounts and withdrawable share accounts subject to third party debt orders. In deciding whether, for the purposes of the jurisdiction of the High Court to make third party debt orders, a sum standing to the credit of a person in any deposit account or any withdrawable share account with a deposit taker[1] is a sum due or accruing[2] to that person and, as such, may be made subject to a third party debt order[3], the following conditions are to be disregarded: (1) any condition applying to the account that a receipt for money deposited in the account must be produced before any money is withdrawn; (2) any condition that notice is required before any money or share is withdrawn; (3) any condition that a personal application must be made before any money or share is withdrawn; (4) any condition that a deposit book or share account book must be produced before any money or share is withdrawn; or (5) any other prescribed condition[4].

The Lord Chancellor may by order[5] make such provision as he thinks fit for all or any of the following purposes: (a) including in, or excluding from, the accounts to which the provisions described above apply accounts of any description specified in the order; (b) excluding from the accounts to which those provisions apply all accounts with any particular specified deposit taker or with any deposit taker of a specified description[6].

1 For the purposes of the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40, 'deposit taker' means a person who may, in the course of his business, lawfully accept deposits in the United Kingdom: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(6) (substituted by SI 2001/3649). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. The Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(6) must be read with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22, any relevant order under that provision, and Sch 2 (see PARA 84): Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(7) (added by SI 2001/3649). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court Act 1981 is to be renamed as the Senior Courts Act 1981: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The position is identical in the County Court: see the County Courts Act 1984 s 108; and ENFORCEMENT vol 17(1) (Reissue) PARA 252.

5 Any such order must be made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(5). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made.

6 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(4) (amended by SI 2001/3649).

871. Foreign currency subject to third party debt orders. A sum standing to the credit of a judgment debtor in a foreign currency may be made the subject of a third party debt order[1] in accordance with the following procedure:

(1) so soon as reasonably practicable after the time of service of the interim third party debt order, the bank must ascertain, at its then normal buying rate of exchange against sterling, the amount of the foreign currency balance of the judgment debtor that would, if converted at that rate, produce an amount equal to the sterling judgment debt and costs, and that amount of foreign currency as ascertained must be made subject to the order;

(2) so soon as reasonably practicable after service of the final third party debt order, the bank must purchase, at its then normal buying rate of exchange against sterling, the amount of the foreign currency, or so much as will by the application of that rate produce the sterling judgment debt and costs, and pay it into court or to the judgment creditor;

(3) in order that the final third party debt order should express the obligation of the bank under the procedure described above, the bank should inform the court of the amount of foreign currency and the rate of exchange used by the bank; and, when the order is made final, it should order the bank to pay the sterling equivalent of the foreign currency or the amount of the judgment debt and costs, whichever be the lesser[2].

872. Drawing against deposit account. It is doubtful whether valid cheques may be drawn against a deposit account at call[1]. Bankers may, however, honour such cheques, relying on a right of set-off against the money on deposit[2]. The position may be different where a course of business has been established.

1 The view expressed by Malins V-C in favour of their validity in Hopkins v Abbott (1875) LR 19 Eq 222 at 228 and Stein v Ritherdon (1868) 37 LJ Ch 369 seems inconsistent with the reasoning in Re Head, Head v Head (No 2) [1894] 2 Ch 236, CA, and finds no support in the summary of the banker's obligations given by Atkin LJ in Joachimson v Swiss Bank Corpn [1921] 3 KB 110 at 127, CA. Cf also Re Tidd, Tidd v Overell [1893] 3 Ch 154 at 156 per North J; and see Re Glendinning, Steel v Glendinning (1918) 88 LJ Ch 87.
2 See PARA 867.

(v) Statement of Account

873. Bank statements as evidence. Entries in statements of account to the credit of the customer are, when delivered to him, prima facie evidence against the banker; if such a statement is returned by the customer without objection, entries to his debit are prima facie evidence against him[1].

Where credits appear by mistake in the statement, and the customer alters his position in reliance on them, the bank cannot afterwards debit the account with the amount[2]; but, in the absence of any change of position, credits mistakenly entered may be rectified within a reasonable time[3]. However, a bank would not be permitted to retain money paid in, but omitted to be credited, even if the customer had not noticed its omission from his bank statement.

Where a bank stamps a paying-in slip counterfoil, it bears the onus of showing that a different sum was actually received from that acknowledged on the counterfoil[4].

1 For a consideration of the history of the pass-book, the predecessor to the bank statement, see Devaynes v Noble, Baring v Noble (1816) 1 Mer 529 at 535–536; Commercial Bank of Scotland v Rhind 1860 3 Macq 643. There would seem to be no reason why the law relating to pass-books should not apply equally to bank statements, but there is no authority to this effect. As to the admissibility of entries in a banker's books as evidence, including entries produced by computers, see PARA 908.

874. Effect of periodic statement. If a bank wishes to impose upon a customer an express obligation to examine periodic bank statements and to make those statements, in the absence of query, unchallengeable by the customer after expiry of a time limit, the burden of objection and of the sanction imposed must be brought home to the customer[1]. The test is undoubtedly rigorous, and is not satisfied by a contractual provision that statements are to be confirmed, and that, if not confirmed within a specified time, they may be taken by the banker as approved by the customer[2]. A fortiori, in the absence of such an obligation, the returning of a bank statement without objection does not give rise to a settled account by which both are bound[3], even where the customer, upon receipt of periodic bank statements, returns a signed confirmation slip[4].

(vi) Banker as Bailee

875. Property deposited for safe custody. Unless the undertaking of the care of valuable property[1] when required is made a condition of opening an account or offered as an inducement to do so, the position of the banker as regards any property deposited with him for custody is probably that of a bailee for value[2]. In default of agreement to the contrary, the bailment will be determinable at the will of the bailor[3]. The bailee will be bound to take the same care of the property entrusted to him as a reasonably prudent and careful person may fairly be expected to take of his own property of the like description[4]. It is submitted that this involves the employment of all the facilities at the banker's command[5]; and, in view of the facilities usually existing, the question whether the banker is a gratuitous bailee or a bailee for value does not seem material[6]. The banker's knowledge or ignorance of the nature of the goods entrusted to him does not appear to affect the question of his liability[7]. If, however, the customer misleads the banker as to the nature or value of the goods, he would presumably not be entitled to hold the banker to a greater degree of care or to a larger compensation than was consistent with his own representations. An acknowledgment that the goods are received 'for safe custody' does not increase the liability of the banker[8].

The bank is liable for loss caused by the negligence or criminal act of members of its own staff[9] carried out in the scope of their employment[10].

If goods are brought to a bank for safe custody at the place to which they are brought, the bank may be liable for their loss if removed elsewhere[11].

1 In Isaacs v Barclays Bank Ltd and Barclays Bank (France) Ltd [1943] 2 All ER 682, the question arose, but was not decided, whether the demand for the return of securities held for safe custody must be made at the branch at which they were deposited.

In the case of documents, the bank may be compelled to deliver them up: see R v Daye [1908] 2 KB 333. As to the standard of care required of bailees see Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 QB 694 at 698, [1962] 2 All ER 159 at 161, CA, per Ormerod LJ. See further BAILMENT vol 3(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 39.

5 It seems that the utilisation of available means of securing safety must be part of the care a reasonable person would take.

6 A bailee for value is bound to adopt at his own expense all reasonable safeguards. A gratuitous bailee is bound to do his best with what he has got, using the best facilities at his command, but not more. A banker invariably has safes, strong-rooms etc. Cf Queensland National Bank Ltd v P & O Steam Navigation Co [1898] 1 QB 567, CA; and see the dicta of Ormerod LJ in Houghland v RR Low (Luxury Coaches) Ltd [1962] 1 QB 694 at 698, [1962] 2 All ER 159 at 161, CA. See further BAILMENT vol 3(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 39.

7 The rule as stated was laid down in Giblin v McMullen (1868) LR 2 PC 317, without qualification as to knowledge. The facts in that case appear to point to ignorance on the part of the banker as to the nature of the goods. The presumption is that they are valuable.

876. Delivery to wrong person. Where the bank delivers the goods to the wrong person, and in consequence they are lost to the owner, the liability of the bank is absolute, though there is no element of negligence[1]. In law the banker could contract out of this liability, but he would be unlikely to do so in practice.

If the banker has suspicions as to the identity or authority of the person requiring delivery of the valuables or the genuineness of any written order produced by that person, the banker may retain the goods for a reasonable time in order to satisfy himself on these points, or, it is submitted, may decline to deliver them to the applicant, stating that he would himself send them to the owner, and doing so within a reasonable time[2].

1 The case is one of wrongful conversion of the goods, and the bank is liable for this wrongful conversion, apart from any question of negligence. This view is supported by the following authorities: Youl v Harbottle (1791) Peake 68; Stephenson v Hart (1828) 4 Bing 476 at 482 per Park J ('from the cases which have been cited it is clear that trover lies against a carrier for misfeasance in delivering a parcel to a wrong person'), and at 488 per Gaselee J ('for delivery to a wrong person a carrier is no doubt responsible in trover'); M'Kean v M'Ivor (1870) LR 6 Exch 36 at 41 per Bramwell B ('I assume that a misdelivery would have been a conversion'); Hiort v London and North Western Rly Co (1879) 4 ExD 188, CA, per Bramwell LJ; Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co v East and West India Dock Co (1880) 6 QBD 475 at 493, CA, per Bramwell LJ (affd (1882) 7 App Cas 591, HL); Bristol and West of England Bank v Midland Rly Co [1891] 2 QB 653 at 657, CA, per Lopes LJ ('delivery to a wrong person would be conversion').

The cases of Stephenson v Hart above, Duff v Budd (1822) 3 Brod & Bing 177, and Heugh v London and North Western Rly Co (1870) LR 5 Exch 51, which have been supposed to support the contrary contention, are distinguishable on the ground that in each of them there had been a refusal to accept the goods or a failure to discover the consignee; the bailee was therefore in the position of an involuntary bailee, who has the implied authority of the real owner to deal with the goods in any reasonable manner, and is therefore liable only for negligence. Those cases were explained and distinguished on this ground by Bramwell LJ in Hiort v Bott (1874) LR 9 Exch 86 at 90.

2 Such retention would not be conversion, as it involves no disregard of or interference with the owner's title: cf Hollins v Fowler (1875) LR 7 HL 757 at 766 per Blackburn J; and Clayton v Le Roy [1911] 2 KB 1031, CA.

877. Removal. A banker who receives goods for custody at his bank is not justified in removing them elsewhere for safe keeping, and may be liable for any loss occurring while they were deposited elsewhere[1].

If some of a number of similar items deposited with a bank are inadvertently sold by the bank and damages for conversion are awarded against it, the title to the goods sold vests in the bank[2].

1 Cf Lilley v Doubleday (1881) 7 QBD 510. See also A/S Rendal v Arcos Ltd [1937] 3 All ER 577, HL; and BAILMENT vol 3(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 19.
2 See United States of America and Republic of France v Dollfus Mieg et Cie SA and Bank of England [1952] AC 582, [1952] 1 All ER 572, HL (where 13 of 64 gold bars sold).

878. Securities held for a foreign bank. If bonds are held in London to the order of a foreign bank for the account of a foreign national, there is no contractual relationship between him and the English bank[1]. If by the proper law of the bailment of the bonds to the foreign bank the bailor is not entitled to delivery of the bonds, the English bank, as bailee of the foreign bank, will not be compelled to deliver them up[2]. Similarly, if the delivery of the bonds would involve the foreign bank in doing an act abroad which was illegal[3] there, the English courts will not enforce delivery by a London branch of that bank[4].

The illegality, both in this case and in the case cited in note 4, was under national foreign exchange laws, which were not of such a penal or confiscatory nature as that they should be disregarded in England: see Kahler v Midland Bank Ltd above at 28 and 624 per Lord Simonds. It may, however, be argued that no effect should have been given to those laws because they did not form a point of the law applicable to the contract at issue.

(vii) Collection of Cheques etc; Protection and Duties of Collecting Banker

879. Cheques. A cheque is a bill of exchange drawn on a banker, payable on demand[1]. A bearer cheque is one expressed to be payable to a particular person or bearer[2], or to bearer; or a cheque on which the only or last indorsement is in blank[3]. An order cheque is one which is expressed to be so payable, or which is expressed to be payable to a particular person or body and does not contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it should not be transferable[4]. A cheque payable to the order of a particular person, and not to him or his order, is nevertheless payable to him or his order at his option[5]. A cheque may be crossed either generally[6] or specially[7].

A warrant given by the Registrar of Government Stock for making any payment on the exchange of government securities[8] is deemed to be a cheque[9] and is exempt from stamp duty[10].

1 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 73. See PARAS 1405, 1410. In general, the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 applicable to bills of exchange payable on demand apply to cheques: s 73. As to the nature of a cheque see also Thairlwall v Great Northern Rly Co [1910] 2 KB 509, DC; and PARA 898 note 14. Banker's drafts are not cheques: see PARA 896. As to the meaning of 'bill of exchange' see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 3(1); and PARA 1405. As to cheque guarantee cards see PARA 903; and as to credit cards and charge cards see PARAS 904–905.

880. Crossing of cheques. The rules for the negotiation of bills and notes apply generally to cheques[1], with this addition, that the negotiation of a cheque may be affected by 'crossing' it. This is done by drawing two parallel transverse lines across the face of the cheque. If the lines are drawn simply, or if the words 'and company' or any abbreviation are written within them, with or without the addition in either case of the words 'not negotiable', the cheque is said to be crossed generally; and in that case a holder who desires to receive payment of the cheque must present it through a banker[2]. However it should be noted that cheques are usually pre-printed with an 'account payee' or 'a/c payee' crossing with the result that the cheque is not transferable (and hence not negotiable): such an instrument is valid only as between the parties to it[3].

If within the transverse lines there is written the name of a banker, with or without the words 'not negotiable', the cheque is said to be crossed specially, and to the banker named; and in that case a holder who desires to receive payment of the cheque must present it through that banker[4].

The drawer of a cheque may, if he wishes, cross it either generally or specially[5]. The holder may: (1) if the cheque is uncrossed, cross it either generally or specially; (2) if the cheque is crossed generally, add the name of a banker so as to convert the general crossing into a special one; and (3) in either case, add the words 'not negotiable'[6].

A banker: (a) to whom a cheque is crossed specially may cross it specially to another banker for collection; or (b) to whom a cheque that is uncrossed or crossed generally is sent for collection may cross it specially to himself[7].

1 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 73; and PARA 879. As to rules regarding negotiation of bills and notes see generally PARA 1401 et seq.

2 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 76(1). As to ss 76, 77 see also PARA 1411. The crossed cheques provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 (ss 76–81) extend to any document issued by a customer of a banker which, though not a bill of exchange, is intended to enable a person to obtain payment of the sum mentioned from that banker, any document issued by a public officer and intended to enable a person to obtain payment of the sum mentioned from the Paymaster General or the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, and any banker's draft: Cheques Act 1957 ss 4(2), 5 (s 4(2) amended by the Cheques Act 1992 s 3). See also PARA 1411. As to the Paymaster General and the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 714; COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 654.

It is unclear whether a cheque made payable to 'order' may be made non-transferable: National Bank v Silke [1891] 1 QB 435, CA. The judgments in this case have been read as implying that the 'not negotiable' crossing prohibited transfer. Such is clearly not the case: cf the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 81, which limits negotiability, not transferability (see PARA 838); Great Western Rly Co v London and County Banking Co Ltd [1901] AC 414, HL.

For a description of the operation of the clearing system see Barclays Bank plc v Bank of England [1985] 1 All ER 385.

As to cheques marked 'account payee' see PARA 895. See also note 3.

3 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 81A; and PARAS 836, 895, 1500.

4 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 76(2). Transverse parallel lines, although usual, are not necessary in a specially crossed cheque. The words 'not negotiable' do not by themselves constitute a crossing: see PARA 838.

5 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 77(1).

6 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 77(2), (3), (4). The holder includes the payee: see s 2; and PARA 837 note 5. See also RE Jones Ltd v Waring and Gillow Ltd [1926] AC 670, HL (in which the contention of Fletcher Moulton LJ in Lloyds Bank Ltd v Cooke [1907] 1 KB 794, CA, that a named payee could be holder in due course was finally disapproved). The term 'holder' also includes a banker who is a mere agent for collection: Sutters v Briggs [1922] 1 AC 1, HL.

7 Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 77(5), (6). As to the duties and rights of bankers in regard to crossed cheques see ss 79, 80; the Cheques Act 1957 s 4; Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240; and PARAS 838–839, 882. A bank which, acting as mere agent to collect, forwards a customer's cheque to the paying bank is a holder of the cheque, and accordingly, if the cheque is crossed generally, may cross it specially: Akrokerri (Atlantic) Mines Ltd v Economic Bank [1904] 2 KB 465; and see the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 77(3). See also Sutters v Briggs [1922] 1 AC 1, HL.

881. Duties of a collecting banker. In collecting cheques and other instruments for a customer[1], a banker acts basically as a mere agent or conduit to receive payment of the cheques from the banker on whom they are drawn and to hold the proceeds at the disposal of his customer[2].

The character in which a banker receives a cheque is a matter of fact in each case: he may be a mere collecting agent, or he may take as a holder for value or in due course[3].

As agent for collection he is bound to exercise diligence in the presentation of the cheque for payment. He fulfils his duty if, when the cheque is drawn on a bank in the same place, he presents it the day after receipt[4], or, when it is drawn on a bank in another place, he either presents it or forwards it on the day following receipt[5]. The forwarding may be to another branch or to an agent of the bank[6], who has the same time after receipt in which to present. A non-clearing bank may so utilise a clearing bank; but in any case the bank which has received the cheque from its customer remains liable to him for default of its agent[7]. Where presentation is made through the inter-bank clearing system, the presenting bank's responsibility to its customer in respect of the collection of the cheque is discharged only when the cheque is physically delivered to that branch of the paying bank for decision whether it should be paid or not[8]. Presentation by post is sufficient[9]; and it would appear that, when a bank forwards a cheque by post to the bank on which it is drawn, the latter receives it as agent for presentment to itself[10], and in that capacity may hold it till the day after receipt.

Where a cheque drawn by one customer of a bank is received from another customer, it is a question of fact whether it was presented for payment or paid in for collection. If the latter, the bank has the usual time of an agent for giving notice of dishonour[11], but must pay in preference to a debt due to itself from the drawing customer[12].

If a banker fails to present a cheque within a reasonable time after it reaches him, he is liable to his customer for loss arising from the delay[13]. The indorsers, if any, are discharged if presentation is not made within reasonable time after indorsement[14]. Where a cheque is not presented within a reasonable time of its issue, the drawer is discharged to the extent of any actual damage he may have suffered by the failure to pay of the bank on which the cheque was drawn[15].

A banker receiving instruments delivered to him for collection and credit to a customer's account may collect solely for the customer or for himself or both. Where he collects for the customer, he may be liable in conversion if his customer has no title but, provided that he collects in good faith and without negligence, he may plead statutory protection[16]; the cause of action is conversion or money had and received and entails ultimately choosing between a claim based on the tort and a claim based on an implied contract[17]. If the banker collects for himself, he needs no such protection unless the instrument is affected by forgery[18]. He can be both an agent for collection and a holder for value at the same time[19].

1 As to the customer see PARA 883.
2 Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL. A bank receiving a cheque from an individual to purchase shares or return it does not owe a duty of care to the bank against which the cheque is drawn not to lose it: Yorkshire Bank plc v Lloyds Bank plc [1999] 2 All ER (Comm) 153. 16 Ie under the Cheques Act 1957 s 4: see PARA 882. It is arguable that negligence as a tort is different from the negligence which it is the statutory duty of a collecting banker to avoid under s 4. It has been argued (see Arrow Transfer Co Ltd v Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce [1971] 3 WWR 241, BC CA) that collection of a cheque which is forged and which is a sham and outside the Cheques Act 1957 s 4 gives rise to liability for negligence although the contrary may well be the law. 882. Protection of collecting banker. Where a banker in good faith and without negligence[1] receives payment for a customer[2] of a cheque and the customer has no title or a defective title to the cheque, the banker does not incur any liability to the true owner of the cheque by reason only of having received such payment[3]. The banker is not to be treated[4] as having been negligent by reason only of his failure to concern himself with absence of, or irregularity in, indorsement of the cheque or other instrument[5].

Where this statutory protection attaches, it covers the receipt of the cheque and every step taken in the ordinary course of business and intended to lead up to the receipt of payment[6], such as stamping the bank identification stamp on the cheque. It has been suggested[7] that the protection did not extend to cheques obtained by 'larceny or analogous felony'[8], but it is submitted that this suggestion is unfounded[9].

1 See PARA 884.

2 See PARA 883.

3 Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1)(a), (2)(a). See also PARA 1411. This includes cheques which under the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 81A(1) (see PARA 895) or otherwise are not transferable: Cheques Act 1957 s 4(2)(a) (amended by the Cheques Act 1992 s 3). A banker who, having credited his customer's account with the amount of a cheque, receives payment of it for himself, has the same protection as a banker who receives payment for a customer: Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1)(b), (2)(a). Section 4 applies not only to cheques, but also to: (1) any document issued by a banker's customer which, though not a bill of exchange, is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from that banker of the sum mentioned in the document (see s 4(2)(b); and PARAS 898, 900–901); (2) any document issued by a public officer which is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from the Paymaster General or the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer of the sum mentioned in the document but which is not a bill of exchange (see s 4(2)(c); and PARA 898 note 5); and (3) any draft payable on demand drawn by a banker upon himself, whether payable at the head office or at some other office of his bank (see s 4(2)(d); and PARA 896). As to the Paymaster General and the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 714; COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 654. See Honourable Society of the Middle Temple v Lloyds Bank plc [1999] 1 All ER (Comm) 193.

A bank may be entitled to the protection of the Cheques Act 1957 s 4 even though the payee was a different entity from the account holder, so long as there appears to be a significant match: see Architects of Wine Ltd v Barclays Bank plc [2007] EWCA Civ 239, [2007] 2 All ER (Comm) 285.

6 Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240 at 244, HL, per Lord Macnaghten. This view is not seriously affected by the dictum in Taxation Comrs v English Scottish and Australian Bank Ltd [1920] AC 683 at 688, PC.

7 Dicta of Lord Halsbury and Lord Brampton in Great Western Rly Co v London and County Banking Co Ltd [1901] AC 414, HL, have been taken to imply this.

8 The offence of larceny is replaced by that of theft: see the Theft Act 1968 ss 1, 33(3), Sch 3; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 282. The distinction between felony and misdemeanour was removed by the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1: see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 49.

9 The customer cannot have less than no title, the contingency against which the banker is protected under the Cheques Act 1957 s 4 (replacing the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82 (repealed)).

883. Receipt for customer. To entitle the banker to protection he must receive payment for a customer[1], but he may receive payment for himself and yet be entitled to the protection where, acting in a purely collecting capacity, he has nevertheless a lien or is otherwise a holder for value[2]. It seems that, in order to be a customer, a person need not have habitual dealings with the banker in the nature of ordinary banking business and that an isolated transaction may be enough to create the relationship of banker and customer[3], but the continued cashing of crossed cheques over the counter from which the bank derives no direct benefit does not constitute such a relationship[4].

The existence of a current account creates the relationship of banker and customer between the bank and the owner of the account[5], as does the existence of a deposit account[6]. However, the banker may be entitled to the statutory protection before the account is opened provided that it is intended that the account should be opened after the normal preliminaries have been completed[7].

It will probably be enough to create the relationship of banker and customer if the customer habitually discounts bills at the bank. A first transaction, such as the payment in of a cheque to open an account, is protected[8]. If a person is not a customer, his drawing a counter cheque, or the entry of the transaction in the banker's books under such a heading as 'Sundry Customers', is of no avail[9]. A person is a customer although his account is overdrawn[10]. One bank may be a customer of another bank[11].

Where a crossed cheque drawn on one office of a bank is paid in by a customer at another branch, and is credited in his account, the bank is protected both as a collecting and as a paying bank[12]. This is so also where the cheque is paid in for the credit of an account at the branch where the drawer's account is kept, though in order to avoid liability the bank must bring itself within both the protection afforded to a collecting bank and that afforded to a paying bank[13].

1 Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1)(a). See also PARA 1002. The protection conferred by s 4 (see PARA 882) is conferred on a banker who receives payment for a customer, that is, who receives payment as an agent for collection; the bank should be 'a mere conduit pipe for conveying the cheque to the bank on which it is drawn and receiving the money from that bank for their customer': Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240 at 245–246, HL, per Lord Macnaghten. 884. Acting in good faith and without negligence. If the collecting banker wishes to plead the statutory protection, his dealings throughout must be in good faith and without negligence[1]. Negligence in this connection is breach of a duty to the possible true owner, not the customer, created by the statute itself, the duty being not to disregard the interests of the true owner[2]. The test of negligence is whether the transaction of paying in any given cheque coupled with the circumstances antecedent and present is so out of the ordinary course that it ought to arouse doubts in the banker's mind and cause him to make inquiries[3]. In discharging his contractual duties in crediting an account with a dividend, a banker is not obliged to consider the tax implications of the matter[4]. He is bound to make inquiries when there is anything to raise suspicion that the cheque is being wrongfully dealt with in being paid into the customer's account[5], but is not called upon to be abnormally suspicious[6].

Disregard of the bank's own regulations may be evidence of negligence[7]; and the production of a certificate under the Registration of Business Names Act 1916 (now the Business Names Act 1985)[8] has been held sufficient to satisfy a banker put on inquiry[9].

A bank is not liable for acts of negligence if these are induced or encouraged by the conduct of the true owner[10]. The banker cannot adduce pressure of exigencies of business or shortage of staff to modify what, in ordinary circumstances, would be negligence[11], but he may plead contributory negligence on the part of the customer in mitigation of damages[12].

A banker's failure to concern himself with the absence of, or an irregularity in, indorsement does not, by itself, constitute negligence[13].

It may be negligent not to make inquiries as to a customer upon opening an account and collecting a cheque for him[14]. Unless the reference obtained in respect of a customer renders it superfluous, inquiry ought to be made concerning the character and circumstances of the customer[15].

Fluctuations in the account may be a circumstance putting the bank upon inquiry[16].

1 See the Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1). As to the statutory protection see PARA 882. Section 4(1) specifically mentions only the receipt of the money, but negligence in taking the cheque has always been held to preclude protection as necessarily involving the subsequent receipt. 885. When proceeds available. Where cheques are collected, the banker has a reasonable time, consistent with ordinary book-keeping, in which to pass the proceeds to current account before they are available for drawing against[1]. Where cheques are credited as cash prior to receipt of payment, the customer is entitled to draw on them at once only if there is an agreement, express or implied, to that effect[2]. If a cheque received for collection is dishonoured, or if the banker has to account to the true owner for the proceeds[3], the banker is entitled to debit the customer's account accordingly[4].

886. Duties consequent upon dishonour. If a cheque is dishonoured on presentation, the collecting banker may debit the customer's account with the amount[1]. He must give due notice of dishonour[2] either to the parties liable on the cheque, or to his principal, the customer[3]. The usual course is to return the cheque to the customer, and this is deemed sufficient notice of dishonour[4]. Branches of the same bank are held to be separate persons for the transmission of notice of dishonour[5].

Where a cheque drawn by one customer of a bank is paid in for collection by another customer, and there are not sufficient funds to meet it, the banker still has until the next day in which to return it[6].

1 This is the universal custom of bankers, apparently recognised by Lord Lindley in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240 at 248, HL. See also Re Mills, Bawtree & Co, ex p Stannard (1893) 10 Morr 193.

887. Duties and liabilities of banker collecting bills. If a banker undertakes the collection of bills[1] for a customer, he is bound to present them for acceptance and payment in accordance with the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[2], and must give notice of dishonour to his customer if they are dishonoured[3]. Where collection is undertaken at the customer's risk, under an agreement relieving the bank from all liability, the banker will be exempt from liability for the negligence of his agent[4]. If the banker employs a sub-agent for collection, he is responsible to the customer for negligence on the part of the sub-agent[5], but has a remedy against the sub-agent.

A banker who collects a bill to which his customer has no title is liable to the true owner in conversion or for money had and received to the face value of the bill, and has no statutory protection whatever[6].

Money received on a bill by a sub-agent is in law received by the banker, apart from any question of account between him and the sub-agent[7]. A banker receiving bills for collection from another banker is agent for the remitting banker, not for that banker's customer; unless, therefore, the banker has distinct notice that the bills are the property of the customer, they may be treated as the property of the remitting banker[8], and are subject to a lien for any balance due from the latter[9].

In Akrokerri (Atlantic) Mines Ltd v Economic Bank [1904] 2 KB 465 at 471, Bigham J used expressions with regard to cheques to the effect that collection was inconsistent with lien. This is clearly not the case: see PARA 860 note 3.

888. Negotiation of bills by banker. A banker is not justified in negotiating bills, whether indorsed by the customer or not, which have been paid in for collection[1], at any rate unless the state of the customer's account renders it a reasonable thing to do so[2]. Since 'account payee' cheques are no longer transferable in any event[3] issues of this kind will not now arise in practice.

2 Negotiation in some such circumstances is clearly contemplated in Thompson v Giles (1824) 2 B & C 422: see at 429 per Bayley J ('the banker could only be justified in negotiating them when that was rendered a reasonable course by the state of the customer's account'); see also at 432 per Holroyd J. Cf Re Harrison, ex p Barkworth (1858) 2 De G & J 194. It is submitted, however, that the right arises only when there has been agreement, express or implied, that the bills may be so dealt with on contingencies which have arisen. The proper course is to hold and collect the bills when due and retain the proceeds by virtue of set-off. See also PARA 864.

3 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 81A; and PARAS 836, 1500.

889. Defective title of customer. If the customer for whom a banker collects has no title, or a defective title, prima facie the banker is liable to the true owner[1] for conversion or for money had and received to the face value of the cheque[2]; but if in collecting he acts in good faith and without negligence, he may claim statutory protection[3]. There is no difference in this respect between crossed and uncrossed cheques[4]. If the banker cannot establish the statutory protection, the damages may be reduced where the true owner also has been negligent[5]. Where, however, conversion will not lie, as where the collection has been for a customer having a revocable title unrevoked at the time the money was received and handed over, the banker will be protected as an innocent agent who has parted with the money to his principal before notice[6].

890. Bank as holder for value. A banker who is asked by a customer to collect a cheque and who, pursuant to a contract express or implied to do so, credits the customer forthwith with the amount of the cheque before the proceeds are received, in fact receives the sum for himself and not for the customer[1]; but he has the same statutory protection in such circumstances as if he had received payment of the cheque for the customer[2]. Where there is no question of a forged indorsement or of the 'not negotiable' or 'account payee' crossings, the banker may, in the case of both crossed and uncrossed cheques, escape liability for conversion if he can establish an independent title as holder in due course[3]. Every holder is deemed to be a holder in due course; but if the instrument is shown to be affected by fraud, a banker dealing with it must show that he gave value in good faith subsequent to the fraud[4]. The status of holder for value may be claimed by the bank in the following circumstances: where cash has been given for the cheque over the counter; where the cheque is paid in in reduction of an overdraft[5]; where the cheque is paid in on the footing that it may be at once drawn against[6], whether in fact it is drawn against or not[7]; or where the cheque is subject to a lien[8]. The mere existence of an overdraft, though the banker's lien in respect of it makes him a holder for value to the extent of that lien[9], would not preclude the statutory protection[10].

Where, by any of the above methods, the banker becomes holder in due course of a cheque paid in, he has all the rights of such a holder, including that of suing the parties to it in his own name[11].

The banker may perhaps also escape liability if he can show that the proceeds of the cheque have in fact reached the hands of the true owner, or been applied for his benefit[12].

Prior to the passing of the Cheques Act 1957, the absence of an indorsement was fatal to any claim to be holding for value or in due course, for the possessor was no holder at all[13] unless the cheque was drawn payable to bearer. The Cheques Act 1957 did away with the necessity for indorsement. A banker who gives value for, or has a lien on, a cheque payable to order which the holder delivers to him for collection without indorsing it has such, if any, rights as he would have had if, upon delivery, the holder had indorsed the cheque in blank[14]. A banker taking such a cheque is the holder of it[15] and, if the requisite conditions are present, a holder for value or in due course. It is not essential that the cheque be credited to the account of the holder[16].

1 This is so because, by crediting the customer with the money before receiving it, the bank has become a holder for value: see Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240 at 245, HL, per Lord Macnaghten ('It is impossible, I think, to say that a banker is merely receiving payment for his customer and a mere agent for collection when he receives payment of a cheque of which he is the holder for value'). See also note 10. The conditions for becoming a holder for value in these circumstances are explained by Atkin LJ in AL Underwood Ltd v Barclays Bank [1924] 1 KB 775 at 805–806, CA. Cf Westminster Bank Ltd v Zang [1966] AC 182, [1966] 1 All ER 114, HL.

6 National Bank v Silke [1891] 1 QB 435 at 439, CA, per Bowen LJ. It does not appear essential that the cheque should actually be drawn against before clearance: see the cases cited in PARA 891 note 2. In Westminster Bank Ltd v Zang [1966] AC 182, [1966] 1 All ER 114, HL, the bank had reserved, on its paying-in slips, the right to refuse payment against uncleared effects, and this was held to preclude there being any implied agreement that the customer could draw against uncleared effects.

10 Clarke v London and County Banking Co [1897] 1 QB 552. The banker might be said to have waived his lien on the cheque, presented it on behalf of the customer, and retained the proceeds by virtue of his right of set-off. As to set-off see PARAS 868, 1012. Cf Great Western Rly Co v London and County Banking Co Ltd [1900] 2 QB 464 at 476, CA, per Romer LJ (revsd on appeal [1901] AC 414, HL, but without overruling Clarke v London and County Banking Co above). The courts gradually rescued the collecting banker from the apparent conflict indicated in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240 at 245, HL, per Lord Macnaghten (see note 1). It is now accepted that a collecting banker may collect for a customer and plead the protection of the Cheques Act 1957 s 4 (see PARA 882), even though the bank is a holder in due course of the cheque or a holder for value to the extent of his lien: see Re Keever, ex p Cork v Midland Bank Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep 475; Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 QB 527, [1970] 1 All ER 719.

For these purposes, a copy of such a cheque is evidence of the cheque if: (1) the copy is made by the banker in whose possession the cheque is after presentment; and (2) it is certified by him to be a true copy of the original: Cheques Act 1957 s 3(2) (added by SI 1996/2993).

891. Crediting as cash. The mere fact that the banker has credited the cheque in his customer's account before receiving the proceeds does not deprive him of protection against the true owner in the event of his customer having no title, or a defective title, to the cheque[1]. Crediting the customer's account does not of itself alter the position of the banker from that of agent for collection to that of holder for value. It is a question of fact in each case. In order to constitute the banker a holder for value on this ground there must be a contract, express or implied, that the customer should be entitled to draw against the amount of the cheque before it is cleared[2].

If the banker becomes a holder for value, he may, in the absence of a forged indorsement and unless the cheque is crossed 'not negotiable' or 'account payee', sue upon a cheque in his own name as a holder in due course[3], and may debit the customer if the cheque is dishonoured[4]. He may apparently plead that he is a holder for value as against the person claiming as true owner, except where the indorsement is forged or the cheque is marked 'not negotiable' or 'account payee'.

1 See the Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1); and PARA 882. This provision replaces the combined effect of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82 and the Bills of Exchange (Crossed Cheques) Act 1906, the latter of which was passed in consequence of the decision in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL (see note 2; and PARA 890 note 1). It would seem that a banker who was a mere agent for collection was always within the protection of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82 (repealed): see the judgments of Bigham J in Akrokerri (Atlantic) Mines Ltd v Economic Bank [1904] 2 KB 465, and Channell J in Bevan v National Bank Ltd (1906) 23 TLR 65. It may be that the protection extends to a banker who has become a holder in due course: see Sutters v Briggs [1922] 1 AC 1 at 15, HL, per Lord Birkenhead LC; Re Keever, ex p Cork v Midland Bank Ltd [1966] 2 Lloyd's Rep 475; Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 QB 527, [1970] 1 All ER 719. A contract between the banker and the customer that the banker will, before receipt of the proceeds of the cheques, honour cheques of the customer drawn against the cheques paid in is enough to constitute the banker a holder for value: see AL Underwood Ltd v Bank of Liverpool and Martin's [1924] 1 KB 775 at 805, CA per Atkin LJ; Westminster Bank Ltd v Zang [1966] AC 182, [1966] 1 All ER 114, HL.

These cases explain the meaning of the judgment in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL. A banker who is an agent for collection has been held to be a 'holder' within the meaning of the Gaming Act 1835 s 2 (repealed): Sutters v Briggs [1922] 1 AC 1, HL. See also Westminster Bank Ltd v Zang [1966] AC 182, [1966] 1 All ER 114, HL; Barclays Bank Ltd v Astley Industrial Trust Ltd [1970] 2 QB 527, [1970] 1 All ER 719. 892. Per pro indorsement. A per pro indorsement[1] puts the collecting banker on inquiry as to the authority of the person making it, and disregard of this intimation is a matter for consideration in determining the question of negligence, but not where the instrument so indorsed is paid in for the credit of the claimant's account[2]. Failure to inquire as to the authority of the signatory will not, of itself, constitute negligence[3]. The inquiry must include not only the authority to indorse, but the authority to deal with the indorsed cheque in the manner proposed[4]. The principle is not limited to signatures 'per pro'. Any cheque purporting to be indorsed in a representative capacity stands on the same footing[5]. Where the indorsement is authorised, the banker is not affected by the existence of unfulfilled conditions[6]; and where the indorsement and application are authorised, he is not liable for misapplication of the proceeds in the absence of any ground of suspicion[7].

1 A per pro signature is a signature by procuration (per procurationem); it operates as notice that the agent has only a limited authority to sign: Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 25. See also PARA 1474.

893. Cheques payable to officials. Any indication that the customer is using for his own benefit a document prima facie created for the benefit of, and being the property of, another person with whom he stands in fiduciary relationship should put the banker on inquiry[1]. Under this head would come cheques payable to secretaries of companies or charitable institutions, and the like, in their official capacities, and cheques payable to a partnership and indorsed by one partner paying in to his private account[2]. It would ordinarily be negligent for a banker to take such cheques without inquiry for private account. It would perhaps be negligence to take for the private account of one executor a cheque payable to executors as such[3]. It has been held that the fact that cheques paid in by a stockbroker may possibly represent money of his clients in his hands does not necessarily put a banker on inquiry[4].

It is equally negligence where the information which should put the bank on inquiry is divided between two offices of the same bank, as where a cheque is paid into one branch to the credit of an account at another[5].

1 Hannan's Lake View Central Ltd v Armstrong & Co (1900) 16 TLR 236 (where the secretary of a company indorsed a cheque payable to the company and paid it into a private account); Ross v London County, Westminster and Parr's Bank Ltd [1919] 1 KB 678; Souchette Ltd v London County, Westminster and Parr's Bank Ltd (1920) 36 TLR 195; AL Underwood Ltd v Bank of Liverpool and Martin's [1924] 1 KB 775, CA; Lloyds Bank Ltd v Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China [1929] 1 KB 40, CA; Slingsby v District Bank Ltd [1932] 1 KB 544, CA; Motor Traders Guarantee Corpn Ltd v Midland Bank Ltd [1937] 4 All ER 90; Marquess of Bute v Barclays Bank Ltd [1955] 1 QB 202, [1954] 3 All ER 365. Statutory protection is given to banks in relation to solicitors' client accounts: see PARA 826.

2 Bevan v National Bank Ltd (1906) 23 TLR 65. The position may be different from that of a partner drawing on a partnership account and paying into a private account: see Backhouse v Charlton (1878) 8 ChD 444. The suggestion was repudiated by Mackinnon J in London and Montrose Shipbuilding and Repairing Co Ltd v Barclays Bank Ltd (1926) 31 Com Cas 67 (affd 31 Com Cas 182, CA) that a bank was put on inquiry where it collected for the indorsee a cheque payable to a limited company and indorsed over to that indorsee.

3 Cf, however, Shields v Bank of Ireland [1901] 1 IR 222 (where the court appears to have seen nothing irregular in an executor paying executorship money into his private account).

4 Thomson v Clydesdale Bank Ltd [1893] AC 282, HL.

5 Lloyds Bank Ltd v EB Savory & Co [1933] AC 201, HL. However, in Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1992] 4 All ER 409, [1989] 1 WLR 1340, CA, the customer's expert witness agreed that if a number of different cashiers handle a particular account, it would be impossible for any one cashier to build up a reliable indication of what the ordinary pattern of transactions on that account was.

894. 'Not negotiable'. It has been suggested that the fact that a cheque is crossed 'not negotiable' of itself puts the banker on inquiry[1]; but it is submitted that such is not the case[2].

Where a cheque is crossed 'not negotiable', the banker cannot avail himself of the defence that he dealt with the cheque pending revocation of a voidable title in the customer[3].

1 Great Western Rly Co v London and County Banking Co Ltd [1901] AC 414 at 422, HL, per Lord Brampton; and see Morison v London, County and Westminster Bank Ltd [1914] 3 KB 356 at 373, CA, per Lord Reading CJ. Cf Bevan v National Bank Ltd (1906) 23 TLR 65 at 67 per Channell J.

2 These words being merely part of the crossing, negligence in respect of a crossed cheque must be something outside the crossing. This particular crossing being for the protection of the public, the banker is entitled to correlative protection. In Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL, Lord Brampton's view (see note 1) was either not pressed or not adopted. Cf that case in the Court of Appeal sub nom Gordon v Capital and Counties Bank Ltd [1902] 1 KB 242 at 275 and Crumplin v London Joint Stock Bank Ltd (1913) 109 LT 856 (where a banker taking a 'not negotiable' cheque without making inquiries was held not guilty of negligence). In Smith and Baldwin v Barclays Bank Ltd (1944) 5 Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers 370, Stable J held that an instrument in the form of a cheque, crossed 'not negotiable' and over the crossing 'please pay cash', was none the less a crossed cheque, and that the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82 could be pleaded. Section 82 has been repealed and replaced by the Cheques Act 1957 s 4 which applies to uncrossed as well as crossed cheques: see s 4, s 6(3), Schedule (repealed); and PARA 882.

3 As to this defence in the case of other cheques see Tate v Wilts and Dorset Bank (1899) 1 Legal Decisions Affecting Bankers 286. However, see the doubt cast upon this case by Sankey LJ in Lloyds Bank Ltd v Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China [1929] 1 KB 40 at 68, CA. As to the exclusion of the defence by non-negotiable crossing cf Great Western Rly Co v London and County Banking Co Ltd [1901] AC 414, HL.

895. 'Account payee'. Where a cheque is crossed and bears across its face the words 'account payee' or 'a/c payee', either with or without the word 'only', the cheque is not transferable, but is only valid as between the parties to it[1]. A banker is not to be treated[2] as having been negligent by reason only of his failure to concern himself with any purported indorsement of a cheque which is not transferable[3].

Where a bank acts as agent for collection for a foreign bank of a cheque crossed 'account payee', the test[4] is whether there was anything in the circumstances which was noticed or which ought to have been noticed; if so, the bank is on inquiry and may not be able to discharge its onus of proving the absence of negligence[5].

896. Drafts drawn by bank on itself. Drafts payable on demand drawn by a branch office on the head office of the same bank, or vice versa, are not cheques[1], not being drawn by one person on another[2], but the crossed cheques provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[3] apply to the drafts as if they were cheques[4]. Such a draft is one payable on demand and drawn by or on behalf of a bank upon itself, whether payable at the head office or some other office of the bank[5]. It is presumably negotiable[6]. It is also 'a draft or order drawn upon a banker' within the Stamp Act 1853[7], and, if payable to order on demand, the issuing banker is protected if he pays in good faith, notwithstanding that the indorsement is forged or unauthorised[8]. Payment operates as a discharge[9]. A banker receiving payment in circumstances amounting to conversion is liable to the true owner[10] for the face value unless he can bring himself within the protection of the Cheques Act 1957[11]. A paying bank is protected if it has paid such drafts on a forged indorsement where they are payable to order on demand[12], whether the draft be inland or foreign[13], or if it is paying in good faith and in the ordinary course of business in the absence of an indorsement or on an irregular indorsement[14].

Drafts between two branches or between a branch and head office of the same bank may not be issued payable to bearer on demand[15].

Drafts of the above nature payable to order on demand may be crossed[16]. The protection against forged indorsements, in respect of uncrossed drafts, would generally be sufficient for the paying bank[17].

If such a draft bearing a crossing is presented for payment across the counter, the banker may refuse to pay it[18], but the holder may sue the bank either as drawer of a bill or maker of a promissory note[19].

4 Cheques Act 1957 s 5 (replacing the Bills of Exchange Act (1882) Amendment Act 1932). The Cheques Act 1957 ss 1, 4 apply to banker's drafts: see ss 1(2)(b), 4(2)(d); note 14; and PARA 882. See also PARA 1411.
5 See the Cheques Act 1957 ss 1(2)(b), 4(2)(d). The meaning of 'banker's draft' was formerly explicitly set out in the Bills of Exchange Act (1882) Amendment Act 1932 (repealed by the Cheques Act 1957 Schedule).
6 See the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 5(2). Thus, in the absence of a forged indorsement, an independent title may be set up where circumstances admit.

12 Stamp Act 1853 s 19; Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL.

13 It has been contended that the Stamp Act 1853 s 19 can apply only to inland drafts, but the enactment, though in the form of a proviso, is general in its terms. The fact that it is a proviso does not prevent its being a substantive enactment: Matthiessen v London and County Bank (1879) 5 CPD 7. The Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act 1925 s 139 (repealed), referred to the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 60 (which gives a similar protection to bankers in the case of drafts or orders which are bills of exchange or cheques), as relating to 'the indorsement of drafts or orders drawn upon bankers for the payment of money', without specifying inland drafts. In Brown Brough & Co v National Bank of India Ltd (1902) 18 TLR 669, Bigham J clearly thought the Stamp Act 1853 s 19 applied to foreign drafts, and his ruling was not dissented from by the House of Lords in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240.

14 See the Cheques Act 1957 s 1(2), by which, where a banker, in good faith and in the ordinary course of business, pays a draft payable on demand drawn by him upon himself, whether payable at the head office or some other office of his bank, he does not, in doing so, incur any liability by reason only of the absence of or irregularity in indorsement, and the payment discharges the instrument. 897. Drafts drawn by one bank on another. Drafts drawn by one bank on another are normally merely cheques, and may in all respects be dealt with as such[1].

1 See PARA 879 et seq. As to drafts drawn by a bank on itself see PARA 896.

898. Orders for payment. An order for payment drawn by a customer on his banker payable conditionally[1] on the payee's signing a special attached receipt is not a cheque[2]; nor is an instrument in the form of a cheque which is drawn in favour of 'cash' or 'wages' or other impersonal payee[3].

Such documents are not negotiable[4]; but they are documents issued by a customer which, though not bills of exchange, are intended to enable a person to obtain payment from the banker of the sum mentioned in them[5].

The crossing on such documents has generally been regarded as affording both collecting and paying bankers the same protection as the crossing on cheques, and as imposing the same duties on the latter[6]. If the collecting banker has received the amount payable under any of such documents in circumstances constituting conversion of the document, he is liable to the true owner for the face value[7], unless he can bring himself within the protection of the Cheques Act 1957[8].

It would seem not to be regarded as negligence in a banker to take these documents for collection for a party other than the named payee[9]. Beyond this, their transferability would seem doubtful. Nor is a banker negligent in collecting by reason only of his failure to concern himself with absence of, or irregularity in, indorsement of an instrument[10]. As these documents are capable of being effectively crossed[11], the banker paying in good faith and without negligence, and in accordance with the crossing, would be protected[12].

Where a banker in good faith and in the ordinary course of business pays a document issued by his customer which, though not a bill of exchange, is intended to enable a person to obtain payment from him of the sum mentioned in the document, he does not, in doing so, incur any liability by reason only of the absence of, or irregularity in, indorsement, and the payment discharges the instrument[13]. Forgery of indorsement is probably irrelevant except in cases in which the banker has demanded an indorsement as a pre-requisite to payment[14]. The signature to a receipt is probably not an indorsement and, where the receipt is not signed by the payee, the banker has paid away his customer's money without authority, and cannot debit him.

Where documents are made payable by the banker[15] conditionally on presentation within a limited time[16], it is a matter of doubt whether the banker is protected if he pays them on a forged indorsement.

It is usual for bankers to take indemnities from customers with regard to paying these documents, which, not being cheques, they are under no primary obligation to honour.

1 To disqualify the instrument from being a cheque, the condition must be a condition between drawer and banker, and not merely between drawer and payee: Roberts & Co v Marsh [1915] 1 KB 42, CA. Cf PARA 899.

By the Revenue Act 1883 s 17 (repealed), Her Majesty's Paymaster General and the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer were deemed to be bankers, and the public officers drawing on them were deemed to be customers: see now the Cheques Act 1957 s 4(2)(c); and PARA 882. 6 The crossed cheques provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 apply to such documents by virtue of the Cheques Act 1957 s 5 (replacing the Revenue Act 1883 s 17). The provisions so applied are the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 76–81 and the Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1) (replacing the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82): see PARA 880. 9 Both in Bavins, Jnr and Sims v London and South Western Bank Ltd [1900] 1 QB 270, CA, and in Capital and Counties Bank Ltd v Gordon [1903] AC 240, HL, the documents were taken from a third party, and no objection on this ground appears in the arguments or judgments. 899. Cheques with receipt attached. To conform with the definition in the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[1], a cheque which a banker is bound to honour, must be an unconditional order in writing[2]. By a narrow but appreciable distinction, however, a condition, such as the signing of a receipt, imposed by the instrument on the holder and not addressed to the banker, that is, the drawee, does not destroy its character as a cheque[3]. Nevertheless a banker would probably refuse to pay such a document unless the receipt was duly signed[4]. Signature to the receipt is probably not an indorsement[5], and it would seem that such signature would not give the banker protection under the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[6] if it proved to be a forgery. In other respects such instruments may be dealt with in the same manner as cheques.

900. Dividend warrants. A banker's duties, liabilities and protection with regard to dividend warrants, which are strictly in cheque form, are the same as they are with regard to other cheques. For example, dividend warrants, payment of which is made conditional on signature and production of an annexed receipt or on presentation within a specified period[1], are not cheques[2], but they are treated in the same category as cheques vis-à-vis the banker paying or collecting if they are documents issued by a customer which, though not bills of exchange, are intended to enable a person to obtain payment from that banker of the sum mentioned in them[3].

The rules as to presentation and notice of dishonour applicable to cheques are not binding in the case of those dividend warrants which are not cheques. It is, however, the duty of the banker to present them in reasonable time and return them to the customer if not paid on presentation.

The crossed cheques provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[4] apply to dividend warrants[5], if they are within the category laid down in the Cheques Act 1957[6].

A forged indorsement or a 'not negotiable' or 'account payee' crossing precludes the banker from setting up an independent title[7]. Whether he may do so in other cases, or is justified in taking dividend warrants for collection from anyone other than the payee, depends on the negotiability of a dividend warrant, which has never been judicially recognised[8]. Where the amount of a dividend warrant has been received in circumstances constituting conversion of the document, the damages recoverable by the true owner would be the face value, independent of any question of negotiability[9].

Possibly a custom of merchants could be proved at the present day making dividend warrants negotiable if payable to bearer or order. The Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 97(3)(d) (which saves the validity of any usage relating to dividend warrants or their indorsement) is not sufficient to confer negotiability. See also PARA 1619.

901. Interest warrants. The crossed cheques provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882[1] were held to apply to warrants for the payment of interest on 3½ per cent War Loan[2]. The decision goes no further, and ordinary interest warrants (for example, for the payment of interest on debenture stock) drawn by a customer on a banker are either cheques or orders on a banker issued by the customer[3].

1 Ie the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 76–81 and the Cheques Act 1957 s 4(1) (replacing the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 82): see PARA 880. The crossed cheques provisions apply to interest warrants by virtue of the Cheques Act 1957 s 5. See also notes 2–3.
2 See Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 95 (which extends the crossed cheques provisions to warrants for the payment of 'dividend'). See also Slingsby v Westminster Bank Ltd [1931] 1 KB 173, in which it was held that a warrant for interest on 5 per cent War Stock 1929–47 was a dividend warrant within the meaning of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 95 and also a cheque. See also PARA 1619. The stock was regulated by special legislation whereby payments on this security were designated 'dividends'. Warrants paying savings bank annuities sent by post are deemed to be cheques within the meaning of any enactment relating to cheques: see the Government Annuities Act 1929 s 59(1), (2). Certain regulations expressly provide that the crossed cheques provisions apply to warrants issued under the regulations as if the warrants were cheques: see eg the Savings Certificates Regulations 1991, SI 1991/1031, reg 7(2); and the Premium Savings Bonds Regulations 1972, SI 1972/765, reg 8(2).
3 As to orders on bankers issued by the customer see the Cheques Act 1957 ss 1(2)(a), 4(2)(b); and PARAS 882, 898. Whether the provisions of the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 ss 95, 97(3)(d) (see PARA 900) extend to warrants for the payment of fixed interest or are confined to dividend warrants strictly so termed is uncertain. In practice, interest warrants, whether cheques or not, are often treated in the same manner as dividend warrants; and in any event, both paying and collecting bankers are protected by the Cheques Act 1957 ss 1(2)(a), 4(2)(b): see PARA 882.

902. Travellers' cheques. Travellers' cheques, used to enable travellers to obtain money abroad, take many forms; in appearance they resemble cheques, but they may not have the essential attributes of a cheque. Some are drawn by the issuing banker, others by the person to whom they are issued, the place for the name of the payee in most cases being left blank. The grantee is required to sign them as soon as they are issued to him, and it is a condition of payment by the payer who fills in his own name as payee, that the grantee signs again in the presence of the payer so that the latter may compare the grantee's signature. The legal nature of any type of travellers' cheques has not been considered in any reported case in England[1].

Where a contract contains an express term obliging a bank to refund the value of lost or stolen travellers' cheques, neither the fact of recklessness or of want of care by the purchaser, nor the bank's belief in their existence, constitutes grounds for refusing to make the refunds[2].

1 In Emerson v American Express Co 90 A 2d 236 (1950), the Municipal Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia held that, when countersigned, travellers' cheques of the defendant company were fully negotiable; that the lack of a named payee did not render them incomplete in the hands of a subsequent holder for value; and that the beneficiary in countersigning other than in the presence of the paying agents was in breach of his contract with the issuers.

903. Cheque guarantee cards. A cheque guarantee card is a card issued by a bank to its customer for use in conjunction with cheques drawn by him. The issuing bank undertakes[1] to the payee that payment of the drawer's cheques will be honoured subject to the fulfilment of specified conditions.

The conditions are normally that:

(1) the cheque is in settlement of one transaction only not exceeding the specified limit;

(2) the cheque is drawn on one of the bank's forms bearing the code number appearing on the cheque guarantee card;

(3) the cheque is dated before the date on which the cheque guarantee card expires;

(4) the cheque is signed in the presence of the payee, the drawer's signature corresponding with that on the cheque guarantee card;

(5) the number of the card is written on the back of the drawer's cheque by the payee.

On issuing the card, the issuing bank stipulates that the customer may not countermand payment of a cheque drawn in conjunction with the card[2].

1 'By exhibiting to the payee a cheque card containing the undertaking by the bank to honour cheques drawn in compliance with the conditions indorsed on the back, and drawing the cheque accordingly, the drawer represents to the payee that he has actual authority from the bank to make a contract with the payee on the bank's behalf that it will honour the cheque on presentment for payment': Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles [1977] AC 177 at 182, [1977] 3 All ER 112 at 114, HL, per Lord Diplock. The description 'cheque guarantee card' is a misnomer as the obligation assumed by the bank is not a secondary obligation dependent on default by the customer tendering the card but a separate and independent obligation: First Sport Ltd v Barclays Bank plc [1993] 3 All ER 789 at 795, [1993] 1 WLR 1229 at 1236, CA, per Evans LJ.

2 'The obligation undertaken by the bank to the supplier, which it enters into through the agency of its customer when he uses the bank card, is not to dishonour the cheque on presentation for want of funds in the account, so that it is obliged if necessary to advance moneys to the customer to meet it': Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1987] Ch 150 at 166, [1986] 3 All ER 289 at 301 per Millett J; on appeal: [1989] Ch 497, [1988] 3 All ER 702, CA. See also R v Kassim [1992] 1 AC 9, [1991] 3 All ER 713, HL.

904. Credit cards and charge cards. The normal features of credit card and charge card transactions[1] are:

(1) there is an underlying contractual scheme which pre-dates the individual contracts of sale whereby the supplier agrees to accept the credit card in payment of the price of the goods bought, and the purchaser is entitled to use the credit card to commit the card company to pay the supplier;

(2) the underlying scheme is established by two separate contracts, namely: (a) a contract between the card company and the seller, whereby the seller agrees to accept payment by use of the card from anyone holding the card and the card company agrees to pay to the supplier the price of the goods supplied less a discount; and (b) a contract between the card company and the card holder, whereby the card holder is provided with a card enabling him to pay the price by its use in return for agreeing to pay the card company the full amount of the price charged by the supplier;

(3) the underlying scheme is designed primarily for use in over-the-counter sales, that is to say sales where the only connection between a particular seller and a particular buyer is one sale;

(4) the actual sale and purchase of the commodity is the subject of a third bilateral contract made between the buyer and seller; in the majority of cases this sale contract will be an oral, over-the-counter sale, and tendering and acceptance of the credit card in payment is made on the tacit assumption that the legal consequences will be regulated by the separate underlying contractual obligations between the seller and the card company and the buyer and the card company;

(5) the card does not carry the address of the card holder and the supplier will have no record of his address; therefore the seller has no obvious means of tracing the purchaser save through the card company[2].

Credit cards have come to be regarded as substitutes for cash; they are frequently referred to as 'plastic money'[3].

A card scheme provides advantages to both seller and buyer: the seller is able to attract custom by agreeing to accept credit card payment; and the buyer, by using the card, minimises the need to carry cash and obtains at least a period of free credit during the period until payment to the card company is due[4].

1 The practical difference between a credit card and a charge card is that a credit card agreement normally entitles the card holder to extended credit, subject to repayment of a minimum amount specified in the statement of account, whereas a charge card agreement normally requires the card holder to pay the total amount within a specified period. As to the prohibition of restrictive agreements in the supply of credit card services see the Credit Cards (Merchant Acquisition) Order 1990, SI 1990/2158 (amended by SI 2000/2031); and the Credit Cards (Price Discrimination) Order 1990, SI 1990/2159 (amended by SI 2000/2031). See also the Price Indications (Method of Payment) Regulations 1991, SI 1991/199, which set out requirements for the indication of prices of certain goods where different prices are charged for payment by different methods.

905. Payment by credit card or charge card. There is no general principle of law that, whenever a method of payment is adopted which involves a risk of non-payment by a third party, there is a presumption that the acceptance of payment through a third party is conditional upon the third party making the payment, and that, if he does not pay, the original obligation of the purchaser remains[1].

Whether the seller's acceptance of payment by a credit card or charge card is conditional or absolute payment depends on the terms of the agreement between the parties, and, in the absence of express agreement, the correct approach in such a case is that the court should seek to infer from the parties' conduct and the surrounding circumstances what is the fair term to imply[2].

The following factors, if present, point clearly to a conclusion that, subject to any special features of a particular card scheme, payment by card is unconditional payment of the price:

(1) the card holder's knowledge that, if he signs a voucher, the seller will be entitled to receive payment which would discharge his liability for the price;

(2) the card holder's knowledge that the card-issuing company will deduct commission in paying the seller;

(3) the seller's knowledge that, on signing the voucher, the card holder renders himself liable to the card company to pay to it the price;

(4) the underlying assumption of the buyer and seller in entering into their respective contracts with the card company before entering into the contract of sale that, on completion of a sale, the parties' future rights and obligations will be regulated by those underlying contracts;

(5) the fact that the seller has no record of the address of the customer and no ready means of tracing him[3].

The following additional factors, if present, point the same way:

(a) the existence of a guarantee of the card company's obligations to the seller;

(b) the fact, if neither the seller nor the buyer envisages that the buyer/card holder will have to pay twice (once to the seller and once to the card company), that, under the terms of the agreement between the card holder and the card company, the card holder may be required to pay the card company even though the card company has not paid the seller[4].

A conclusion that payment by card is absolute accords with the popular perception of the role of credit cards in modern retail trade as 'plastic money'[5].

Whether payment by the use of a cheque guarantee card[6] is to be analysed in the same way as payment by credit card or charge card is undecided[7].

5 Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1989] Ch 497 at 517, [1988] 3 All ER 702 at 711, CA, per Sir Nicolas Browne-Wilkinson V-C.

6 Where a buyer uses a cheque guarantee card, the obligation undertaken by the bank to the supplier, which it enters into through the agency of its customer when he uses the card, is not to dishonour the cheque, if drawn for a sum less than a specified amount, for want of funds in the account: see Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1987] Ch 150 at 166, [1986] 3 All ER 289 at 301; on appeal [1989] Ch 497, [1988] 3 All ER 702, CA. See also note 7.

7 In Re Charge Card Services Ltd [1987] Ch 150 at 166, [1986] 3 All ER 289 at 301–302, Millett J stated obiter that the presumption that the giving of a cheque operates as a conditional payment only would not be displaced merely by the fact that the cheque is accompanied by a bank card; on appeal [1989] Ch 497 at 517, [1988] 3 All ER 702 at 711, CA, per Sir Nicolas Browne-Wilkinson V-C, this point was expressly left open.

(viii) Electronic Funds Transfer

906. Electronic funds transfer. Payment by electronic funds transfer (EFT) is now very common, although there is no universally accepted legal definition[1]. There are two categories of EFT systems: (1) non-consumer activated systems[2]; and (2) consumer activated systems[3]. The main consumer activated systems are automated teller machines (ATMs) and electronic funds transfer at point of sale (EFTPOS). A customer may use an ATM to obtain cash, check an account balance, request a statement or make a deposit[4]. EFTPOS allows payment to be made for goods and services by the electronic transfer of funds from the customer's account to the supplier's account[5].

There is no statutory regime in the United Kingdom governing the electronic transfer of funds and instead the general law of contract and agency must be invoked[6]. Banks and building societies have a code of conduct set out in the Banking Code (1 March 2005) and the Business Banking Code (1 March 2005), covering matters such as the issue of cards and personal identification numbers, security of cards, lost or stolen cards and customer complaints; but compliance with this is voluntary[7].

Cross-border credit transfers within the European Economic Area are, subject to various conditions, governed by regulations[8]. The provision of cross-border payment services will be subjected to further regulation when the EU Payment Services Directive is implemented towards the end of 2009[9].

1 In the United States, the Electronic Fund Transfer Act 1978 defines EFT as 'any transfer of funds, other than a transaction originated by check, draft, or similar paper instrument, which is initiated through an electronic terminal, telephonic instrument, or computer or magnetic tape so as to order, instruct, or authorise a financial institution to debit or credit an account'. Cf the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) which defines EFT as 'a funds transfer in which one or more of the steps in the process that were previously done by paper-based techniques are now done by electronic techniques': see UNCITRAL, Legal Guide on Electronic Funds Transfers (1987, United Nations, New York). For a full discussion of electronic funds transfer see Paget's Law of Banking (12th Edn, 2003) ch 17. In particular see R v Preddy [1996] AC 815, [1996] 3 All ER 481, HL; R v Williams [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 362, [2001] Crim LR 253, [2000] All ER (D) 1393, CA.

2 Non-consumer activated systems are those in which the bank selects and activates the system, eg the Clearing House Automated Payments System (CHAPS).

3 Consumer activated systems are those in which the consumer selects and activates the system, eg cash-dispensers, automated teller machines, tele-shopping and home banking.

4 To obtain access to an ATM, the bank's customer is issued with a plastic card with a magnetic strip, together with a four-digit personal identification number (PIN). The card must be inserted into the ATM, and the PIN must be entered. Once the PIN has been verified, the customer may select the function he requires and the card is returned to him on completion.

5 In the case of a retail sale, the customer presents the seller with a plastic EFTPOS debit card which has information relating to the customer's bank account encoded in a magnetic stripe on the back. The usual practice has been for the seller to swipe the card through a card reader and enter the amount. A voucher is issued for the customer to sign and the seller checks that this corresponds with the signature on the back of the card. The signature acts as the customer's mandate to his bank to debit his account and credit the seller's account and a message to this effect is transmitted via an EFTPOS network to the customer's bank and the seller's bank. A new system, known as 'chip and PIN', has been introduced, which enables the customer to enter his PIN number onto a pad instead of signing a voucher. As to the use of credit cards see PARA 904.

6 See AGENCY; CONTRACT. Principles of tort, restitution, property law, equity and criminal law may also be relevant.

7 The banks and building societies must also conform to the requirements of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 and the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2083: see CONSUMER CREDIT; CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 820 et seq. As to the extent to which the courts may take cognisance of the Banking codes see Barclays Bank plc v O'Brien [1994] 1 AC 180, [1993] 4 All ER 417, HL. At the date at which this volume states the law, there is website setting out the Banking Code and supplying other relevant information: see www.bankingcode.org.uk.

8 See the Cross-Border Credit Transfers Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1876 (amended by SI 2000/2952, SI 2002/765, SI 2003/2066, SI 2003/3075; SI 2007/108). The regulations lay down certain standard conditions for cross-border credit transfers not exceeding 50,000 euros or its equivalent in another currency of a state within the EEA. A cross-border credit transfer is defined as a transaction or series of transactions carried out as a result of instructions given directly to an institution in one EEA state, the purpose of which is to make available to the ultimate recipient of the funds transferred at an institution in another EEA state an amount in euros or another currency of an EEA state. The regulations (1) set out the minimum information which must be made available to the actual and prospective customers of an institution which participates in the carrying out of cross-border credit transfers, and which must be given by an institution to customers on whose behalf it has carried out such a transfer; (2) enable a customer to seek undertakings regarding the time it will take to carry out a transfer and the charges to be made in connection therewith; (3) lay down maximum periods for the carrying out of a transfer, where there is no time limit agreed between a customer and the institution, and for payment of compensation where a transfer is completed late, (4) make provision regarding charging for transfers; and (5) make provision for the recovery of sums deducted from the amount transferred in contravention of the customer's instructions.

9 The proposed directive introduces the concept of a 'payment institution', which will be authorised to participate in the payments business but will not be permitted to accept deposits: see further PARA 1399.

(ix) Bankers' Books; Production in Evidence, Inspection, etc

907. Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879. The statutory privileges offered by the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[1] extend to banks and bankers within the meaning of the Act, that is: (1) deposit takers[2]; and (2) the National Savings Bank[3]. The Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 does not apply to the Bank of England[4], except in so far as it is applied to the Bank for particular purposes.

The provisions of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 apply for the purpose of proving any entry in the stock registers as if the Registrar were a bank and a banker[5], and as if such entry or, where the information recorded in the register is not in readable form and is later transcribed into readable form, the transcribed version of such an entry, were an entry in a banker's book[6].

1 See PARA 908.

2 'Deposit taker' means: (1) a person who has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40–55) (see PARA 348 et seq) to accept deposits; or (2) an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in Sch 3 para 5(b) which has permission under Sch 3 para 15 (as a result of qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 para 12(1)) to accept deposits or other repayable funds from the public (see PARA 315): Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 9(1A) (s 9(1A)–(1C) added by SI 2001/3649). A person is not a deposit-taker if he has permission to accept deposits only for the purpose of carrying on another regulated activity in accordance with that permission: Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 9(1B) (as so added). The provisions of s 9(1A), (1B) must be read with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22, any relevant order under that provision, and Sch 2 (see PARA 84 et seq): Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 9(1C) (as so added).

3 Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 9(1) (substituted by the Banking Act 1979 Sch 6 Pt I para 1; and amended by the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 Sch 4; SI 2001/1149; and SI 2001/3649). As to the National Savings Bank see PARA 810 et seq.

4 R v Lewis [1955] Crim LR 374, Bow St Magistrates' Ct.

5 See heads (1) and (2) in the text.

6 Government Stock Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1611, reg 7(7). See PARA 807. Expressions in the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 relating to 'bankers' books' include ledgers, day books, cash books, account books and other records used in the ordinary business of the bank, whether those records are in written form or are kept on microfilm, magnetic tape or any other form of mechanical or electronic data retrieval mechanism: s 9(2) (substituted by the Banking Act 1979 Sch 6 Pt I para 1). The words 'other records' in the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 must be construed ejusdem generis with 'ledgers, day books, cash books and account books'; assorted bundles of cheques and paying-in slips are not 'other records' within the meaning of the Act: Williams v Williams [1988] QB 161 at 168, [1987] 3 All ER 257 at 261, CA, per Sir John Donaldson MR. The expression 'used in the ordinary business' does not mean that the books must be in use every day; it is sufficient if the banker keeps a book to refer to if necessary: Idiots' Asylum v Handysides (1906) 22 TLR 573, CA. As to the inspection of documents not forming part of a banker's books see Re Howglen Ltd [2001] 1 All ER 376.

908. Copies of entries as evidence. In all legal proceedings[1], a copy of any entry in a banker's books[2] is to be received as prima facie evidence of such entry[3], and of the matters, transactions and accounts recorded in it[4]. A copy of an entry in a banker's books may not, however, be so received in evidence unless it is first proved that the book was at the time of the making of the entry one of the ordinary books of the bank, that the entry was made in the usual and ordinary course of business, and that the book is in the custody or control of the bank[5], or of the successors to the bank in whose custody or control it was when the entry was made[6]; and such proof may be given by a partner or officer of the bank, and may be given orally or by an affidavit sworn before any commissioner or person authorised to take affidavits[7]. It must also be proved that the copy has been examined with the original entry and is correct; and such proof must be given by some person who has examined the copy with the original entry, and may likewise be given either orally or by an affidavit[8].

Although cheques and paying-in slips constitute part of a bank's records used in the ordinary course of its business, the adding of an individual cheque or paying-in slip to a bundle of cheques or paying-in slips does not constitute the making of an entry in those records[9]. A microfilm recording the payment of cheques by photographing the name of the payee appears to be an entry in a banker's books within the meaning of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[10].

A letter from a banker to his customer is not a banker's book[11].

1 'Legal proceeding' for this purpose means any civil or criminal proceeding or inquiry in which evidence is or may be given, and includes: (1) an arbitration (see generally ARBITRATION); (2) an application to, or an inquiry or other proceeding before, the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal (see SOLICITORS vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 421); and (3) an investigation, consideration or determination of a complaint by a member of the panel of ombudsmen for the purposes of the ombudsman scheme within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (see PARA 575 et seq): Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 10 (definition amended by SI 2001/3649). As to the application of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 in service disciplinary proceedings and standing civilian courts see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 487.

2 As to the meaning of 'bankers' books' see PARA 907 note 6.

3 Entries in bankers' books under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 are prima facie evidence against the world: London and Westminster Bank v Button (1907) 51 Sol Jo 466. The Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 makes copies of such entries evidence against anyone; thus the entries in a defendant's bankers' books are made evidence against the claimant: see Harding v Williams (1880) 14 ChD 197.

909. Production of originals. No banker or officer of a bank[1], in any legal proceeding[2] to which the bank is not a party, may be compelled to produce any banker's book[3] the contents of which can be proved[4], or to appear as a witness to prove the matters, transactions and accounts recorded in it, unless by order of a judge made for special cause[5].

However, to obtain the benefit of this relief from attendance and production, the banker or officer must have furnished, or have been willing to furnish, verified copies of the required entries; and, if he has not done so, the books may still be obtained by order of the court[6].

A bank which is a party to litigation is under the ordinary duty to give disclosure of relevant documents and to allow inspection[7].

(x) Secrecy, References and Advice

910. Obligation of secrecy. It is an implied term of the contract between a banker and his customer that the banker will not divulge to third persons, without the express or implied consent of the customer, either the state of the customer's account, or any of his transactions with the bank or any information relating to the customer acquired through the keeping of his account, unless the banker is compelled to do so by order of a court, or the circumstances give rise to a public duty of disclosure or the protection of the banker's own interests requires it[1].

If a bank chooses to organise its business through a corporate structure involving separate companies, disclosure by one such company to another may constitute a breach of the duty of secrecy[2].

1 Tournier v National Provincial and Union Bank of England [1924] 1 KB 461, CA. This has been recognised by the legislature in conferring upon bankers privilege from disclosure under certain statutes: see further PARA 916 et seq.

As to disclosure pursuant to a public duty see Libyan Arab Foreign Bank v Bankers Trust Co [1989] QB 728, [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep 259. As to the public interest in uncovering fraud overriding the banker's duty of confidentiality see Pharaon v Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (in liquidation) (Price Waterhouse (a firm) intervening) [1998] 4 All ER 455, 142 Sol Jo LB 251.

The exceptions to the duty of secrecy which were recognised in Tournier v National Provincial and Union Bank of England above have been accepted in numerous subsequent cases, including: Re State of Norway's Application [1987] QB 433, [1989] 1 All ER 661, CA (affd [1990] AC 723, [1989] 1 All ER 745, HL); Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd [1992] 4 All ER 409, [1989] 1 WLR 1340, CA; Bank of Tokyo Ltd v Karoon [1987] AC 45n, [1986] 3 All ER 468, CA; Bhogal v Punjab National Bank [1988] 2 All ER 296, CA. The distinction can be made between a duty of loyalty, which ends upon the termination of the contractual relationship, and a duty of confidentiality, which continues beyond that relationship: MacLean v Arklow Investments [2000] 1 WLR 594, PC.

911. Order for inspection under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879. The Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 provides that any party to a legal proceeding[1] may apply to the court or a judge for an order that the applicant be at liberty to inspect and take copies of any entries in a banker's book[2] for the purposes of such proceeding[3].

The main object of these provisions is to enable evidence to be procured and given[4], and to relieve bankers from the necessity of attending and producing their books[5]. They enable a party, who formerly had the right to issue a subpoena duces tecum to compel bankers to produce their books and to attend and be examined on them, to obtain an order for leave to inspect and take copies of the books[6]. They do not give any new power of disclosure[7], or alter the principles of law or the practice with regard to disclosure[8], or take away any previously existing ground of privilege[9]. Nor do they enable a party to obtain disclosure, before the trial, of entries which would be privileged or protected from production, or which are, or are sworn to be, irrelevant[10], or which are sworn to tend to incriminate[11], or which are not the subject of disclosure apart from the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[12]. Where, therefore, a party swears that the entries sought to be inspected are irrelevant, his affidavit is conclusive, and no order for inspection should be made before the trial[13].

The power to order inspection is a discretionary power[14], and will be exercised with great caution[15], and on sufficient grounds only[16]; and the order, if made, should be limited to relevant entries[17]. The order will be made only where the entries of which inspection is sought will be admissible in evidence at the trial[18].

The fact that the banker's book containing the relevant entry is in the list of documents served by the other party does not preclude the obtaining of an order for inspection, and in a fit case an order will be made[19]. An order for inspection may be made against a bank which is a defendant to a tracing claim[20].

Where a banker's book is in the possession, custody or power of a party to litigation and that party is in default of a court order requiring him to give disclosure of the documents, a bank which holds the documents as his agent may be required to disclose them[21].

3 Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 7; Re Marshfield, Marshfield v Hutchings (1886) 32 ChD 499. The order may be made on a bank in Scotland or Northern Ireland (Kissam v Link [1896] 1 QB 574, CA), and may be made by a magistrate (R v Kinghorn [1908] 2 KB 949). 'Court' means the court, judge, arbitrator, persons or person before whom a legal proceeding is held or taken; and 'judge' means, in England, a judge of the High Court, although a judge assigned to a county court district or acting as a judge so assigned may with respect to any proceedings in a county court exercise the powers of a judge under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879: s 10 (definition amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1898). 912. Order for inspection of accounts of non-parties. There is jurisdiction to order inspection under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[1] of accounts of non-parties to the litigation[2]. Except where the account sought to be inspected is in form or substance really the account of a party to the litigation or is kept on his behalf, so that the entries in it would be evidence against him at trial[3], the power to order such inspection will be exercised only in exceptional circumstances[4], such as where the evidence and fruits of crime and fraud might otherwise disappear[5]. Notice of the application should be given to the account holder[6] and preferably also the bank[7].

Where such an order is made without notice, the non-party in respect of whose account it is made, or that party's bank, may apply to have the order set aside without being joined as a party to the action[8].

In practice, where such circumstances exist, the applicant is likely to be able to obtain relief under the court's jurisdiction to grant disclosure orders in aid of a tracing claim: see PARA 915. It may also be possible to join the bank as a party to the proceedings by claiming declaratory relief and/or an order for repayment of moneys paid under a mistake: see eg A v C [1981] QB 956n, [1980] 2 All ER 347, CA.

913. Procedure on the application. In the High Court an order for permission to inspect and take copies[1] may be made either with or without summoning the bank or any other party, and must be served on the bank three clear days before the order is to be obeyed, unless the court or judge otherwise directs[2]. In ordinary cases, the application should be supported by an affidavit showing what entries it is desired to inspect and the materiality of the inspection[3], and that the application is made bona fide. An affidavit is not, however, essential[4]. The party whose account is sought to be inspected may oppose the application on any ground on which inspection of ordinary documents could be resisted[5].

The costs of the application, and of anything done or to be done under the order, are in the court's discretion[6]. Where the whole or any part of the costs have been occasioned by any default or delay on the bank's part, they may be ordered to be paid by the bank to any party, any such order against a bank being enforceable as if the bank were a party to the proceeding[7].

7 Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879 s 8.

914. Disclosure order having extra-territorial effect. Save in exceptional circumstances[1], the court will not make an order under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[2] or require the production by a non-party of documents outside the jurisdiction concerning business which it has transacted outside the jurisdiction, especially where the non-party is a foreign bank[3]. The principle is that a state should refrain from demanding obedience to its sovereign authority by foreigners in respect of their conduct outside the jurisdiction[4]. In accordance with this principle, the court will generally not give effect to an order made in foreign proceedings against a non-party bank requiring production of documents relating to accounts maintained within the jurisdiction[5].

The fact that the evidence sought to be obtained may be obtained by the issue of letters of request to a foreign court[6], or by an application to a foreign court, generally weighs heavily against the court's making an extra-territorial order[7].

915. Disclosure order in aid of tracing claims etc. If a person through no fault of his own becomes involved in the tortious acts of others so as to facilitate their wrong-doing, he may incur no personal liability but he comes under a duty to assist the person who has been wronged by giving him full information and disclosing the identity of the wrong-doers[1]. Where there are grounds for thinking that money in a bank has been obtained by a customer's wrong-doing and belongs in equity to the claimant, the court has jurisdiction to order the bank to disclose documents relating to the money[2]. The documents which may be ordered to be disclosed are not limited to those within the provisions[3] of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[4]. The claimant must give an undertaking in damages to the bank and must pay all and any expenses to which the bank is put in making the disclosure[5]. The international jurisdictional limits of this principle are the same as those for an order under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act 1879[6].

916. Disclosure order under the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975. Where an application is made to the High Court, and the court is satisfied: (1) that the application is made in pursuance of a request issued by or on behalf of a court or tribunal (the 'requesting court') exercising jurisdiction in any other part of the United Kingdom or in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom; and (2) that the evidence to which the application relates is to be obtained for the purposes of civil proceedings which either have been instituted before the requesting court or whose institution before that court is contemplated, the court has power by order to make such provision for obtaining evidence in the part of the United Kingdom in which it exercises jurisdiction as may appear to it to be appropriate for the purpose of giving effect to the request in pursuance of which the application is made[1]. Where the evidence sought to be obtained is evidence from a banker as to the affairs of a customer, the court, in exercising its discretion, must carry out a balancing exercise: in the scales on one side must be placed the desirable policy of assisting a foreign court, and, on the other, the opposing principle that the court will give great weight to the desirability of upholding the recognised duty of confidence[2].

1 See the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975 ss 1, 2(1); and EVIDENCE vol 17(1) (Reissue) PARAS 1051, 1054. The court's jurisdiction is limited by s 2(3), (4): see EVIDENCE vol 17(1) (Reissue) PARA 1054. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3.

917. Disclosure in insolvency proceedings. Where: (1) an administration order is made in relation to a company; (2) an administrative receiver is appointed; (3) the company goes into liquidation; or (4) a provisional liquidator is appointed, the court may, on the application of the relevant office-holder, summon to appear before it (inter alios): (a) any person known or suspected to have in his possession any property of the company or supposed to be indebted to the company; or (b) any person whom the court thinks capable of giving information concerning the promotion, formation, business, dealings, affairs or property of the company[1]. The court may require any such person to submit an affidavit to the court containing an account of his dealings with the company or to produce any books, papers or other records in his possession or under his control relating to the company or the matters mentioned in head (b) above[2].

At any time after a bankruptcy order has been made the court may, on the application of the official receiver or the trustee of the bankrupt's estate, summon to appear before it (inter alios): (i) any person known or believed to have any property comprised in the bankrupt's estate in his possession or to be indebted to the bankrupt; (ii) any person appearing to the court to be able to give information concerning the bankrupt or the bankrupt's dealings, affairs or property[3]. The court may require any such person to submit an affidavit to the court containing an account of his dealings with the bankrupt or to produce any documents in his possession or under his control relating to the bankrupt or the bankrupt's dealings, affairs or property[4].

918. Disclosure to investigators etc. When inspectors are appointed to investigate the affairs of a company, it is the duty of all officers and agents[1] of the company, and of all officers and agents of any other body corporate which is or at any relevant time has been the company's subsidiary or holding company, or a subsidiary of its holding company or a holding company of its subsidiary, and which is being investigated: (1) to produce to the inspectors all documents of or relating to the company or, as the case may be, the other body corporate which are in their custody or power; (2) to attend before the inspectors when required to do so; and (3) otherwise to give the inspectors all assistance in connection with the investigation which they are reasonably able to give[2].

In connection with its supervisory and enforcement functions, the Financial Services Authority may require a person authorised to carry on financial services, or a person connected with such a person, to provide specified information or documents in such form as the Authority requires[3]. The Authority may also require authorised persons to provide a report by a skilled person on any matter about which the Authority could require the provision of information or documents[4]. The Authority has power to appoint investigators into the business of authorised persons[5]. The Authority and its investigators may apply for a warrant to search for and seize documents or information[6].

1 In the Companies Act 1985 s 434, 'agents', in relation to a company or other body corporate, includes its bankers, whether they are or are not officers of the company or other body corporate: see s 434(4).
2 See the Companies Act 1985 s 434(1); and COMPANIES vol 7(2) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1672. These provisions apply also to an investigation into the ownership of a company under s 442: see s 443(1); and COMPANIES vol 7(2) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1674. As to the Secretary of State's power to require documents and information see s 447; and COMPANIES vol 7(2) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1679. Where the Secretary of State carries out an investigation under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 218(4) (prosecution of delinquent officers and members of the company: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1015), he may for the purposes of his investigation exercise any of the powers which are exercisable by inspectors appointed under the Companies Act 1985 s 431 or s 432: see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 218(5); and see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1016. 919. Disclosure to HM Revenue and Customs. A bank may be required to give information to the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs as to the receipt of income from United Kingdom securities by persons other than the holders or from United Kingdom bearer securities[1]; and to tax inspectors as to interest paid or credited by the bank without deduction of tax[2]. Further, the commissioners may by notice require any person to furnish them within such time as they may direct, not being less than 28 days, with such particulars as they think necessary for the purposes of the tax provisions[3] relating to the transfer of assets abroad[4]. However, a bank is under no obligation to furnish particulars of any ordinary banking transactions between it and a customer carried out in the ordinary course of banking business[5] unless the bank has acted or is acting on behalf of the customer in connection with: (1) the formation or management of any body corporate resident or incorporated outside the United Kingdom which is, or if resident in the United Kingdom would be, a close company but not a trading company; or (2) the creation, or the execution of the trusts, of any settlement by virtue or in consequence of which income becomes payable to a person resident or domiciled outside the United Kingdom[6].

1 See the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 24(1), (2); and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1709. This provision extends to United Kingdom government and commercial securities: see s 24(4). It does not, however, impose on a bank the obligation to disclose particulars where the person beneficially entitled to the income is not resident in the United Kingdom: s 24(3). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 2 note 3. Note that the Inland Revenue merged with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to form Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs: see the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50: see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 900 et seq. See also INCOME TAXATION.

2 See Taxes Management Act 1970 s 17(1); and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1696. This provision applies only to the money received or retained in the United Kingdom: see s 17(4). It extends to the National Savings Bank: s 17(3). As to the National Savings Bank see PARA 810 et seq.

920. Disclosure pursuant to criminal law statutes. The Director of the Serious Fraud Office may by notice in writing require persons who are under investigation or any other person who may have relevant information to answer questions or otherwise furnish information, including documents[1]. A person may not be required to disclose information or produce a document in respect of which he owes an obligation of confidence by virtue of carrying on a banking business unless: (1) the person to whom the obligation is owed consents to the disclosure or production; or (2) the Director of the Serious Fraud Office has authorised the making of the requirement personally, or a member of the Serious Fraud Office designated by the Director for this purpose has done so[2].

A constable may obtain access to specified material for the purposes of a criminal investigation by making an application for an order under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984[3]. A bank has no implied contractual obligation to support the confidentiality of its customers by resisting such an order or by informing a customer that such an order is being sought[4].

921. Bankers' references. With his customer's express or implied consent, a banker is justified in answering inquiries regarding his customer's general position and character put to him by a person contemplating business relations with that customer[1].

However, no claim lies against the banker in respect of any representation or assurance made or given concerning or relating to the character, conduct, credit, ability, trade or dealings of any person[2] made to the intent or purpose that such person may obtain credit, money or goods, unless such representation or assurance is made in writing and signed by the banker[3]. This protection applies to fraudulent misrepresentations[4], and to misrepresentations alleged to give rise to liability under the Misrepresentation Act 1967[5], but it does not apply to negligent misrepresentations[6]. The representation must relate in some way to the creditworthiness of a person[7]. The signature on behalf of a company of its duly authorised agent acting within the scope of his authority is, for this purpose, the signature of the company[8]. A representation made by an individual must be in writing and signed by him, and accordingly no claim lies against a non-signing partner even if he has ratified the act of the signing partner[9].

The making of a credit reference or other representation as to a person may give rise to liability for breach of fiduciary duty[10], or for breach of a common law duty of care[11].

Where the banker may be held responsible, it is immaterial whether he gave the information direct to the person acting on it or to another banker in order that it might be communicated to him[12].

A disclaimer of liability which amounts to a notice which purports to exclude liability for negligence is therefore ineffective unless it satisfies the requirement of reasonableness[13].

922. Advice on investments. Where it is within the scope of a bank's business to advise on financial affairs, it owes a customer to whom it offers such advice or assistance a contractual duty to exercise reasonable skill and care[1]; and it will not avail the bank that it has issued secret instructions not to give such advice[2]. If the customer is advised in a matter in which the bank has conflicting interests, the conflict should be fully disclosed[3].

Where advice is given to one who is not a customer, liability may arise where there exists a fiduciary relationship[4] or a relationship such as to found a common law duty of care[5].

(xi) Letters of Credit; Performance Bonds

A. IN GENERAL

923. Nature of letters of credit. A letter of credit is an undertaking by a bank to pay to the beneficiary of the credit, or to accept and pay drafts drawn by the beneficiary, in accordance with the terms and conditions of the credit. A letter of credit may be addressed: (1) to banks generally, or to all banks within a specified country or territory; or (2) to one or more specified banks. All banks to whom a credit is addressed are known as nominated banks.

A credit may contain an instruction to a bank either merely to advise the beneficiary of the credit, without any commitment, or to add its confirmatory undertaking to it, in which case the beneficiary has the promise of both banks. Where a credit is intended to facilitate trade, it is called a commercial letter of credit[1].

It is often made a condition of a mercantile contract that the buyer is to pay for the goods by means of an irrevocable credit[2], and it is then the buyer's duty to procure that his bank, known as the issuing bank, issues an irrevocable credit in favour of the seller by which the bank undertakes to the seller, either directly or through another bank in the seller's country, to pay or accept drafts drawn upon him for the price of the goods, against the tender by the seller of the shipping documents.

1 As to commercial letters of credit see PARA 924.
2 As to irrevocable credits see further PARA 928.

924. Commercial letters of credit. Where buyer and seller are in different countries, the bank issuing the credit at the instance of a buyer does so usually through a bank in the other country; the authorisation of the issuing bank is addressed to the other bank and instructs it to advise the credit to the beneficiary with or without committing itself by adding its confirmation. The bank issuing the credit is called the issuing bank; the second bank, which advises the beneficiary, is an advising, negotiating, confirming or paying bank according to the role it plays[1].

Commercial letters of credit may be of two types, namely revocable and irrevocable credits[2]. Irrevocable credits may be confirmed or unconfirmed[3]. They may take several forms, but the more common are those by which a banker undertakes to pay against documents of title to goods; or he may engage himself to negotiate drafts accompanied by such documents of title, or to accept drafts drawn under the credit[4]. Credits create a binding contract to accept or pay bills on the specified conditions, enforceable against the bank by a beneficiary who has acted on the faith of it[5]. Similarly, if the credit requests payments to be made or money advanced apart from acceptance of bills[6], and such payments or advances are made to the grantee on production of the letter, the bank becomes liable to the party making them[7]. Where a credit issued pursuant to a cif contract[8] calls for a guarantee by the buyers through their bankers that documents will be taken up on first presentation, such a guarantee may be held to be exactly the same as a letter of credit and so have to be available within a reasonable time before the first date for shipment[9]. Possession of the letter is not sufficient evidence that the person presenting it is the grantee[10].

A credit may be a revolving credit, of which one type is that in which sums drawn may be added to the balance so as to keep the total amount available always up to the permitted figure[11].

1 See PARA 949.
2 See PARA 928.
3 See PARA 933.
4 See Re Barned's Banking Co, Banner and Young v Johnston (1871) LR 5 HL 157. The usual form of import credit consists of an undertaking by the buyer's bank addressed to his foreign correspondent (the paying, negotiating or advising bank) that payment will be made against tender of documents (including usually full set of bills of lading, invoice (in duplicate or
